HERO AND LEANDER.

Two editions of Hero and Leander appeared in 1598. The first edition, containing only Marlowe's portion of the poem, is entitled Hero and Leander. By Christopher Marloe. London, Printed by Adam Islip, for Edward Blunt. 1598. 4to. The title-page of the second edition, which contains the complete poem, is Hero and Leander: Begun by Christopher Marloe; and finished by George Chapman. Ut Nectar, Ingenium. At London, Printed by Felix Kingston, for Paule Linley, and are to be solde in Paules Church-yard, at the signe of the Blacke-bear. 1598. 4to.

Two copies of the second edition were discovered a few years ago at Lamport Hall (the seat of Sir Charles Isham, Bart.) by Mr. Charles Edmonds. The existence of this edition was previously unknown. Later editions are:—

Hero and Leander: Begunne by Christopher Marloe: Whereunto is added the first booke of Lucan translated line for line by the same Author. Ut Nectar, Ingenium. At London Printed for John Flasket, and are to be solde in Paules Church-yard, at the signe of the Blacke-bear. 1600. 4to.

Hero and Leander: Begunne by Christopher Marloe, and finished by George Chapman. Ut Nectar, Ingenium. At London. Imprinted for John Flasket, and are to be sold in Paules Church-yard, at the signe of the blacke Bear. 1606. 4to.

Hero and Leander: Begunne by Christopher Marloe, and finished by George Chapman. Ut Nectar, Ingenium. At London. Imprinted for Ed. Blunt and W. Barret, and are to be sold in Pauls Church-yard, at the signe of the blacke Bear. 1609. 4to.

Hero and Leander: Begunne by Christopher Marloe, and finished by George Chapman. Ut Nectar, Ingenium. London. Printed by W. Stansby for Ed. Blunt and W. Barret, and are to be sold in Pauls Church-yard, at the signe of the Blacke Bear. 1613. 4to.

Hero and Leander: Begun by Christopher Marloe, and finished by George Chapman. Ut Nectar, Ingenium. London, Printed by A. M. for Richard Hawkins: and are to bee sold at his Shop in Chancerie-Lane, neere Sericants Inne. 1629. 4to.

Hero and Leander: Begun by Christopher Marlowe, and finished by George Chapman. Ut Nectar, Ingenium. London: Printed by N. Okes for William Leake, and are to be sold at his shop in Chancery-lane neere the Roules. 1637. 4to.

I have not had an opportunity of seeing the 4tos. of 1598 or the 4to. of 1600. For the text of the Isham copy, I am indebted to the Works of George Chapman: Poems and Minor Translations, 1875. I have examined the texts of eds. 1606, 1613, 1629, 1637; and my friend Mr. C. H. Firth has examined for me the Bodleian copy of ed. 1600, in the margin of which Malone has noted the readings of the first edition.

TO THE RIGHT-WORSHIPFUL SIR THOMAS WALSINGHAM, KNIGHT.

Sir, we think not ourselves discharged of the duty we owe to our friend when we have brought the breathless body to the earth ; for albeit the eye there taketh his ever-farewell of that beloved object, yet the impression of the man that hath been dear unto us, living an after-life in our memory, there putteth us in mind of farther obsequies due unto the deceased ; and namely of the performance of whatsoever we may judge shall make to his living credit and to the effecting of his determinations prevented by the stroke of death. By these meditations (as by an intellectual will) I suppose myself executor to the unhappily deceased author of this poem ; upon whom knowing that in his lifetime you bestowed many kind favours, entertaining parts of reckoning and worth which you found in him with good countenance and liberal affection, I cannot but see so far into the will of him dead, that whatsoever issue of his brain should chance to come abroad, that the first breath it should take might be the gentle air of your liking ; for, since his self had been accustomed thereunto, it would prove more agreeable and thriving to his right children than any other foster countenance whatsoever. At this time seeing that this unfinished tragedy happens under my hands to be imprinted ; of a double duty, the one to yourself, the other to the deceased, I present the same to your most favourable allowance, offering my utmost self now and ever to be ready at your worship's disposing :

EDWARD BLUNT.

HERO AND LEANDER.

THE FIRST SESTIAD.

The Argument¹ of the First Sestiad.

Hero's description and her love's ;
The fane of Venus, where he moves
His worthy love-suit, and attains ;
Whose bliss the wrath of Fates restrains
For Cupid's grace to Mercury :
Which tale the author doth imply.

ON Hellespont, guilty of true love's blood,
In view and opposite two cities stood,
Sea-borderers,² disjoin'd by Neptune's might ;
The one Abydos, the other Sestos hight.
At Sestos Hero dwelt ; Hero the fair,
Whom young Apollo courted for her hair,
And offer'd as a dower his burning throne,
Where she should sit, for men to gaze upon.

¹ The Arguments are by Chapman, who also divided Marlowe's portion of the form into the First and Second Sestiad.

² Eds. 1600, 1606, 1613, "Sea-borders."—Ed. 1598, according to Malone, has "sea-borderers ;" and so eds. 1629, 1637.

The outside of her garments were of lawn,
 The lining purple silk, with gilt stars drawn ; 10
 Her wide sleeves green, and border'd with a grove,
 Where Venus in her naked glory strove
 To please the careless and disdainful eyes
 Of proud Adonis, that before her lies ;
 Her kirtle blue, whereon was many a stain,
 Made with the blood of wretched lovers slain.
 Upon her head she ware ¹ a myrtle wreath,
 From whence her veil reach'd to the ground beneath :
 Her veil was artificial flowers and leaves,
 Whose workmanship both man and beast deceives : 20
 Many would praise the sweet smell as she past,
 When 'twas the odour which her breath forth cast ;
 And there for honey bees have sought in vain,
 And, beat from thence, have lighted there again.
 About her neck hung chains of pebble-stone,
 Which, lighten'd by her neck, like diamonds shone.
 She ware no gloves ; for neither sun nor wind
 Would burn or parch her hands, but, to her mind,
 Or warm or cool them, for they took delight
 To play upon those hands, they were so white. 30
 Buskins of shells, all silver'd, usèd she,
 And branch'd with blushing coral to the knee ;
 Where sparrows perch'd of hollow pearl and gold,
 Such as the world would wonder to behold :
 Those with sweet water oft her handmaid fills,
 Which as she went, would cherup through the bills.

Some say, for her the fairest Cupid pin'd,
And, looking in her face, was strooken blind.
But this is true ; so like was one the other,
As he imagin'd Hero was his mother ; 40
And oftentimes into her bosom flew,
About her naked neck his bare arms threw,
And laid his childish head upon her breast,
And, with still panting rock,¹ there took his rest.
So lovely-fair was Hero, Venus' nun,
As Nature wept, thinking she was undone,
Because she took more from her than she left,
And of such wondrous beauty her bereft :
Therefore, in sign her treasure suffer'd wrack,
Since Hero's time hath half the world been black. 50

Amorous Leander, beautiful and young
(Whose tragedy divine Musæus sung),
Dwelt at Abydos ; since him dwelt there none
For whom succeeding times make² greater moan.
His dangling tresses, that were never shorn,
Had they been cut, and unto Colchos borne,
Would have allur'd the venturous youth of Greece
To hazard more than for the golden fleece.
Fair Cynthia wished his arms might be her Sphere ;
Grief makes her pale, because she moves not
there. 60
His body was as straight as Circe's wand ;
Jove might have sipt out nectar from his hand.

¹ Some eds. have "rockt," which may be the right reading.

² So ed. 1637.—The earlier editions that I have seen read "may."

Even as delicious meat is to the tast,
 So was his neck in touching, and surpast
 The white of Pelops' shoulder: I could tell ye,
 How smooth his breast was, and how white his belly;
 And whose immortal fingers did imprint
 That heavenly path with many a curious dint
 That runs along his back; but my rude pen
 Can hardly blazon forth the loves of men, 70
 Much less of powerful gods: let it suffice
 That my slack Muse sings of Leander's eyes;
 Those orient cheeks and lips, exceeding his
 That leapt into the water for a kiss
 Of his own shadow, and, despising many,
 Died ere he could enjoy the love of any.
 Had wild Hippolytus Leander seen,
 Enamour'd of his beauty had he been:
 His presence made the rudest peasant melt,
 That in the vast uplandish country dwelt; 80
 The barbarous Thracian soldier, mov'd with nought,
 Was mov'd with him, and for his favour sought.
 Some swore he was a maid in man's attire,
 For in his looks were all that men desire,—
 A pleasant-smiling cheek, a speaking eye,
 A brow for love to banquet royally;
 And such as knew he was a man, would say,
 "Leander, thou art made for amorous play:
 Why art thou not in love, and loved of all?
 Though thou be fair, yet be not thine own thrall." 90
 The men of wealthy Sestos every year,
 For his sake whom their goddess held so dear,

Rose-cheek'd¹ Adonis, kept a solemn feast :
 Thither resorted many a wandering guest
 To meet their loves : such as had none at all
 Came lovers home from this great festival ;
 For every street, like to a firmament,
 Glister'd with breathing stars, who, where they went,
 Frighted the melancholy earth, which deem'd
 Eternal heaven to burn, for so it seem'd, 100
 As if another Phaëton had got
 The guidance of the sun's rich chariot.
 But, far above the loveliest, Hero shin'd,
 And stole away th' enchanted gazer's mind ;
 For like sea-nymphs' inveigling harmony,
 So was her beauty to the standers by ;
 Nor that night-wandering, pale, and watery² star
 (When yawning dragons draw her thirling³ car
 From Latmus' mount up to the gloomy sky,
 Where, crown'd with blazing light and majesty, 110
 She proudly sits) more over-rules the flood
 Than she the hearts of those that near her stood.
 Even as when gaudy nymphs pursue the chase,
 Wretched Ixion's shaggy-footed race,
 Incens'd with savage heat, gallop amain
 From steep pine-bearing mountains to the plain,

“Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chace.”

² So Hamlet i. 1—

“The moist star,

Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands.”

³ “Thrilling—tremulously moving.”—Dyce. Perhaps the meaning rather is penetrating—drilling its way through—“the gloomy sky.”

So ran the people forth to gaze upon her,
 And all that view'd her were enamour'd on her :
 And as in fury of a dreadful fight,
 Their fellows being slain or put to flight, 120
 Poor soldiers stand with fear of death dead-strooken,
 So at her presence all surpris'd and tooken,
 Await the sentence of her scornful eyes ;
 He whom she favours lives ; the other dies :
 There might you see one sigh ; another rage ;
 And some, their violent passions to assuage,
 Compile sharp satires ; but, alas, too late !
 For faithful love will never turn to hate ;
 And many, seeing great princes were denied,
 Pin'd as they went, and thinking on her died. 130
 On this feast-day—O cursèd day and hour !—
 Went Hero thorough Sestos, from her tower
 To Venus' temple, where unhappily,
 As after chanc'd, they did each other spy.
 So fair a church as this had Venus none :
 The walls were of discolour'd¹ jasper-stone,
 Wherein was Proteus carved ; and over-head
 A lively vine of green sea-agate spread,
 Where by one hand light-headed Bacchus hung,
 And with the other wine from grapes out-wrung. 140
 Of crystal shining fair the pavement was ;
 The town of Sestos call'd it Venus' glass :
 There might you see the gods, in sundry shapes,
 Committing heady riots, incests, rapes ;

For know, that underneath this radiant flour¹
 Was Danæ's statue in a brazen tower :
 Jove slyly stealing from his sister's bed,
 To dally with Idalian Ganymed,
 And for his love Europa bellowing loud,
 And tumbling with the Rainbow in a cloud ; 150
 Blood-quaffing Mars heaving the iron net
 Which limping Vulcan and his Cyclops set ;
 Love kindling fire, to burn such towns as Troy ;
 Silvanus weeping for the lovely boy
 That now is turned into a cypress-tree,
 Under whose shade the wood-gods love to be.
 And in the midst a silver altar stood :
 There Hero, sacrificing turtles' blood,
 Vailed² to the ground, veiling her eyelids close ;
 And modestly they opened as she rose : 160
 Thence flew Love's arrow with the golden head ;
 And thus Leander was enamourèd.
 Stone-still he stood, and evermore he gaz'd,
 Till with the fire, that from his countenance blaz'd,
 Relenting Hero's gentle heart was strook :
 Such force and virtue hath an amorous look.
 It lies not in our power to love or hate,
 For will in us is over-rul'd by fate.
 When two are stript long ere the course begin,
 We wish that one should lose, the other win ; 170

² Ed. 1600 and later 4tos. "Tail'd." For the coupling of "Vailed" with "veiling," cf. 2. Tamb. v. iii. 6. "pitch their pitchy tents."

And one especially do we affect
 Of two gold ingots, like in each respect :
 The reason no man knows, let it suffice,
 What we behold is censur'd by our eyes.
 Where both deliberate, the love is slight :
 Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight ?¹

He kneel'd ; but unto her devoutly prayed :
 Chaste Hero to herself thus softly said,
 "Were I the saint he worships, I would hear him ;"
 And, as she spake those words, came somewhat near
 him. 180

He started up ; she blushed as one asham'd ;
 Wherewith Leander much more was inflam'd.
 He touch'd her hand ; in touching it she trembled :
 Love deeply grounded hardly is dissembled.
 These lovers parled by the touch of hands :
 True love is mute, and oft amazèd stands.
 Thus while dumb signs their yielding hearts entangled,
 The air with sparks of living fire was spangled ;
 And night,² deep-drenched in misty Acheron,
 Heav'd up her head, and half the world upon 190
 Breath'd darkness forth (dark night is Cupid's day) :
 And now begins Leander to display
 Love's holy fire, with words, with sighs, and tears ;
 Which, like sweet music, enter'd Hero's ears ;

¹ This line is quoted in As you like it, iii. 5:—

"Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw of might,—
 Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight."

² "A periphrasis of Night." Marginal note in ed. 1598.

And yet at every word she turn'd aside
 And always cut him off, as he replied.
 At last, like to a bold sharp sophister,
 With cheerful hope thus he accosted her.
 "Fair creature,¹ let me speak without offence :
 I would my rude words had the influence 200
 To lead thy thoughts as thy fair looks do mine !
 Then shouldst thou be his prisoner, who is thine.
 Be not unkind and fair ; mis-shapen stuff
 Are of behaviour boisterous and rough.
 O, shun me not, but hear me ere you go !
 God knows, I cannot force love as you do :
 My words shall be as spotless as my youth,
 Full of simplicity and naked truth.
 This sacrifice, whose sweet perfume descending
 From Venus' altar, to your footsteps bending, 210
 Doth testify that you exceed her far,
 To whom you offer, and whose nun you are.
 Why should you worship her ? her you surpass
 As much as sparkling diamonds flaring glass.
 A diamond set in lead his worth retains ;
 A heavenly nymph, belov'd of human swains,
 Receives no blemish, but ofttimes more grace ;
 Which makes me hope, although I am but base,
 Base in respect of thee divine and pure,
 Dutiful service may thy love procure ; 220
 And I in duty will excel all other,
 As thou in beauty dost exceed Love's mother.

¹ Lines 199-204, 221-222, are quoted, not quite accurately, by Matthew in Every Man in his Humour, iv. 1.

Nor heaven nor thou were made to gaze upon :
 As heaven preserves all things, so save thou one.
 A stately-builed ship, well rigg'd and tall,
 The ocean maketh more majestic ;
 Why vow'st thou, then, to live in Sestos here,
 Who on Love's seas more glorious wouldst appear ?
 Like untun'd golden strings all women are,
 Which long time lie untouch'd, will harshly jar. 230
 Vessels of brass, oft handled, brightly shine :
 What difference betwixt¹ the richest mine
 And basest mould, but use ? for both, not us'd,
 Are of like worth. Then treasure is abus'd,
 When misers keep it: being put to loan,
 In time it will return us two for one.
 Rich robes themselves and others do adorn ;
 Neither themselves nor others, if not worn.
 Who builds a palace, and rams up the gate,
 Shall see it ruinous and desolate : 240
 Ah, simple Hero, learn thyself to cherish !
 Lone women, like to empty houses, perish.
 Less sins the poor rich man, that starves himself
 In heaping up a mass of drossy pelf,
 Than such as you : his golden earth remains,
 Which, after his decease some other gains ;
 But this fair gem, sweet in the loss alone,
 When you fleet hence, can be bequeath'd to none ;
 Or, if it could, down from th' enamell'd sky
 All heaven would come to claim this legacy, 250

And with intestine broils the world destroy,
And quite confound Nature's sweet harmony.
Well therefore by the gods decreed it is,
We human creatures should enjoy that bliss.
One is no number ;¹ maids are nothing, then,
Without the sweet society of men.
Wilt thou live single still ? one shalt thou be,
Though never-singling Hymen couple thee.
Wild savages, that drink of running springs
Think water far excels all earthly things ; 260
But they, that daily taste neat² wine, despise it :
Virginity, albeit some highly prize it,
Compar'd with marriage, had you tried them both,
Differs as much as wine and water doth.
Base bullion for the stamp's sake we allow :
Even so for men's impression do we you ;
By which alone, our reverend fathers say,
Women receive perfection every way.
This idol, which you term virginity,
Is neither essence subject to the eye, 270
No, nor to any one exterior sense,
Nor hath it any place of residence,
Nor is't of earth or mould celestial,
Or capable of any form at all.
Of that which hath no being, do not boast ;
Things that are not at all, are never lost.

“ Among a number one is reckoned none.”

² Some eds. read “sweet.”

Men foolishly do call it virtuous :
 What virtue is it, that is born with us ?
 Much less can honour be ascrib'd thereto :
 Honour is purchas'd by the deeds we do ; 280
 Believe me, Hero, honour is not won,
 Until some honourable deed be done.
 Seek you, for chastity, immortal fame,
 And know that some have wrong'd Diana's name ?
 Whose name is it, if she be false or not,
 So she be fair, but some vile tongues will blot ?
 But you are fair, ay me ! so wondrous fair,
 So young, so gentle, and so debonair.
 As Greece will think, if thus you live alone,
 Some one or other keeps you as his own. 290
 Then, Hero, hate me not, nor from me fly,
 To follow swiftly-blasting infamy.
 Perhaps thy sacred priesthood makes thee loath :
 Tell me to whom mad'st thou that heedless oath ?"
 "To Venus," answer'd she ; and, as she spake,
 Forth from those two tralucet cisterns brake
 A stream of liquid pearl, which down her face
 Made milk-white paths, whereon the gods might trace
 To Jove's high court. He thus replied : "The rites
 In which Love's beauteous empress most delights, 300
 Are banquets, Doric music, midnight revel,
 Plays, masks, and all that stern age counteth evil.
 Thee as a holy idiot doth she scorn ;
 For thou, in vowing chastity, hast sworn
 To rob her name and honour, and thereby
 Committ'st a sin far worse than perjury,

Even sacrilege against her deity,
 Through regular and formal purity.
 To expiate which sin, kiss and shake hands :
 Such sacrifice as this Venus demands." 310
 Thereat she smil'd, and did deny him so,
 As put¹ thereby, yet might he hope for mo ;
 Which makes him quickly reinforce his speech,
 And her in humble manner thus beseech :
 " Though neither gods nor men may thee deserve,
 Yet for her sake, whom you have vow'd to serve,
 Abandon fruitless cold virginity,
 The gentle queen of Love's sole enemy.
 Then shall you most resemble Venus' nun,
 When Venus' sweet rites are performed and done. 320
 Flint-breasted Pallas joys in single life ;
 But Pallas and your mistress are at strife.
 Love, Hero, then, and be not tyrannous ;
 But heal the heart that thou hast wounded thus ;
 Nor stain thy youthful years with avarice :
 Fair fools delight to be accounted nice.
 The richest² corn dies, if it be not reapt ;
 Beauty alone is lost, too warily kept."
 These arguments he us'd, and many more ;
 Wherewith she yielded, that was won before. 330
 Hero's looks yielded, but her words made war :
 Women are won when they begin to jar.

"She with a kind of granting put him by it."

² This line is quoted in England's Parnassus with the reading "ripest."

Thus, having swallow'd Cupid's golden hook,
 The more she striv'd, the deeper was she strook :
 Yet, evilly feigning anger, strove she still,
 And would be thought to grant against her will.
 So having paus'd a while, at last she said,
 "Who taught thee rhetoric to deceive a maid?
 Ay me ! such words as these should I abhor,
 And yet I like them for the orator." 340

With that, Leander stooped to have embrac'd her,
 But from his spreading arms away she cast her,
 And thus bespake him : "Gentle youth, forbear
 To touch the sacred garments which I wear.
 Upon a rock, and underneath a hill,
 Far from the town (where all is whist¹ and still,
 Save that the sea, playing on yellow sand,
 Sends forth a rattling murmur to the land,
 Whose sound allures the golden Morpheus
 In silence of the night to visit us), 350
 My turret stands ; and there, God knows, I play
 With Venus' swans and sparrows all the day.
 A² dwarfish beldam bears me company,
 That hops about the chamber where I lie,
 And spends the night, that might be better spent,
 In vain discourse and apish merriment :—

² "To the 'beldam nurse' there occurs the following allusion in Drayton's Heroical Epistle from Queen Mary to Charles Brandon :—

'There is no beldam nurse to powt nor lower
 When wantoning we revell in my tower,
 Nor need I top my turret with a light,
 To guide thee to me as thou swim'st by night.'—Broughton.

Come thither." As she spake this, her tongue tripp'd,
For unawares "Come thither" from her slipp'd ;
And suddenly her former colour chang'd,
And here and there her eyes through anger rang'd ; 360
And, like a planet moving several ways
At one self instant, she, poor soul, assays,
Loving, not to love at all, and every part
Strove to resist the motions of her heart :
And hands so pure, so innocent, nay, such
As might have made Heaven stoop to have a touch,
Did she uphold to Venus, and again
Vow'd spotless chastity ; but all in vain ;
Cupid beats down her prayers with his wings ;
Her vows above¹ the empty air he flings : 370
All deep enrag'd, his sinewy bow he bent,
And shot a shaft that burning from him went ;
Wherewith she strooken, look'd so dolefully,
As made Love sigh to see his tyranny ;
And, as she wept, her tears to pearl he turn'd,
And wound them on his arm, and for her mourn'd.
Then towards the palace of the Destinies,
Laden with languishment and grief, he flies,
And to those stern nymphs humbly made request,
Both might enjoy each other, and be blest. 380
But with a ghastly dreadful countenance,
Threatening a thousand deaths at every glance,
They answer'd Love, nor would vouchsafe so much
As one poor word, their hate to him was such :

Hearken awhile, and I will tell you why.
 Heaven's wingèd herald, Jove-born Mercury,
 The self-same day that he asleep had laid
 Enchanted Argus, spied a country maid,
 Whose careless hair, instead of pearl t'adorn it,
 Glisten'd with dew, as one that seemed to scorn it ; 390
 Her breath as fragrant as the morning rose ;
 Her mind pure, and her tongue untaught to glose :
 Yet proud she was (for lofty Pride that dwells
 In tower'd courts, is oft in shepherds' cells),
 And too-too well the fair vermilion knew
 And silver tincture of her cheeks that drew
 The love of every swain. On her this god
 Enamour'd was, and with his snaky rod
 Did charm her nimble feet, and made her stay,
 The while upon a hillock down he lay, 400
 And sweetly on his pipe began to play,
 And with smooth speech her fancy to assay,
 Till in his twining arms he lock'd her fast,
 And then he woo'd with kisses ; and at last,
 As shepherds do, her on the ground he laid,
 And, tumbling in the grass, he often stray'd
 Beyond the bounds of shame, in being bold
 To eye those parts which no eye should behold ;
 And, like an insolent commanding lover,
 Boasting his parentage, would needs discover 410
 The way to new Elysium. But she,
 Whose only dower was her chastity,
 Having striven in vain, was now about to cry,
 And crave the help of shepherds that were nigh.

Herewith he stay'd his fury, and began
To give her leave to rise : away she ran ;
After went Mercury, who used such cunning,
As she, to hear his tale, let off her running (Maids are not won by brutish force and might,
But speeches full of pleasures and delight) ; 420
And, knowing Hermes courted her, was glad
That she such loveliness and beauty had
As could provoke his liking ; yet was mute,
And neither would deny nor grant his suit.
Still vow'd he love : she, wanting no excuse
To feed him with delays, as women use,
Or thirsting after immortality,
(All women are ambitious naturally),
Impos'd upon her lover such a task,
As he ought not perform, nor yet she ask ; 430
A draught of flowing nectar she requested,
Wherewith the king of gods and men is feasted.
He, ready to accomplish what she will'd,
Stole some from Hebe (Hebe Jove's cup fill'd),
And gave it to his simple rustic love :
Which being known,—as what is hid from Jove?—
He inly storm'd, and wax'd more furious
Than for the fire filch'd by Prometheus ;
And thrusts him down from heaven. He, wandering here,
In mournful terms, with sad and heavy cheer, 440
Complain'd to Cupid : Cupid, for his sake,
To be reveng'd on Jove did undertake ;
And those on whom heaven, earth, and hell relies,
I mean the adamantine Destinies,

He wounds with love, and forc'd them equally
 To dote upon deceitful Mercury.
 They offer'd him the deadly fatal knife
 That shears the slender threads ¹ of human life ;
 At his fair-feather'd feet the engines laid,
 Which th' earth from ugly Chaos' den upweigh'd. 450
 These he regarded not ; but did entreat
 That Jove, usurper of his father's seat,
 Might presently be banish'd into hell,
 And agèd Saturn in Olympus dwell.
 They granted what he crav'd ; and once again
 Saturn and Ops began their golden reign :
 Murder, rape, war, and ² lust, and treachery,
 Were with Jove clos'd in Stygian empery.
 But long this blessèd time continu'd not :
 As soon as he his wishèd purpose got, 460
 He, reckless of his promise, did despise
 The love of th' everlasting Destinies.
 They, seeing it, both Love and him abhorr'd,
 And Jupiter unto his place restor'd :
 And, but that Learning, in despite of Fate,
 Will mount aloft, and enter heaven-gate,
 And to the seat of Jove itself advance,
 Hermes had slept in hell with Ignorance.
 Yet, as a punishment, they added this,
 That he and Poverty should always kiss ; 470

¹ We are reminded of Lycidas :—

“ Comes the blind Fury with the abhorrèd shears
 And slits the thin-spun life.”

² Omitted in ed. 1600 and later 4tos.

And to this day is every scholar poor :
Gross gold from them runs headlong to the boor.
Likewise the angry Sisters, thus deluded,
To venge themselves on Hermes, have concluded
That Midas' brood shall sit in Honour's chair,
To which the Muses' sons are only heir ;
And fruitful wits, that inaspiring¹ are,
Shall, discontent, run into regions far ;
And few great lords in virtuous deeds shall joy
But be surpris'd with every garish toy, 480
And still enrich the lofty servile clown,
Who with encroaching guile keeps learning down.
Then muse not Cupid's suit no better sped,
Seeing in their loves the Fates were injurèd.

THE SECOND SESTIAD.

The Argument of the Second Sestiad.

Hero of love takes deeper sense,
 And doth her love more recompense :
 Their first night's meeting, where sweet kisses
 Are th' only crowns of both their blisses
 He swims t' Abydos, and returns :
 Cold Neptune with his beauty burns ;
 Whose suit he shuns, and doth aspire
 Hero's fair tower and his desire.

By this, sad Hero, with love unacquainted,
 Viewing Leander's face, fell down and fainted.
 He kiss'd her, and breath'd life¹ into her lips ;
 Wherewith, as one displeas'd, away she trips ;
 Yet, as she went, full often look'd behind,
 And many poor excuses did she find
 To linger by the way, and once she stay'd,
 And would have turn'd again, but was afraid,
 In offering parley, to be counted light :
 So on she goes, and, in her idle flight,

“I dreamed my lady came and found me dead,
 Strange dream that gives a dead man leave to think !—
 And breathed such life with kisses in my lips,
 That I revived and was an emperor.”

Her painted fan of curled plumes let fall,
Thinking to train Leander therewithal.
He, being a novice, knew not what she meant,
But stay'd, and after her a letter sent ;
Which joyful Hero answer'd in such sort,
As he had hope to scale the beauteous fort
Wherein the liberal Graces locked their wealth ;
And therefore to her tower he got by stealth.
Wide open stood the door ; he need not climb ;
And she herself, before the pointed time, 20
Had spread the board, with roses strew'd the room,
And oft looked out, and mused he did not come.
At last he came : O, who can tell the greeting
These greedy lovers had at their first meeting ?
He asked ; she gave ; and nothing was denied ;
Both to each other quickly were affied :
Look how their hands, so were their hearts
united,
And what he did, she willingly requited.
(Sweet are the kisses, the embracements sweet,
When like desires and like¹ affections meet ; 30
For from the earth to heaven is Cupid raised,
Where fancy is in equal balance paid.²)
Yet she this rashness suddenly repented,
And turn'd aside, and to herself lamented,
As if her name and honour had been wronged
By being possessed of him for whom she longed ;

¹ Omitted in eds. 1600, 1606, 1613, and 1637.

² Peised, weighed.

I, and she wished, albeit not from her heart,
 That he would leave her turret and depart.
 The mirthful god of amorous pleasure smiled
 To see how he this captive nymph beguiled; 40
 For hitherto he did but fan the fire,
 And kept it down, that it might mount the higher.

Now wax'd she jealous lest his love abated,
 Fearing her own thoughts made her to be hated.

Therefore unto him hastily she goes,
 And, like light Salmacis, her body throws
 Upon his bosom, where with yielding eyes
 She offers up herself a sacrifice
 To slake her anger, if he were displeas'd :
 O, what god would not therewith be appeas'd? 50
 Like Æsop's cock, this jewel he enjoyed,
 And as a brother with his sister toyed,
 Supposing nothing else was to be done,
 Now he her favour and goodwill had won.
 But know you not that creatures wanting sense,
 By nature have a mutual appetence,
 And, wanting organs to advance a step,
 Mov'd by love's force, unto each other lep?
 Much more in subjects having intellect
 Some hidden influence breeds like effect. 60
 Albeit Leander, rude in love and raw,
 Long dallying with Hero, nothing saw
 That might delight him more, yet he suspected
 Some amorous rites or other were neglected.

Therefore unto his body hers he clung :
 She, fearing on the rushes¹ to be flung,
 Strived with redoubled strength ; the more she strived,
 The more a gentle pleasing heat revived,
 Which taught him all that elder lovers know ;
 And now the same gan so to scorch and glow, 70
 As in plain terms, yet cunningly, he'd crave² it :
 Love always makes those eloquent that have it.
 She, with a kind of granting, put him by it,
 And ever, as he thought himself most nigh it,
 Like to the tree of Tantalus, she fled,
 And, seeming lavish, saved her maidenhead.
 Ne'er king more sought to keep his diadem,
 Than Hero this inestimable gem :
 Above our life we love a steadfast friend ;
 Yet when a token of great worth we send, 80
 We often kiss it, often look thereon,
 And stay the messenger that would be gone ;
 No marvel, then, though Hero would not yield
 So soon to part from that she dearly held :
 Jewels being lost are found again ; this never ;
 'Tis lost but once, and once lost, lost for ever.
 Now had the Morn espied her lover's steeds ;
 Whereat she starts, puts on her purple weeds,

¹ Rooms were strewed with rushes before the introduction of carpets. Shakespeare, like Marlowe, attributed the customs of his own day to ancient times. Cf. Cymb. ii. 2—

“Our Tarquin thus

Did softly press the rushes ere he wakened
 The chastity he wounded.”

And, red for anger that he stayed so long,
 All headlong throws herself the clouds among. 90
 And now Leander, fearing to be missed,
 Embraced her suddenly, took leave, and kissed :
 Long was he taking leave, and loath to go,
 And kissed again, as lovers use to do.
 Sad Hero wrung him by the hand, and wept,
 Saying, "Let your vows and promises be kept :"
 Then standing at the door, she turned about,
 As loath to see Leander going out.
 And now the sun, that through th' horizon peeps,
 As pitying these lovers, downward creeps ; 100
 So that in silence of the cloudy night,
 Though it was morning, did he take his flight.
 But what the secret trusty night concealed,
 Leander's amorous habit soon revealed :
 With Cupid's myrtle was his bonnet crowned,
 About his arms the purple riband wound,
 Wherewith she wreath'd her largely-spreading hair ;
 Nor could the youth abstain, but he must wear
 The sacred ring wherewith she was endowed,
 When first religious chastity she vowed ; 110
 Which made his love through Sestos to be known,
 And thence unto Abydos sooner blown
 Than he could sail ; for incorporeal Fame,
 Whose weight consists in nothing but her name,
 Is swifter than the wind, whose tardy plumes
 Are reeking water and dull earthly fumes.
 Home when he came, he seemed not to be there,
 But, like exilèd air thrust from his sphere,

Set in a foreign place ; and straight from thence,
Alcides-like, by mighty violence, 120
He would have chas'd away the swelling main,
That him from her unjustly did detain.
Like as the sun in a diameter
Fires and inflames objects removèd far,
And heateth kindly, shining laterally ;
So beauty sweetly quickens when 'tis nigh,
But being separated and removed,
Burns where it cherished, murders where it loved.
Therefore even as an index to a book,
So to his mind was young Leander's look. 130
O, none but gods have power¹ their love to hide !
Affection by the countenance is descried ;
The light of hidden fire itself discovers,
And love that is concealed betrays poor lovers.
His secret flame apparently was seen :
Leander's father knew where he had been,
And for the same mildly rebuk'd his son,
Thinking to quench the sparkles new-begun.
But love, resisted once, grows passionate,
And nothing more than counsel lovers hate ; 140
For as a hot proud horse highly disdains
To have his head controlled, but breaks the reins,
Spits forth the ringled² bit, and with his hoves
Checks the submissive ground ; so he that loves,

¹ Some eds. give "O, none have power but gods."

² "In ages and countries where mechanical ingenuity has but few outlets it exhausts itself in the constructions of bits, each more peculiar in form or more torturing in effect than that which has preceded it. I have

The more he is restrain'd, the worse he fares :
 What is it now but mad Leander dares ?
 " O Hero, Hero ! " thus he cried full oft ;
 And then he got him to a rock aloft,
 Where having spied her tower, long star'd he on't,
 And pray'd the narrow toiling Hellespont 150
 To part in twain, that he might come and go ;
 But still the rising billows answer'd, " No."'
 With that, he stripp'd him to the ivory skin,
 And, crying, " Love, I come," leap'd lively in :
 Whereat the sapphire-visaged god grew proud,
 And made his capering Triton sound aloud,
 Imagining that Ganymede, displeas'd,
 Had left the heavens ; therefore on him he seiz'd.
 Leander strived ; the waves about him wound,
 And pull'd him to the bottom, where the ground 160
 Was strewed with pearl, and in low coral groves
 Sweet-singing mermaids sported with their loves
 On heaps of heavy gold, and took great pleasure
 To spurn in careless sort the shipwreck treasure ;
 For here the stately azure palace stood,
 Where kingly Neptune and his train abode.
 The lusty god embrac'd him, called him " Love,"
 And swore he never should return to Jove :
 But when he knew it was not Ganymed,
 For under water he was almost dead, 170

seen collections of these instruments of torments, and among them some of which Marlowe's curious adjective would have been highly descriptive. It may be, however, that the word is 'ring-led,' in which shape it would mean guided by the ring on each side like a snaffle."—Cunningham.

He heav'd him up, and, looking on his face,
 Beat down the bold waves with his triple mace,
 Which mounted up, intending to have kiss'd him,
 And fell in drops like tears because they miss'd him.
 Leander, being up, began to swim,
 And, looking back, saw Neptune follow him :
 Whereat aghast, the poor soul gan to cry,
 "O, let me visit Hero ere I die !"
 The god put Helle's bracelet on his arm,
 And swore the sea should never do him harm. 180
 He clapped his plump cheeks, with his tresses played,
 And, smiling wantonly, his love bewrayed ;
 He watched his arms, and, as they open'd wide
 At every stroke, betwixt them would he slide,
 And steal a kiss, and then run out and dance,
 And, as he turn'd, cast many a lustful glance,
 And throw him gaudy toys to please his eye,
 And dive into the water, and there pry
 Upon his breast, his thighs, and every limb,
 And up again, and close beside him swim, 190
 And talk of love. Leander made reply,
 "You are deceiv'd ; I am no woman, I."
 Thereat smil'd Neptune, and then told a tale,
 How that a shepherd, sitting in a vale,
 Play'd with a boy so lovely-fair¹ and kind,
 As for his love both earth and heaven pin'd ;
 That of the cooling river durst not drink,
 Lest water-nymphs should pull him from the brink ;

¹ Some eds. give "so faire and kind." Cf. Othello, iv. 2—

"O thou wind

Who art so lovely-fair and smell'st so sweet."

And when he sported in the fragrant lawns,
 Goat-footed Satyrs and up-staring¹ Fauns 200
 Would steal him thence. Ere half this tale was done,
 "Ay me," Leander cried, "th' enamoured sun,
 That now should shine on Thetis' glassy bower,
 Descends upon my radiant Hero's tower :
 O, that these tardy arms of mine were wings !"
 And, as he spake, upon the waves he springs.
 Neptune was angry that he gave no ear,
 And in his heart revenging malice bare :
 He flung at him his mace ; but, as it went,
 He call'd it in, for love made him repent : 210
 The mace, returning back, his own hand hit,
 As meaning to be venged for darting it.
 When this fresh-bleeding wound Leander viewed,
 His colour went and came, as if he rued
 The grief which Neptune felt : in gentle breasts
 Relenting thoughts, remorse, and pity rests ;
 And who have hard hearts and obdurate minds,
 But vicious, hare-brained, and illiterate hinds ?
 The god, seeing him with pity to be moved,
 Thereon concluded that he was beloved. 220
 (Love is too full of faith, too credulous,
 With folly and false hope deluding us) ;
 Wherefore, Leander's fancy to surprise,
 To the rich ocean for gifts he flies :
 Tis wisdom to give much ; a gift prevails
 When deep persuading oratory fails,

By this, Leander, being near the land,
Cast down his weary feet, and felt the sand.
Breathless albeit he were, he rested not
Till to the solitary tower he got ; 230
And knocked and called : at which celestial noise
The longing heart of Hero much more joys,
Than nymphs and shepherds when the timbrel rings,
Or crookèd dolphin when the sailor sings.
She stayed not for her robes, but straight arose,
And, drunk with gladness, to the door she goes ;
Where seeing a naked man, she screeched for fear
(Such sights as this to tender maids are rare),
And ran into the dark herself to hide
(Rich jewels in the dark are soonest spied). 240
Unto her was he led, or rather drawn,
By those white limbs which sparkled through the lawn.

The nearer that he came, the more she fled,
And, seeking refuge, slipt into her bed ;
Whereon Leander sitting, thus began,
Through numbing cold, all feeble, faint, and wan.
“ If not for love, yet, love, for pity-sake,
Me in thy bed and maiden bosom take ;
At least vouchsafe these arms some little room,
Who, hoping to embrace thee, cheerly swoom : 250
This head was beat with many a churlish billow,
And therefore let it rest upon thy pillow.”
Herewith affrighted, Hero shrunk away,
And in her lukewarm place Leander lay ;

Whose lively heat, like fire from heaven fet,¹
 Would animate gross clay, and higher set
 The drooping thoughts of base-declining souls,
 Than dreary-Mars-carousing nectar bowls.
 His hands he cast upon her like a snare :
 She, overcome with shame and sallow² fear, 260
 Like chaste Diana when Actæon spied her,
 Being suddenly betray'd, div'd down to hide her ;
 And, as her silver body downward went,
 With both her hands she made the bed a tent,
 And in her own mind thought herself secure,
 O'ercast with dim and darksome coverture.
 And now she lets him whisper in her ear,
 Flatter, entreat, promise, protest, and swear :
 Yet ever, as he greedily assay'd
 To touch those dainties, she the harpy play'd, 270
 And every limb did, as a soldier stout,
 Defend the fort, and keep the foeman out ;
 For though the rising ivory mount he scal'd,
 Which is with azure circling lines empal'd,
 Much like a globe (a globe may I term this,
 By which Love sails to regions full of bliss),
 Yet there with Sisyphus he toil'd in vain,
 Till gentle parley did the truce obtain
 Even³ as a bird, which in our hands we wring,
 Forth plungeth, and oft flutters with her wing, 280

² Some eds. give "shallow."

³ In the old eds. this line and the next stood after l. 300. The transposition was made by Singer in the edition of 1821.

She trembling strove : this strife of hers, like that
 Which made the world, another world begat
 Of unknown joy. Treason was in her thought,
 And cunningly to yield herself she sought.
 Seeming not won, yet won she was at length :
 In such wars women use but half their strength.
 Leander now, like Theban Hercules,
 Enter'd the orchard of th' Hesperides ;
 Whose fruit none rightly can describe, but he
 That pulls or shakes it from the golden tree. 290
 Wherein Leander, on her quivering breast, Breathless spoke something, and sigh'd out the rest ;

Which so prevail'd, as he with small ado,
 Enclos'd her in his arms, and kiss'd her too :
 And every kiss to her was as a charm,
 And to Leander as a fresh alarm :
 So that the truce was broke, and she, alas,
 Poor silly maiden, at his mercy was.
 Love is not full of pity, as men say,
 But deaf and cruel where he means to prey. 300

And now she wish'd this night were never done,
 And sigh'd to think upon th' approaching sun ;
 For much it griev'd her that the bright day-light
 Should know the pleasure of this blessèd night,
 And them, like Mars and Erycine, display¹
 Both in each other's arms chain'd as they lay.

Again, she knew not how to frame her look,
 Or speak to him, who in a moment took
 That which so long, so charily she kept ;
 And fain by stealth away she would have crept, 310
 And to some corner secretly have gone,
 Leaving Leander in the bed alone.

But as her naked feet were whipping out,
 He on the sudden cling'd her so about,
 That, mermaid-like, unto the floor she slid ;
 One half appear'd, the other half was hid.
 Thus near the bed she blushing stood upright,
 And from her countenance behold ye might
 A kind of twilight break, which through the air,¹
 As from an orient cloud, glimps'd² here and
 there ; 320

And round about the chamber this false morn
 Brought forth the day before the day was born.
 So Hero's ruddy cheek Hero betray'd,
 And her all naked to his sight display'd :
 Whence his admiring eyes more pleasure took
 Than Dis,³ on heaps of gold fixing his look.
 By this, Apollo's golden harp began
 To sound forth music to the ocean ;
 Which watchful Hesperus no sooner heard,
 But he the bright Day-bearing car⁴ prepar'd, 330

THE EPISTLE¹ DEDICATORY

TO MY

BEST ESTEEMED AND WORTHILY HONOURED LADY THE LADY WALSINGHAM,

ONE OF THE LADIES OF HER MAJESTY'S BED-CHAMBER.

I PRESENT your ladyship with the last affections of the first two Lovers that ever Muse shrined in the Temple of Memory ; being drawn by strange instigation to employ some of my serious time in so trifling a subject, which yet made the first Author, divine Musaeus, eternal. And were it not that we must subject our accounts of these common received conceits to servile custom, it goes much against my hand to sign that for a trifling subject on which more worthiness of soul hath been shewed, and weight of divine wit, than can vouchsafe residence in the leaden gravity of any money-monger ; in whose profession all serious subjects are concluded. But he that shuns trifles must shun the world ; out of whose reverend heaps of substance and austerity I can and will ere long single or tumble out as brainless and passionate fooleries as ever panted in the bosom of the most ridiculous lover. Accept it, therefore, good Madam, though as a trifle, yet as a serious argument of my affection ; for to be thought thankful for all free and honourable favours is a great sum of that riches my whole thrift intendeth.

Such uncourtly and silly dispositions as mine, whose contentment hath other objects than profit or glory, are as glad, simply for the naked merit of virtue, to honour such as advance her, as others that are hard to commend with deepliest politique bounty.

It hath therefore adjoined much contentment to my desire of your true honour to hear men of desert in court add to mine own knowledge of your noble disposition how gladly you do your best to prefer their desires, and have as absolute respect to their mere good parts as if they came perfumed and charmed with golden incitements. And this most sweet inclination, that flows from the truth and eternity of Nobles[se], assure your Ladyship doth more suit your other ornaments, and makes more to the advancement of your name and happiness of your proceedings, than if like others you displayed ensigns of state and sourness in your forehead, made smooth with nothing but sensuality and presents.

This poor Dedication (in figure of the other unity betwixt Sir Thomas and yourself) hath rejoined you with him, my honoured best friend; whose continuance of ancient kindness to my still-obscured estate, though it cannot increase my love to him which hath been entirely circular; yet shall it encourage my deserts to their utmost requital, and make my hearty gratitude speak; to which the unhappiness of my life hath hitherto been uncomfortable and painful dumbness.

By your Ladyship's vowed in most wished service,

GEORGE CHAPMAN.

THE THIRD SESTIAD.

The Argument of the Third Sestiad.

Leander to the envious light
 Resigns his night-sports with the night,
 And swims the Hellespont again.
 Thesme, the deity sovereign
 Of customs and religious rites,
 Appears, reprov¹ing his delights,
 Since nuptial honours he neglected ;
 Which straight he vows shall be effected.
 Fair Hero, left devirginate,
 Weighs, and with fury wails her state ; 10
 But with her love and woman's wit
 She argues and approveth it.

NEW light gives new directions, fortunes new,
 To fashion our endeavours that ensue.
 More harsh, at least more hard, more grave and high
 Our subject runs, and our stern Muse must fly.
 Love's edge is taken off, and that light flame,
 Those thoughts, joys, longings, that before became
 High unexperienc'd blood, and maids' sharp plights,
 Must now grow staid, and censure the delights,
 That, being enjoy'd, ask judgment ; now we praise,
 As having parted : evenings crown the days. 10

And now, ye wanton Loves, and young Desires,
Pied Vanity, the mint of strange attires,
Ye lisping Flatteries, and obsequious Glances,
Relentful Musics, and attractive Dances,
And you detested Charms constraining love !
Shun love's stoln sports by that these lovers prove.

By this, the sovereign of heaven's golden fires,
And young Leander, lord of his desires,
Together from their lovers' arms arose :
Leander into Hellespontus throws 20
His Hero-handled body, whose delight
Made him disdain each other epithite.
And as amidst th' enamour'd waves he swims,
The god of gold ¹ of purpose gilt his limbs,
That, this word gilt ² including double sense,
The double guilt of his incontinence
Might be express'd, that had no stay t' employ
The treasure which the love-god let him joy
In his dear Hero, with such sacred thrift
As had beseem'd so sanctified a gift ; 30
But, like a greedy vulgar prodigal,
Would on the stock dispend, and rudely fall,
Before his time, to that unblest blessing
Which, for lust's plague, doth perish with possessing :

¹ "He calls Phoebus the god of gold, since the virtue of his beams creates it."—Marginal note in the Isham copy.

² The reader will remember how grimly Lady Macbeth plays upon this word :—

"I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal :
For it must seem their guilt."—ii. 2.

Joy graven in sense, like snow ¹ in water, wasts :
 Without preserve of virtue, nothing lasts.
 What man is he, that with a wealthy eye
 Enjoys a beauty richer than the sky,
 Through whose white skin, softer than soundest sleep,
 With damask eyes the ruby blood doth peep, 40
 And runs in branches through her azure veins,
 Whose mixture and first fire his love attains ;
 Whose both hands limit both love's deities,
 And sweeten human thoughts like Paradise ;
 Whose disposition silken is and kind,
 Directed with an earth-exempted mind ;—
 Who thinks not heaven with such a love is given ?
 And who, like earth, would spend that dower of heaven,
 With rank desire to joy it all at first ?
 What simply kills our hunger, quencheth thirst, 50
 Clothes but our nakedness, and makes us live,
 Praise doth not any of her favours give :
 But what doth plentifully minister
 Beauteous apparel and delicious cheer,
 So order'd that it still excites desire,
 And still gives pleasure freeness to aspire,
 The palm of Bounty ever moist preserving ;
 To Love's sweet life this is the courtly carving.

¹ " It is not likely that Burns had ever read Hero and Leander, but compare Tam o' Shanter—

' But pleasures are like poppies spread,
 You seize the flower, its bloom is shed,
 Or like the snow falls in the river,
 A moment white—then melts for ever ! '

—Cunningham.

Thus Time and all-states-ordering Ceremony
 Had banish'd all offence : Time's golden thigh 60
 Upholds the flowery body of the earth
 In sacred harmony, and every birth
 Of men and actions ¹ makes legitimate ;
 Being us'd aright, the use of time is fate.

Yet did the gentle flood transfer once more
 This prize of love home to his father's shore ;
 Where he unlades himself on that false wealth
 That makes few rich,—treasures compos'd by stealth ;
 And to his sister, kind Hermione
 (Who on the shore kneel'd, praying to the sea 70
 For his return), he all love's goods did show,
 In Hero seis'd for him, in him for Hero.

His most kind sister all his secrets knew,
 And to her, singing, like a shower, he flew,
 Sprinkling the earth, that to their tombs took in Streams dead for love, to leave his ivory shin,
 Which yet a snowy foam did leave above,
 As soul to the dead water that did love ;
 And from hence did the first white roses spring
 (For love is sweet and fair in everything), 80
 And all the sweeten'd shore, as he did go,
 Was crown'd with odorous roses, white as snow.
 Love-blest Leander was with love so fill'd,
 That love to all that touch'd him he instill'd ;
 And as the colours of all things we see,
 To our sight's powers communicated be,

So to all objects that in compass came
 Of any sense he had, his senses' flame
 Flow'd from his parts with force so virtual,
 It fir'd with sense things mere¹ insensual. 90

Now, with warm baths and odours comforted,
 When he lay down, he kindly kiss'd his bed,
 As consecrating it to Hero's right,
 And vow'd thereafter, that whatever sight
 Put him in mind of Hero or her bliss,
 Should be her altar to prefer a kiss.

Then laid he forth his late-enrich'd arms,¹
 In whose white circle Love writ all his charms,
 And made his characters sweet Hero's limbs,
 When on his breast's warm sea she sideling swims ; 100
 And as those arms, held up in circle, met,
 He said, "See, sister, Hero's carquet !
 Which she had rather wear about her neck,
 Than all the jewels that do Juno deck."

But, as he shook with passionate desire
 To put in flame his other secret fire,
 A music so divine did pierce his ear,
 As never yet his ravish'd sense did hear ;
 When suddenly a light of twenty hues
 Brake through the roof, and, like the rainbow, views, 110
 Amaz'd Leander : in whose beams came down
 The goddess Ceremony, with a crown
 Of all the stars ; and Heaven with her descended :
 Her flaming hair to her bright feet extended,

² A magical figure formed of intersected triangles. It was supposed to preserve the wearer from the assaults of demons. "Disparent would seem to mean that the five points of the ornaments radiated distinctly one from the other."—Cunningham.

That follow'd, eating earth and excrement
 And human limbs ; and would make proud ascent 140
 To seats of gods, were Ceremony slain.
 The Hours and Graces bore her glorious train ;
 And all the sweets of our society
 Were spher'd and treasur'd in her bounteous eye.
 Thus she appear'd, and sharply did reprove
 Leander's bluntness in his violent love ;
 Told him how poor was substance without rites,
 Like bills unsign'd ; desires without delights ;
 Like meats unseason'd ; like rank corn that grows
 On cottages, that none or reaps or sows ; 150
 Not being with civil forms confirm'd and bounded,
 For human dignities and comforts founded ;
 But loose and secret all their glories hide ;
 Fear fills the chamber, Darkness decks the bride.

She vanish'd, leaving pierc'd Leander's heart
 With sense of his unceremonious part,
 In which, with plain neglect of nuptial rites,
 He close and flatly fell to his delights :
 And instantly he vow'd to celebrate
 All rites pertaining to his married state. 160
 So up he gets, and to his father goes,
 To whose glad ears he doth his vows disclose.
 The nuptials are resolv'd with utmost power ;
 And he at night would swim to Hero's tower,
 From whence he meant to Sestos' forkèd bay
 To bring her covertly, where ships must stay,

Sent by his ¹ father, throughly rigg'd and mann'd,
To waft her safely to Abydos' strand.
There leave we him ; and with fresh wing pursue
Astonish'd Hero, whose most wishèd view 170
I thus long have foreborne, because I left her
So out of countenance, and her spirits bereft her :
To look on one abash'd is impudence,
When of slight faults he hath too deep a sense.
Her blushing het ² her chamber ; she look'd out,
And all the air she purpled round about ;
And after it a foul black day befell,
Which ever since a red morn doth foretell,
And still renews our woes for Hero's woe ;
And foul it prov'd because it figur'd so 180
The next night's horror ; which prepare to hear ;
I fail, if it profane your daintiest ear.

Then, ho, ³ most strangely-intellectual fire,
That, proper to my soul, hast power t' inspire
Her burning faculties, and with the wings
Of thy unspherèd flame visit'st the springs
Of spirits immortal ! Now (as swift as Time
Doth follow Motion) find th' eternal clime
Of his free soul, whose living subject ⁴ stood
Up to the chin in the Pierian flood, 190
And drunk to me half this Musæan story,
Inscribing it to deathless memory :

Confer with it, and make my pledge as deep,
 That neither's draught be consecrate to sleep;
 Tell it how much his late desires I tender
 (If yet it know not), and to light surrender
 My soul's dark offspring, willing it should die
 To loves, to passions, and society.

Sweet Hero, left upon her bed alone,
 Her maidenhead, her vows, Leander gone, 200
 And nothing with her but a violent crew
 Of new-come thoughts, that yet she never knew,
 Even to herself a stranger, was much like
 Th' Iberian city¹ that War's hand did strike
 By English force in princely Essex' guide,
 When Peace assur'd her towers had fortified,
 And golden-finger'd India had bestow'd
 Such wealth on her, that strength and empire flow'd
 Into her turrets, and her virgin waist
 The wealthy girdle of the sea embraced; 210
 Till our Leander, that made Mars his Cupid,
 For soft love-suits, with iron thunders chid;
 Swum to her towers,² dissolv'd her virgin zone;
 Led in his power, and made Confusion
 Run through her streets amaz'd, that she suppos'd
 She had not been in her own walls enclos'd,
 But rapt by wonder to some foreign state,
 Seeing all her issue so disconsolate,

¹ Cadiz, which was taken in June 21, 1596, by the force under the joint command of Essex and Howard of Effingham.

² So the Isham copy.—The other old eds. read "townes," for which Dyce gives "town."

And all her peaceful mansions possess'd
 With war's just spoil, and many a foreign guest 220
 From every corner driving an enjoyer,
 Supplying it with power of a destroyer.
 So far'd fair Hero in th' expugnèd fort
 Of her chaste bosom ; and of every sort
 Strange thoughts possess'd her, ransacking her breast
 For that that was not there, her wonted rest.
 She was a mother straight, and bore with pain
 Thoughts that spake straight, and wish'd their mother slain ;
 She hates their lives, and they their own and hers :
 Such strife still grows where sin the race prefers : 230
 Love is a golden bubble, full of dreams,
 That waking breaks, and fills us with extremes.
 She mus'd how she could look upon her sire,
 And not shew that without, that was intire ;¹
 For as a glass is an inanimate eye,
 And outward forms embraceth inwardly,
 So is the eye an animate glass, that shows
 In-forms without us ; and as Phœbus throws
 His beams abroad, though he in clouds be clos'd,
 Still glancing by them till he find oppos'd 240
 A loose and rorid vapour that is fit
 T' event² his searching beams, and useth it
 To form a tender twenty-colour'd eye,
 Cast in a circle round about the sky ;

So when our fiery soul, our body's star,
 (That ever is in motion circular,)
 Conceives a form, in seeking to display it
 Through all our cloudy parts, it doth convey it
 Forth at the eye, as the most pregnant place,
 And that reflects it round about the face. 250
 And this event, uncourtly Hero thought,
 Her inward guilt would in her looks have wrought ;
 For yet the world's stale cunning she resisted,
 To bear foul thoughts, yet forge what looks she listed,
 And held it for a very silly sleight,
 To make a perfect metal counterfeit,
 Glad to disclaim herself, proud of an art
 That makes the face a pandar to the heart.
 Those be the painted moons, whose lights profane
 Beauty's true Heaven, at full still in their wane ; 260
 Those be the lapwing-faces that still cry,
 "Here 'tis!" when that they vow is nothing nigh :
 Base fools ! when every moorish fool¹ can teach
 That which men think the height of human reach.
 But custom, that the apoplexy is
 Of bed-rid nature and lives led amiss,

¹ "Fowl" and "fool" had the same pronunciation. Cf. 3 Henry VI. v. 6 :—

"Why, what a peevish fool was he of Crete,
 That taught his son the office of a fowl!
 And yet for all his wings the fool was drowned."

The "moorish fool" is explained by the allusion to the lapwing, two lines above. (The lapwing was supposed to draw the searcher from her nest by crying in other places. "The lapwing cries most furthest from her nest."—Ray's Proverbs.)

And takes away all feeling of offence,
 Yet braz'd not Hero's brow with impudence ;
 And this she thought most hard to bring to pass,
 To seem in countenance other than she was, 270
 As if she had two souls, one for the face,
 One for the heart, and that they shifted place
 As either list to utter or conceal
 What they conceiv'd, or as one soul did deal
 With both affairs at once, keeps and ejects
 Both at an instant contrary effects ;
 Retention and ejection in her powers
 Being acts alike ; for this one vice of ours,
 That forms the thought, and sways the countenance,
 Rules both our motion and our utterance. 280

These and more grave conceits toil'd Hero's spirits ;
 For, though the light of her discursive wits
 Perhaps might find some little hole to pass
 Through all these worldly cinctures, yet, alas !
 There was a heavenly flame encompass'd her,—
 Her goddess, in whose fane she did prefer
 Her virgin vows, from whose impulsive sight
 She knew the black shield of the darkest night
 Could not defend her, nor wit's subtlest art :
 This was the point pierc'd Hero to the heart ; 290
 Who, heavy to the death, with a deep sigh,
 And hand that languished, took a robe was nigh,
 Exceeding large, and of black cypres¹ made,
 In which she sate, hid from the day in shade,

Even over head and face, down to her feet ;
 Her left hand made it at her bosom meet,
 Her right hand lean'd on her heart-bowing knee,
 Wrapp'd in unshapeful folds, 'twas death to see ;
 Her knee stay'd that, and that her falling face ;
 Each limb help'd other to put on disgrace : 300
 No form was seen, where form held all her sight ;
 But like an embryon that saw never light,
 Or like a scorched statue made a coal
 With three-wing'd lightning, or a wretched soul
 Muffled with endless darkness, she did sit :
 The night had never such a heavy spirit.
 Yet might a penetrating¹ eye well see
 How fast her clear tears melted on her knee
 Through her black veil, and turn'd as black as it,
 Mourning to be her tears. Then wrought her wit 310
 With her broke vow, her goddess' wrath, her fame,—
 All tools that ingenious² despair could frame :
 Which made her strew the floor with her torn hair,
 And spread her mantle piece-meal in the air.
 Like Jove's son's club, strong passion struck her down,
 And with a piteous shriek enforc'd her swoun :
 Her shriek made with another shriek ascend
 The frighted matron that on her did tend ;
 And as with her own cry her sense was slain,
 So with the other it was called again. 320

¹ So the modern editors for an "imitating."

² Ingenious. Chapman has the form "ingenious" in his translation of the Odyssey, i. 452,

"By open force or prospects ingenious."

She rose, and to her bed made forcèd way,
 And laid her down even where Leander lay;
 And all this while the red sea of her blood
 Ebb'd with Leander: but now turn'd the flood,
 And all her fleet of spirits came swelling in,
 With child¹ of sail, and did hot fight begin
 With those severe conceits she too much marked:
 And here Leander's beauties were embarked.
 He came in swimming, painted all with joys,
 Such as might sweeten hell: his thought destroys 330
 All her destroying thoughts; she thought she felt
 His heart in hers, with her contentions melt,
 And chide her soul that it could so much err,
 To check the true joys he deserved in her.
 Her fresh-heat blood cast figures in her eyes,
 And she suppos'd she saw in Neptune's skies
 How her star wander'd, wash'd in smarting brine,
 For her love's sake, that with immortal wine
 Should be embath'd, and swim in more heart's-ease
 Than there was water in the Sestian seas. 340
 Then said her Cupid-prompted spirit, "Shall I
 Sing moans to such delightsome harmony?
 Shall slick-tongu'd Fame, patch'd up with voices rude,
 The drunken bastard of the multitude
 (Begot when father Judgment is away,
 And, gossip-like, says because others say,
 Takes news as if it were too hot to eat,
 And spits it slavering forth for dog-fees meat),

Make me, for forging a fantastic vow,
 Presume to bear what makes grave matrons bow? 350
 Good vows are never broken with good deeds,
 For then good deeds were bad : vows are but seeds,
 And good deeds fruits ; even those good deeds that grow
 From other stocks than from th' observèd vow.
 That is a good deed that prevents a bad :
 Had I not yielded, slain myself I had.
 Hero Leander is, Leander Hero ;
 Such virtue love hath to make one of two.
 If, then, Leander did my maidenhead git,
 Leander being myself, I still retain it : 360
 We break chaste vows when we live loosely ever,
 But bound as we are, we live loosely never :
 Two constant lovers being join'd in one,
 Yielding to one another, yield to none.
 We know not how to vow till love unblind us,
 And vows made ignorantly never bind us.
 Too true it is, that, when 'tis gone, men hate
 The joy¹ as vain they took in love's estate :
 But that's since they have lost the heavenly light
 Should show them way to judge of all things right. 370
 When life is gone, death must implant his terror :
 As death is foe to life, so love to error.
 Before we love, how range we through this sphere,
 Searching the sundry fancies hunted here :
 Now with desire of wealth transported quite Beyond our free humanity's delight ;

Now with ambition climbing falling towers,
Whose hope to scale, our fear to fall devours ;
Now rapt with pastimes, pomp, all joys impure :
In things without us no delight is sure. 380
But love, with all joys crowned, within doth sit :
O goddess, pity love, and pardon it !”
Thus spake she¹ weeping : but her goddess’ ear
Burn’d with too stern a heat, and would not hear.
Ay me ! hath heaven’s strait fingers no more graces
For such as Hero² than for homeliest faces ?
Yet she hoped well, and in her sweet conceit
Weighing her arguments, she thought them weight,
And that the logic of Leander’s beauty,
And them together, would bring proofs of duty ; 385
And if her soul, that was a skilful glance
Of heaven’s great essence, found such imperance³
In her love’s beauties, she had confidence
Jove loved him too, and pardoned her offence :
Beauty in heaven and earth this grace doth win,
It suppleth rigour, and it lessens sin.
Thus, her sharp wit, her love, her secrecy,
Trooping together, made her wonder why
She should not leave her bed, and to the temple ;
Her health said she must live ; her sex, dissemble. 400
She viewed Leander’s place, and wished he were Turned to his place, so his place were Leander.

³ Command.

“Ay me,” said she, “that love’s sweet life and sense
Should do it harm! my love had not gone hence
Had he been like his place: O blessèd place,
Image of constancy! Thus my love’s grace
Parts nowhere, but it leaves something behind
Worth observation: he renowns his kind:
His motion is, like heaven’s, orbicular,
For where he once is, he is ever there.
This place was mine; Leander, now ’tis thine;
Thou being myself, then it is double mine,
Mine, and Leander’s mine, Leander’s mine.
O, see what wealth it yields me, nay, yields him!
For I am in it, he for me doth swim.
Rich, fruitful love, that, doubling self estates,
Elixir-like contracts, though separates!
Dear place, I kiss thee, and do welcome thee,
As from Leander ever sent to me.”

THE FOURTH SESTIAD.

The Argument of the Fourth Sestiad.

Hero, in sacred habit deckt,
 Doth private sacrifice effect.
 Her scarf's description, wrought by Fate ;
 Ostents that threaten her estate ;
 The strange, yet physical, events,
 Leander's counterfeit ¹ presents.
 In thunder Cyprides descends,
 Presaging both the lovers' ends :
 Ecte, the goddess of remorse,
 With vocal and articulate force
 Inspires Leucote, Venus' swan,
 T' excuse the Beauteous Sestian.
 Venus, to wreak her rites' abuses,
 Creates the monster Eronusis,
 Inflaming Hero's sacrifice
 With lightning darted from her eyes ;
 And thereof springs the painted beast
 That ever since taints every breast.

Now from Leander's place she rose, and found
 Her hair and rent robe scatter'd on the ground ;
 Which taking up, she every piece did lay
 Upon an altar, where in youth of day

¹ Picture.

She us'd t' exhibit private sacrifice :
 Those would she offer to the deities
 Of her fair goddess and her powerful son,
 As relics of her late-felt passion ;
 And in that holy sort she vow'd to end them,
 In hope her violent fancies, that did rend them, 10
 Would as quite fade in her love's holy fire,
 As they should in the flames she meant t' inspire.
 Then put she on all her religious weeds,
 That decked her in her secret sacred deeds ;
 A crown of icicles, that sun nor fire
 Could ever melt, and figur'd chaste desire ;
 A golden star shined in her naked breast,
 In honour of the queen-light of the east.
 In her right hand she held a silver wand,
 On whose bright top Peristera did stand. 20
 Who was a nymph, but now transformed a dove,
 And in her life was dear in Venus' love ;
 And for her sake she ever since that time
 Choosed doves to draw her coach through heaven's blue clime.

Her plenteous hair in curlèd billows swims
 On her bright shoulder : her harmonious limbs
 Sustained no more but a most subtile veil,
 That hung on them, as it durst not assail
 Their different concord ; for the weakest air
 Could raise it swelling from her beauties fair ; 30
 Nor did it cover, but adumbrate only
 Her most heart-piercing parts, that a blest eye
 Might see, as it did shadow, fearfully,

All that all-love-deserving paradise :
 It was as blue as the most freezing skies ;
 Near the sea's hue, for thence her goddess came :
 On it a scarf she wore of wondrous frame ;
 In midst whereof she wrought a virgin's face,
 From whose each cheek a fiery blush did chase
 Two crimson flames, that did two ways extend, 40
 Spreading the ample scarf to either end ;
 Which figur'd the division of her mind,
 Whiles yet she rested bashfully inclin'd,
 And stood not resolute to wed Leander ;
 This serv'd her white neck for a purple sphere,
 And cast itself at full breadth down her back :
 There, since the first breath that begun the wrack
 Of her free quiet from Leander's lips,
 She wrought a sea, in one flame, full of ships ;
 But that one ship where all her wealth did pass, 50
 Like simple merchants' goods, Leander was ;
 For in that sea she naked figured him ;
 Her diving needle taught him how to swim,
 And to each thread did such resemblance give,
 For joy to be so like him it did live :
 Things senseless live by art, and rational die
 By rude contempt of art and industry.
 Scarce could she work, but, in her strength of thought,
 She fear'd she prick'd Leander as she wrought, ¹

¹ "This conceit was suggested to Chapman by a passage in Skelton's Phyllyp Sparowe :

"But whan I was sowing his beke,
 Methought, my sparow did speke,

And oft would shriek so, that her guardian, frighted, 60
 Would startling haste, as with some mischief cited :
 They double life that dead things' griefs sustain ;
 They kill that feel not their friends' living pain.
 Sometimes she fear'd he sought her infamy ;
 And then, as she was working of his eye,
 She thought to prick it out to quench her ill ;
 But, as she prick'd, it grew more perfect still :
 Trifling attempts no serious acts advance ;
 The fire of love is blown by dalliance.
 In working his fair neck she did so grace it, 70
 She still was working her own arms t' embrace it :
 That, and his shoulders, and his hands were seen
 Above the stream ; and with a pure sea-green
 She did so quaintly shadow every limb,
 All might be seen beneath the waves to swim.

In this conceited scarf she wrought beside
 A moon in change, and shooting stars did glide
 In number after her with bloody beams ;
 Which figur'd her affects ¹ in their extremes,
 Pursuing nature in her Cynthian body, 80
 And did her thoughts running on change imply ;
 For maids take more delight, when they prepare,
 And think of wives' states, than when wives they are.

And opened his pretie byll,
 Saynge, Mayd, ye are in wyll
 Agayne me for to kyll,
 Ye prycke me in the head.*

—Works, I, 57, ed. Dyce."—Dyce,

¹ Affections.

Beneath all these she wrought a fisherman,¹
 Drawing his nets from forth the ocean ;
 Who drew so hard, ye might discover well
 The toughen'd sinews in his neck did swell :
 His inward strains drave out his blood-shot eyes,
 And springs of sweat did in his forehead rise ;
 Yet was of naught but of a serpent sped, 90
 That in his bosom flew and stung him dead :
 And this by Fate into her mind was sent,
 Not wrought by mere instinct of her intent.
 At the scarf's other end her hand did frame,
 Near the fork'd point of the divided flame,
 A country virgin keeping of a vine,
 Who did of hollow bulrushes combine
 Snares for the stubble-loving grasshopper,
 And by her lay her scrip that nourish'd her.
 Within a myrtle shade she sate and sung ; 100
 And tufts of waving reeds above her sprung,
 Where lurked two foxes, that, while she applied
 Her trifling snares, their thieveries did divide,
 One to the vine, another to her scrip,
 That she did negligently overslip ;
 By which her fruitful vine and wholesome fare
 She suffered spoiled to make a childish snare.
 These ominous fancies did her soul express,
 And every finger made a prophetess,

To show what death was hid in love's disguise, 110
 And make her judgment conquer Destinies.
 O, what sweet forms fair ladies' souls do shroud,
 Were they made seen and forcèd through their blood ;
 If through their beauties, like rich work through lawn,
 They would set forth their minds with virtues drawn,
 In letting graces from their fingers fly,
 To still their eyas¹ thoughts with industry ;
 That their plied wits in numbered silks might sing
 Passion's huge conquest, and their needles² leading Affection prisoner through their own-built cities, 120
 Pinioned with stories and Arachnean ditties.

Proceed we now with Hero's sacrifice :

She odours burned, and from their smoke did rise
 Unsavoury fumes, that air with plagues inspired ;
 And then the consecrated sticks she fired.
 On whose pale flames an angry spirit flew,
 And beat it down still as it upward grew ;
 The virgin tapers that on th' altar stood,
 When she inflam'd them, burned as red as blood ;³
 All sad ostents of that too near success,⁴ 130
 That made such moving beauties motionless.
 Then Hero wept ; but her affrighted eyes
 She quickly wrested from the sacrifice,

¹ "Eyas" is the name for an unfledged hawk. "Eyas thoughts" would mean "thoughts not yet full-grown,—immature." Dyce thinks the meaning of "eyas" here may be "restless," (Old eds. "yas.")

² A monosyllable.

³ Some eds. give "them, then they burned as blood."

⁴ Approaching catastrophe.

Shut them, and inwards for Leander looked,
Search'd her soft bosom, and from thence she plucked
His lovely picture ; which when she had viewed,
Her beauties were with all love's joys renewed ;
The odours sweeten'd, and the fires burned clear,
Leander's form left no ill object there :
Such was his beauty, that the force of light, 140
Whose knowledge teacheth wonders infinite,
The strength of number and proportion,
Nature had placed in it to make it known,
Art was her daughter, and what human wits
For study lost, entombed in drossy spirits.
After this accident (which for her glory
Hero could not but make a history),
Th' inhabitants of Sestos and Abydos
Did every year, with feasts propitious,
To fair Leander's picture sacrifice : 150
And they were persons of especial price
That were allowed it, as an ornament
T' enrich their houses, for the continent
Of the strange virtues all approved it held ;
For even the very look of it repelled
All blastings, witchcrafts, and the strifes of nature
In those diseases that no herbs could cure ;
The wolfy sting of avarice it would pull,
And make the rankest miser bountiful ;
It kill'd the fear of thunder and of death ; 160
The discords that conceit engendereth
'Twixt man and wife, it for the time would cease ;
The flames of love it quench'd, and would increase ;

Held in a prince's hand, it would put out
 The dreadful'st comet ; it would ease¹ all doubt
 Of threaten'd mischiefs ; it would bring asleep
 Such as were mad ; it would enforce to weep
 Most barbarous eyes ; and many more effects
 This picture wrought, and sprung² Leandrian³ sects ;
 Of which was Hero first ; for he whose form, 170
 Held in her hand, clear'd such a fatal storm,
 From hell she thought his person would defend her,
 Which night and Hellespont would quickly send her.
 With this confirm'd, she vow'd to banish quite
 All thought of any check to her delight ;
 And, in contempt of silly bashfulness,
 She would the faith of her desires profess,
 Where her religion should be policy,
 To follow love with zeal her piety ;
 Her chamber her cathedral-church should be, 180
 And her Leander her chief deity ;
 For in her love these did the gods forego ;
 And though her knowledge did not teach her so,
 Yet did it teach her this, that what her heart
 Did greatest hold in her self-greatest part,
 That she did make her god ; and 'twas less naught
 To leave gods in profession and in thought,
 Than in her love and life ; for therein lies
 Most of her duties and their dignities ;

And, rail the brain-bald world at what it will, 190
 That's the grand atheism that reigns in it still.
 Yet singularity she would use no more,
 For she was singular too much before ;
 But she would please the world with fair pretext :
 Love would not leave her conscience perplext :
 Great men that will have less do for them, still Must bear them out, though th' acts be ne'er so ill ;
 Meanness must pander be to Excellence ;
 Pleasure atones Falsehood and Conscience :
 Dissembling was the worst, thought Hero then, 200
 And that was best, now she must live with men.
 O virtuous love, that taught her to do best
 When she did worst, and when she thought it least !
 Thus would she still proceed in works divine,
 And in her sacred state of priesthood shine,
 Handling the holy rites with hands as bold,
 As if therein she did Jove's thunder hold,
 And need not fear those menaces of error,
 Which she at others threw with greatest terror.
 O lovely Hero, nothing is thy sin, 210
 Weigh'd with those foul faults other priests are in !
 That having neither faiths, nor works, nor beauties,
 T' engender any 'scuse for slubbered¹ duties,
 With as much countenance fill their holy chairs,
 And sweat denouncements 'gainst profane affairs,

¹ Shakespeare uses the verb "slubber" in the sense of "perform in a slovenly manner" (Merchant of Venice, ii, 8, "Slubber not business for my sake").

As if their lives were cut out by their places,
And they the only fathers of the graces.

Now, as with settled mind she did repair
Her thoughts to sacrifice her ravished hair
And her torn robe, which on the altar lay, 220
And only for religion's fire did stay,
She heard a thunder by the Cyclops beaten,
In such a volley as the world did threaten,
Given Venus as she parted th' airy sphere,
Descending now to chide with Hero here :
When suddenly the goddess' waggoners,
The swans and turtles that, in coupled pheres,¹
Through all worlds' bosoms draw her influence,
Lighted in Hero's window, and from thence
To her fair shoulders flew the gentle doves,— 230
Graceful *Ædone*² that sweet pleasure loves,
And ruff-foot *Chreste*³ with the tufted crown ;
Both which did kiss her, though their goddess frown.
The swans did in the solid flood, her glass,
Proin⁴ their fair plumes ; of which the fairest was Jove-lov'd Leucote,⁵ that pure brightness is ;
The other bounty-loving Dapsilis.⁶
All were in heaven, now they with Hero were :
But Venus' looks brought wrath, and urgèd fear.

Her robe was scarlet ; black her head's attire : 240
And through her naked breast shin'd streams of fire,
As when the rarified air is driven
In flashing streams, and opes the darken'd heaven.
In her white hand a wreath of yew she bore ;
And, breaking th' icy wreath sweet Hero wore,
She forc'd about her brows her wreath of yew,
And said, "Now, minion, to thy fate be true,
Though not to me ; endure what this portends :
Begin where lightness will, in shame it ends.
Love makes thee cunning ; thou art current now, 250
By being counterfeit : thy broken vow
Deceit with her pied garters must rejoin,
And with her stamp thou countenances must coin ;
Coyness, and pure¹ deceits, for purities,
And still a maid wilt seem in cozen'd eyes,
And have an antic face to laugh within,
While thy smooth looks make men digest thy sin.
But since thy lips (least thought forsworn) forswore,
Be never virgin's vow worth trusting more !"

When Beauty's dearest did her goddess hear 260
Breathe such rebukes 'gainst that she could not clear,
Dumb sorrow spake aloud in tears and blood,
That from her grief-burst veins, in piteous flood,
From the sweet conduits of her favour fell.
The gentle turtles did with moans make swell
Their shining gorges ; the while black-ey'd swans
Did sing as woful epicedians,

As they would straightways die : when Pity's queen,
 The goddess Ecte,¹ that had ever been
 Hid in a watery cloud near Hero's cries, 270
 Since the first instant of her broken eyes,
 Gave bright Leucote voice, and made her speak,
 To ease her anguish, whose swoln breast did break
 With anger at her goddess, that did touch
 Hero so near for that she us'd so much ;
 And, thrusting her white neck at Venus, said :
 " Why may not amorous Hero seem a maid,
 Though she be none, as well as you suppress
 In modest cheeks your inward wantonness ?
 How often have we drawn you from above, 280
 T' exchange with mortals rites for rites in love !
 Why in your priest, then, call you that offence,
 That shines in you, and is ² your influence ?"
 With this, the Furies stopp'd Leucote's lips,
 Enjoin'd by Venus ; who with rosy whips
 Beat the kind bird. Fierce lightning from her eyes
 Did set on fire fair Hero's sacrifice,
 Which was her torn robe and enforcèd hair ;
 And the bright flame became a maid most fair
 For her aspèct : her tresses were of wire, 290
 Knit like a net, where hearts set all on fire,
 Struggled in pants, and could not get releast ;
 Her arms were all with golden pincers drest,

And twenty-fashioned knots, pulleys, and brakes,
 And all her body girt with painted snakes ;
 Her down-parts in a scorpion's tail combined,
 Freckled with twenty colours ; pied wings shined
 Out of her shoulders ; cloth had never dye,
 Nor sweeter colours never viewèd eye,
 In scorching Turkey, Cares, Tartary, 300
 Than shined about this spirit notorious ;
 Nor was Arachne's web so glorious.
 Of lightning and of shreds she was begot ;
 More hold in base dissemblers is there not.
 Her name was Eronusis.¹ Venus flew
 From Hero's sight, and at her chariot drew
 This wondrous creature to so steep a height,
 That all the world she might command with sleight
 Of her gay wings ; and then she bade her haste,—
 Since Hero had dissembled, and disgraced 310
 Her rites so much,—and every breast infect
 With her deceits : she made her architect
 Of all dissimulation ; and since then
 Never was any trust in maids or men.

O, it spited

Fair Venus' heart to see her most delighted,
 And one she choos'd, for temper of her mind
 To be the only ruler of her kind,
 So soon to let her virgin race be ended !
 Not simply for the fault a whit offended, 320

¹ "A compound, probably, from ἔρων and νόσος or νοῦσος Ionice."
Ed. 1821.

But that in strife for chasteness with the Moon,
 Spiteful Diana bade her show but one
 That was her servant vow'd, and liv'd a maid ;
 And, now she thought to answer that upbraid,
 Hero had lost her answer : who knows not
 Venus would seem as far from any spot
 Of light demeanour, as the very skin
 'Twixt Cynthia's brows ? sin is asham'd of sin.
 Up Venus flew, and scarce durst up for fear
 Of Phœbe's laughter, when she pass'd her sphere : 330
 And so most ugly-clouded was the light,
 That day was hid in day ; night came ere night ;
 And Venus could not through the thick air pierce,
 Till the day's king, god of undaunted verse,
 Because she was so plentiful a theme
 To such as wore his laurel anademe.
 Like to a fiery bullet made descent,
 And from her passage those fat vapours rent,
 That being not throughly rarified to rain,
 Melted like pitch, as blue as any vein ; 340
 And scalding tempests made the earth to shrink
 Under their fervour, and the world did think
 In every drop a torturing spirit flew,
 It pierc'd so deeply, and it burn'd so blue.
 Betwixt all this and Hero, Hero held
 Leander's picture, as a Persian shield ;
 And she was free from fear of worst success :
 The more ill threats us, we suspect the less :
 As we grow hapless, violence subtle grows,
 Dumb, deaf, and blind, and comes when no man knows. 350

THE FIFTH SESTIAD.

The Argument of the Fifth Sestiad.

Day doubles his accustom'd date,
 As loath the Night, incens'd by Fate,
 Should wreck our lovers. Hero's plight ;
 Longs for Leander and the night :
 Which ere her thirsty wish recovers,
 She sends for two betrothèd lovers,
 And marries them, that, with their crew,
 Their sports, and ceremonies due,
 She covertly might celebrate,
 With secret joy her own estate.
 She makes a feast, at which appears
 The wild nymph Teras, that still bears
 An ivory lute, tells ominous tales,
 And sings at solemn festivals.

Now was bright Hero weary of the day,
 Thought an Olympiad in Leander's stay.
 Sol and the soft-foot Hours hung on his arms,
 And would not let him swim, foreseeing his harms :
 That day Aurora double grace obtain'd
 Of her love Phœbus ; she his horses reign'd,
 Set¹ on his golden knee, and, as she list,
 She pull'd him back ; and as she pull'd she kiss'd,

To have him turn to bed : he lov'd her more,
 To see the love Leander Hero bore : 10
 Examples profit much ; ten times in one,
 In persons full of note, good deeds are done.

Day was so long, men walking fell asleep ;
 The heavy humours that their eyes did steep
 Made them fear mischiefs. The hard streets were beds
 For covetous churls and for ambitious heads,
 That, spite of Nature, would their business ply :
 All thought they had the falling epilepsy,
 Men grovell'd so upon the smother'd ground ;
 And pity did the heart of Heaven confound. 20
 The Gods, the Graces, and the Muses came Down to the Destinies, to stay the frame
 Of the true lovers' deaths, and all world's tears :
 But Death before had stopp'd their cruel ears.
 All the celestials parted mourning then,
 Pierc'd with our human miseries more than men :
 Ah, nothing doth the world with mischief fill,
 But want of feeling one another's ill !

With their descent the day grew something fair,
 And cast a brighter robe upon the air. 30
 Hero, to shorten time with merriment,
 For young Alcmane¹ and bright Mya sent,
 Two lovers that had long crav'd marriage-dues
 At Hero's hands : but she did still refuse ;
 For lovely Mya was her consort vow'd
 In her maid state, and therefore not allow'd

To amorous nuptials : yet fair Hero now
 Intended to dispense with her cold vow,
 Since hers was broken, and to marry her :
 The rites would pleasing matter minister 40
 To her conceits, and shorten tedious day.
 They came ; sweet Music usher'd th' odorous way,
 And wanton Air in twenty sweet forms danced
 After her fingers ; Beauty and Love advanced
 Their ensigns in the downless rosy faces
 Of youths and maids led after by the Graces.
 For all these Hero made a friendly feast,
 Welcom'd them kindly, did much love protest,
 Winning their hearts with all the means she might.
 That, when her fault should chance t' abide the light 50
 Their loves might cover or extenuate it,
 And high in her worst fate make pity sit.

She married them ; and in the banquet came,
 Borne by the virgins. Hero striv'd to frame
 Her thoughts to mirth : ay me ! but hard it is
 To imitate a false and forcèd bliss ;
 Ill may a sad mind forge a merry face,
 Nor hath constrainèd laughter any grace.
 Then laid she wine on cares to make them sink :
 Who fears the threats of Fortune, let him drink.¹ 60

To these quick nuptials enter'd suddenly
 Admirèd Teras with the ebon thigh ;

¹ "Chapman has a passage very similar to this in his Widow's Tears, Act iv. :—

'Wine is ordained to raise such hearts as sink :
 Whom woful stars distemper let him drink.'—Broughton.

A nymph that haunted the green Sestian groves,
 And would consort soft virgins in their loves,
 At gaysome triumphs and on solemn days,
 Singing prophetic elegies and lays,
 And fingering of a silver lute she tied
 With black and purple scarfs by her left side.
 Apollo gave it, and her skill withal,
 And she was term'd his dwarf, she was so small : 70
 Yet great in virtue, for his beams enclosed
 His virtues in her ; never was proposed
 Riddle to her, or augury, strange or new,
 But she resolv'd it ; never slight tale flew
 From her charm'd lips without important sense,
 Shown in some grave succeeding consequence.

This little sylvan, with her songs and tales,
 Gave such estate to feasts and nuptials,
 That though oftentimes she forewent tragedies,
 Yet for her strangeness still she pleas'd their eyes ; 80
 And for her smallness they admir'd her so,
 They thought her perfect born, and could not grow.

All eyes were on her. Hero did command
 An altar deck'd with sacred state should stand
 At the feast's upper end, close by the bride,
 On which the pretty nymph might sit espied.
 Then all were silent ; every one so hears,
 As all their senses climb'd into their ears :
 And first this amorous tale, that fitted well
 Fair Hero and the nuptials, she did tell. 90

The Tale of Teras.

Hymen, that now is god of nuptial rites,
And crowns with honour Love and his delights,
Of Athens was a youth, so sweet of face,
That many thought him of the female race ;
Such quickening brightness did his clear eyes dart,
Warm went their beams to his beholder's heart,
In such pure leagues his beauties were combin'd,
That there your nuptial contracts first were signed ;
For as proportion, white and crimson, meet
In beauty's mixture, all right clear and sweet, 100
The eye responsible, the golden hair,
And none is held, without the other, fair ;
All spring together, all together fade ;
Such intermix'd affections should invade
Two perfect lovers ; which being yet unseen,
Their virtues and their comforts copied been
In beauty's concord, subject to the eye ;
And that, in Hymen, pleased so matchlessly,
That lovers were esteemed in their full grace,
Like form and colour mixed in Hymen's face ; 110
And such sweet concord was thought worthy then
Of torches, music, feasts, and greatest men :
So Hymen look'd that even the chastest mind
He mov'd to join in joys of sacred kind ;
For only now his chin's first down consorted
His head's rich fleece in golden curls contorted ;
And as he was so loved, he loved so too :
So should best beauties bound by nuptials, do.

Bright Eucharis, who was by all men said
 The noblest, fairest, and the richest maid 120
 Of all th' Athenian damsels, Hymen lov'd
 With such transmission, that his heart remov'd
 From his white breast to hers: but her estate,
 In passing his, was so interminate
 For wealth and honour, that his love durst feed
 On naught but sight and hearing, nor could breed

Hope of requital, the grand prize of love;
 Nor could he hear or see, but he must prove
 How his rare beauty's music would agree
 With maids in consort; therefore robbèd he 130
 His chin of those same few first fruits it bore,
 And, clad in such attire as virgins wore,
 He kept them company, and might right well,
 For he did all but Eucharis excel
 In all the fair of beauty! yet he wanted
 Virtue to make his own desires implanted
 In his dear Eucharis; for women never
 Love beauty in their sex, but envy ever.
 His judgment yet, that durst not suit address,
 Nor, past due means, presume of due success, 140
 Reason gat Fortune in the end to speed
 To his best prayers¹: but strange it seemed, indeed,

That Fortune should a chaste affection bless:
 Preferment seldom graceth bashfulness.

Nor grac'd it Hymen yet ; but many a dart,
 And many an amorous thought, enthralled¹ his heart,
 Ere he obtained her ; and he sick became,
 Forced to abstain her sight ; and then the flame
 Raged in his bosom. O, what grief did fill him !
 Sight made him sick, and want of sight did kill him.

150

The virgins wonder'd where Diætia stay'd,
 For so did Hymen term himself, a maid.
 At length with sickly looks he greeted them :
 Tis strange to see 'gainst what an extreme stream
 A lover strives ; poor Hymen look'd so ill,
 That as in merit he increas'd still
 By suffering much, so he in grace decreas'd :
 Women are most won, when men merit least :
 If Merit look not well, Love bids stand by ;
 Love's special lesson is to please the eye.
 And Hymen soon recovering all he lost,
 Deceiving still these maids, but himself most,
 His love and he with many virgin dames,
 Noble by birth, noble by beauty's flames,
 Leaving the town with songs and hallow'd lights
 To do great Ceres Eleusina rites
 Of zealous sacrifice, were made a prey
 To barbarous rovers, that in ambush lay,
 And with rude hands enforc'd their shining spoil,
 Far from the darkened city, tired with toil :

160

¹ Dyce reads "enthrill'd" (a word that I do not remember to have seen).

And when the yellow issue of the sky
 Came trooping forth, jealous of cruelty
 To their bright fellows of this under-heaven,
 Into a double night they saw them driven,—
 A horrid cave, the thieves' black mansion ;
 Where, weary of the journey they had gone,
 Their last night's watch, and drunk with their sweet gains,
 Dull Morpheus enter'd, laden with silken chains,
 Stronger than iron, and bound the swelling veins
 And tirèd senses of these lawless swains. 180

But when the virgin lights thus dimly burn'd,
 O, what a hell was heaven in ! how they mourn'd
 And wrung their hands, and wound their gentle forms
 Into the shapes of sorrow ! golden storms
 Fell from their eyes ; as when the sun appears,
 And yet it rains, so show'd their eyes their tears :
 And, as when funeral dames watch a dead corse,
 Weeping about it, telling with remorse
 What pains he felt, how long in pain he lay,
 How little food he ate, what he would say ; 190

And then mix mournful tales of other's deaths,
 Smothering themselves in clouds of their own breaths ;
 At length, one cheering other, call for wine ;
 The golden bowl drinks tears out of their eyne,
 As they drink wine from it ; and round it goes,
 Each helping other to relieve their woes ;
 So cast these virgins' beauties mutual rays,
 One lights another, face the face displays ;
 Lips by reflection kissed, and hands hands shook,
 Even by the whiteness each of other took. 200

But Hymen now used friendly Morpheus' aid,
Slew every thief, and rescued every maid :
And now did his enamour'd passion take Heart from his hearty deed, whose worth did make
His hope of bounteous Eucharis more strong ;
And now came Love with Proteus, who had long
Juggled the little god with prayers and gifts,
Ran through all shapes and varied all his shifts,
To win Love's stay with him, and make him love him.
And when he saw no strength of sleight could move him,
To make him love or stay, he nimbly turned 211
Into Love's self, he so extremely burned.
And thus came Love, with Proteus and his power,
T' encounter Eucharis : first, like the flower
That Juno's milk did spring,¹ the silver lily,
He fell on Hymen's hand, who straight did spy
The bounteous godhead, and with wondrous joy
Offer'd it Eucharis. She, wonderous coy,
Drew back her hand : the subtle flower did woo it,
And, drawing it near, mixed so you could not know it : 220
As two clear tapers mix in one their light,
So did the lily and the hand their white.
She viewed it ; and her view the form bestows
Amongst her spirits ; for, as colour flows
From superficies of each thing we see,
Even so with colours forms emitted be ;
And where Love's form is, Love is ; Love is form :
He entered at the eye ; his sacred storm

Rose from the hand, Love's sweetest instrument :
 It stirred her blood's sea so, that high it went, 230
 And beat in bashful waves 'gainst the white shore
 Of her divided cheeks ; it raged the more,
 Because the tide went 'gainst the haughty wind
 Of her estate and birth : and, as we find,
 In fainting ebbs, the flowery Zephyr hurls
 The green-haired Hellespont, broke in silver curls,
 'Gainst Hero's tower ; but in his blast's retreat,
 The waves obeying him, they after beat,
 Leaving the chalky shore a great way pale,
 Then moist it freshly with another gale ; 240
 So ebb'd and flow'd the blood¹ in Eucharis' face,
 Coyness and Love strived which had greatest grace ;
 Virginitie did fight on Coyness' side,
 Fear of her parent's frowns and female pride
 Loathing the lower place, more than it loves
 The high contents desert and virtue moves.
 With Love fought Hymen's beauty and his valure,²
 Which scarce could so much favour yet allure
 To come to strike, but fameless idle stood :
 Action is fiery valour's sovereign good. 250
 But Love, once entered, wished no greater aid
 Than he could find within ; thought thought betray'd ;
 The bribed, but incorrupted, garrison
 Sung "Io Hymen ;" there those songs begun,

¹ So the Isham copy. All other editions omit the words "the blood."

² "Valure" is frequently found as a form of "value ;" but I suspect, with Dyce, that it is here put (metri causa) for "valour."

And Love was grown so rich with such a gain,
 And wanton with the ease of his free reign,
 That he would turn into her roughest frowns
 To turn them out ; and thus he Hymen crowns
 King of his thoughts, man's greatest empery :
 This was his first brave step to deity. 260

Home to the mourning city they repair,
 With news as wholesome as the morning air,
 To the sad parents of each savèd maid :
 But Hymen and his Eucharis had laid
 This plat ¹ to make the flame of their delight
 Round as the moon at full, and full as bright.

Because the parents of chaste Eucharis
 Exceeding Hymen's so, might cross their bliss ;
 And as the world rewards deserts, that law
 Cannot assist with force ; so when they saw 270
 Their daughter safe, take vantage of their own,
 Praise Hymen's valour much, nothing bestown ;
 Hymen must leave the virgins in a grove
 Far off from Athens, and go first to prove,
 If to restore them all with fame and life,
 He should enjoy his dearest as his wife.
 This told to all the maids, the most agree :
 The riper sort, knowing what 'tis to be
 The first mouth of a news so far derived,
 And that to hear and bear news brave folks lived. 280
 As being a carriage special hard to bear
 Occurrents, these occurrents being so dear,

¹ Plot.

They did with grace protest, they were content
 T' accost their friends with all their compliment,
 For Hymen's good ; but to incur their harm,
 There he must pardon them. This wit went warm
 To Adolesche's¹ brain, a nymph born high,
 Made all of voice and fire, that upwards fly :
 Her heart and all her forces' nether train
 Climb'd to her tongue, and thither fell her brain, 290
 Since it could go no higher ; and it must go ;
 All powers she had, even her tongue, did so :
 In spirit and quickness she much joy did take,
 And loved her tongue, only for quickness' sake ;
 And she would haste and tell. The rest all stay :
 Hymen goes one, the nymph another way ;
 And what became of her I'll tell at last :
 Yet take her visage now ;—moist-lipped, long-faced,
 Thin like an iron wedge, so sharp and tart,
 As 'twere of purpose made to cleave Love's heart : 300
 Well were this lovely beauty rid of her.
 And Hymen did at Athens now prefer
 His welcome suit, which he with joy aspired :
 A hundred princely youths with him retired
 To fetch the nymphs ; chariots and music went ;
 And home they came : heaven with applauses rent.
 The nuptials straight proceed, whiles all the town,
 Fresh in their joys, might do them most renown.
 First, gold-locked Hymen did to church repair,
 Like a quick offering burned in flames of hair ; 310

And after, with a virgin firmament
The godhead-proving bride attended went
Before them all: she looked in her command,
As if form-giving Cypria's silver hand
Gripped all their beauties, and crushed out one flame;
She blushed to see how beauty overcame
The thoughts of all men. Next, before her went
Five lovely children, decked with ornament
Of her sweet colours, bearing torches by;
For light was held a happy augury 320
Of generation, whose efficient right
Is nothing else but to produce to light.
The odd disparent number they did choose,
To show the union married loves should use,
Since in two equal parts it will not sever,
But the midst holds one to rejoin it ever,
As common to both parts: men therefore deem
That equal number gods do not esteem,
Being authors of sweet peace and unity,
But pleasing to th' infernal empery, 330
Under whose ensigns Wars and Discords fight,
Since an even number you may disunite
In two parts equal, naught in middle left
To reunite each part from other reft;
And five they hold in most especial prize,¹
Since 'tis the first odd number that doth rise
From the two foremost numbers' unity,
That odd and even are; which are two and three;

For one no number is ; but thence doth flow
 The powerful race of number. Next, did go 340
 A noble matron, that did spinning bear
 A huswife's rock and spindle, and did wear
 A wether's skin, with all the snowy fleece,
 To intimate that even the daintiest piece
 And noblest-born dame should industrious be :
 That which does good disgraceth no degree.

And now to Juno's temple they are come,
 Where her grave priest stood in the marriage-room :
 On his right arm did hang a scarlet veil,
 And from his shoulders to the ground did trail, 350
 On either side, ribands of white and blue :
 With the red veil he hid the bashful hue
 Of the chaste bride, to show the modest shame,
 In coupling with a man, should grace a dame.
 Then took he the disparent silks, and tied
 The lovers by the waists, and side to side,
 In token that thereafter they must bind
 In one self-sacred knot each other's mind.
 Before them on an altar he presented
 Both fire and water, which was first invented, 360
 Since to ingenerate every human creature
 And every other birth produc'd by Nature,
 Moisture and heat must mix ; so man and wife
 For human race must join in nuptial life.
 Then one of Juno's birds, the painted jay,
 He sacrific'd and took the gall away ;
 All which he did behind the altar throw,
 In sign no bitterness of hate should grow,

'Twixt married loves, nor any least disdain.
 Nothing they spake, for 'twas esteem'd too plain 370
 For the most silken mildness of a maid,
 To let a public audience hear it said,
 She boldly took the man ; and so respected
 Was bashfulness in Athens, it erected
 To chaste Agneia,¹ which is Shamefacedness,
 A sacred temple, holding her a goddess.
 And now to feasts, masks, and triumphant shows,
 The shining troops returned, even till earth-throes
 Brought forth with joy the thickest part of night,
 When the sweet nuptial song, that used to cite 380
 All to their rest, was by Phemonöe² sung,
 First Delphian prophetess, whose graces sprung
 Out of the Muses' well : she sung before
 The bride into her chamber ; at which door
 A matron and a torch-bearer did stand ;
 A painted box of confits³ in her hand
 The matron held, and so did other some⁴
 That compassed round the honour'd nuptial room.
 The custom was, that every maid did wear,
 During her maidenhead, a silken sphere 390
 About her waist, above her inmost weed,
 Knit with Minerva's knot, and that was freed

³ Comfits.

⁴ "Other some" is a not uncommon form of expression. See Halliwell's Dict. of Archaic and Provincial Words.

By the fair bridegroom on the marriage-night,
 With many ceremonies of delight :
 And yet eternized Hymen's tender bride,
 To suffer it dissolved so, sweetly cried.
 The maids that heard, so loved and did adore her,
 They wished with all their hearts to suffer for her.
 So had the matrons, that with confits stood
 About the chamber, such affectionate blood, 400
 And so true feeling of her harmless pains,
 That every one a shower of confits rains ;
 For which the bride-youths scrambling on the ground,
 In noise of that sweet hail her¹ cries were drown'd.
 And thus blest Hymen joyed his gracious bride,
 And for his joy was after deified.
 The saffron mirror by which Phœbus' love,
 Green Tellus, decks her, now he held above
 The cloudy mountains : and the noble maid,
 Sharp-visaged Adolesche, that was stray'd 410
 Out of her way, in hasting with her news,
 Not till this² hour th' Athenian turrets views ;
 And now brought home by guides, she heard by all,
 That her long kept occurrents would be stale,
 And how fair Hymen's honours did excel
 For those rare news which she came short to tell.
 To hear her dear tongue robbed of such a joy,
 Made the well-spoken nymph take such a toy,³

³ A sudden pettishness or freak of fancy. Cf. Two Noble Kinsmen :—

"The hot horse hot as fire

Took toy at this."

That down she sunk : when lightning from above
 Shrunk her lean body, and, for mere free love, 420
 Turn'd her into the pied-plum'd Psittacus,
 That now the Parrot is surnam'd by us,
 Who still with counterfeit confusion prates
 Naught but news common to the common'st mates.—
 This told, strange Teras touch'd her lute, and sung
 This ditty, that the torchy evening sprung.

Epithalamion Teratos.

Come, come, dear Night ! Love's mart of kisses,
 Sweet close to his ambitious line,
 The fruitful summer of his blisses !
 Love's glory doth in darkness shine. 430
 O come, soft rest of cares ! come, Night !
 Come, naked Virtue's only tire,
 The reapèd harvest of the light,
 Bound up in sheaves of sacred fire !
 Love calls to war ;
 Sighs his alarms,
 Lips his swords are,
 The field his arms.

Come, Night, and lay thy velvet hand
 On glorious Day's outfacing face ; 440
 And all thy crownèd flames command,
 For torches to our nuptial grace !
 Love calls to war ;
 Sighs his alarms,

Lips his swords are,
The field his arms.

No need have we of factious Day,
To cast, in envy of thy peace,
Her balls of discord in thy way :

Here Beauty's day doth never cease ; 450

Day is abstracted here,

And varied in a triple sphere.

Hero, Alcmane, Mya, so outshine thee,

Ere thou come here, let Thetis thrice refine thee.

Love calls to war ;

Sighs his alarms,

Lips his swords are,

The field his arms.

The evening star I see :

Rise, youths ! the evening star 460

Helps Love to summon war ;

Both now embracing be.

Rise, youths ! Love's rite claims more than banquets ;
rise !

Now the bright marigolds, that deck the skies,

Phœbus' celestial flowers, that, contrary

To his flowers here, ope when he shuts his eye,

And shuts when he doth open, crown your sports :

Now Love in Night, and Night in Love exhorts

Courtship and dances : all your parts employ,

And suit Night's rich expansure with your joy. 470

Love paints his longings in sweet virgins' eyes :

Rise, youths ! Love's rite claims more than banquets ; rise !

Rise, virgins ! let fair nuptial loves enfold
 Your fruitless breasts : the maidenheads¹ ye hold
 Are not your own alone, but parted are ;
 Part in disposing them your parents share,
 And that a third part is ; so must ye save
 Your loves a third, and you your thirds must have.
 Love paints his longings in sweet virgins' eyes :
 Rise, youths ! Love's rite claims more than banquets ;
 rise ! 480

Herewith the amorous spirit, that was so kind
 To Teras' hair, and comb'd it down with wind,
 Still as it, comet-like, brake from her brain,
 Would needs have Teras gone, and did refrain
 To blow it down : which, staring² up, dismay'd
 The timorous feast ; and she no longer stay'd ;
 But, bowing to the bridegroom and the bride,
 Did, like a shooting exhalation, glide
 Out of their sights : the turning of her back
 Made them all shriek, it look'd so ghastly black. 490
 O hapless Hero ! that most hapless cloud
 Thy soon-succeeding tragedy foreshow'd.

¹ Former editors have not noticed that Chapman is here closely imitating Catullus' Carmen Nuptiale—

“Virginitas non tota tua est : ex parte parentum est :
 Tertia pars patri data, pars data tertia matri,
 Tertia sola tua est : noli pugnare duobus,
 Qui genero sua jura simul cum dote dederunt.”

² Some eds. “startling.” Cf. Julius Cæsar, iv. 3, ll. 278-9—
 “Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
 That makest my blood cold and my hair to stare ?”

Thus all the nuptial crew to joys depart ;
But much-wronged¹ Hero stood Hell's blackest dart :
Whose wound because I grieve so to display,
I use digressions thus t' increase the day.

THE SIXTH SESTIAD.

The Argument of the Sixth Sestiad.

Leucote flies to all the Winds,
 And from the Fates their outrage blinds,¹
 That Hero and her love may meet.
 Leander, with Love's complete fleet
 Manned in himself, puts forth to seas ;
 When straight the ruthless Destinies,
 With, Até, stir the winds to war
 Upon the Hellespont : their jar
 Drowns poor Leander. Hero's eyes,
 Wet witnesses of his surprise,
 Her torch blown out, grief casts her down
 Upon her love, and both doth drown :
 In whose just ruth the god of seas
 Transforms them to th' Acanthides.

10

No longer could the Day nor Destinies
 Delay the Night, who now did frowning rise
 Into her throne ; and at her humorous breasts
 Visions and Dreams lay sucking : all men's rests
 Fell like the mists of death upon their eyes,
 Day's too-long darts so kill'd their faculties.

¹ It should be binds: i.e., Leucote flies to the several winds, and, commissioned by the Fates, commands them to restrain their violence."

Broughton.

The Winds yet, like the flowers, to cease began ;
 For bright Leucote, Venus' whitest swan,
 That held sweet Hero dear, spread her fair wings,
 Like to a field of snow, and message brings 10
 From Venus to the Fates, t'entreat them lay
 Their charge upon the Winds their rage to stay,
 That the stern battle of the seas might cease,
 And guard Leander to his love in peace.
 The Fates consent ;—ay me, dissembling Fates !
 They showed their favours to conceal their hates,
 And draw Leander on, lest seas too high
 Should stay his too obsequious destiny :
 Who¹ like a fleering slavish parasite,
 In warping profit or a traitorous sleight, 20
 Hoops round his rotten body with devotes,
 And pricks his descant face full of false notes ;
 Praising with open throat, and oaths as foul
 As his false heart, the beauty of an owl ;
 Kissing his skipping hand with charmèd skips,
 That cannot leave, but leaps upon his lips
 Like a cock-sparrow, or a shameless quean
 Sharp at a red-lipp'd youth, and naught doth mean
 Of all his antic shows, but doth repair
 More tender fawns,² and takes a scatter'd hair 30

¹ The next few lines are in Chapman's obscurest manner. "Devotes," in l. 21, means, I suppose, "tokens of devotion to his patron."

² Cunningham says, "I cannot perceive the meaning of 'doth repair more tender fawns.'" "Fawns" is equivalent to "fawnings;" and the meaning seems to be, "applies himself to softer blandishments."

From his tame subject's shoulder ; whips and calls
 For everything he lacks ; creeps 'gainst the walls
 With backward humbless, to give needless way :
 Thus his false fate did with Leander play.

First to black Eurus flies the white Leucote
 (Born 'mongst the negroes in the Levant sea,
 On whose curl'd head[s] the glowing sun doth rise),
 And shows the sovereign will of Destinies,
 To have him cease his blasts ; and down he lies.
 Next, to the fenny Notus course she holds, 40
 And found him leaning, with his arms in folds,
 Upon a rock, his white hair full of showers ;
 And him she chargeth by the fatal powers,
 To hold in his wet cheeks his cloudy voice.
 To Zephyr then that doth in flowers rejoice :
 To snake-foot Boreas next she did remove,
 And found him tossing of his ravished love,¹
 To heat his frosty bosom hid in snow ;
 Who with Leucote's sight did cease to blow.
 Thus all were still to Hero's heart's desire ; 50
 Who with all speed did consecrate a fire
 Of flaming gums and comfortable spice,
 To light her torch, which in such curious price
 She held, being object to Leander's sight,
 That naught but fires perfumed must give it light.
 She loved it so, she griev'd to see it burn,
 Since it would waste, and soon to ashes turn :

¹ Orithyia.—The story of the rape of Orithyia is told in a magnificent passage of Mr. Swinburne's Erechtheus.

Yet, if it burned not, 'twere not worth her eyes ;
 What made it nothing, gave it all the prize.
 Sweet torch, true glass of our society ! 60
 What man does good, but he consumes thereby ?
 But thou wert loved for good, held high, given show ;
 Poor virtue loathed for good, obscured, held low :
 Do good, be pined,—be deedless good, disgraced ;
 Unless we feed on men, we let them fast.
 Yet Hero with these thoughts her torch did spend :
 When bees make wax, Nature doth not intend
 It should be made a torch ; but we, that know
 The proper virtue of it, make it so,
 And, when 'tis made, we light it : nor did Nature 70
 Propose one life to maids ; but each such creature
 Makes by her soul the best of her free ¹ state,
 Which without love is rude, disconsolate,
 And wants love's fire to make it mild and bright,
 Till when, maids are but torches wanting light.
 Thus 'gainst our grief, not cause of grief, we fight :
 The right of naught is glean'd, but the delight.
 Up went she : but to tell how she descended,
 Would God she were dead, or my verse ended !
 She was the rule of wishes, sum, and end, 80
 For all the parts that did on love depend :
 Yet cast the torch his brightness further forth ;
 But what shines nearest best, holds truest worth.
 Leander did not through such tempests swim
 To kiss the torch, although it lighted him :

¹ So the Isham copy. Later eds. "true."

But all his powers in her desires awakèd,
Her love and virtues clothed him richly naked.
Men kiss but fire that only shows pursue ;
Her torch and Hero, figure show and virtue.

Now at opposed Abydos naught was heard 90
But bleating flocks, and many a bellowing herd,
Slain for the nuptials ; cracks of falling woods ;
Blows of broad axes ; pourings out of floods.
The guilty Hellespont was mix'd and stained
With bloody torrents¹ that the shambles rained ;
Not arguments of feast, but shows that bled,
Foretelling that red night that followèd.
More blood was spilt, more honours were address'd,
Than could have gracèd any happy feast ;
Rich banquets, triumphs, every pomp employs 100
His sumptuous hand ; no miser's nuptial joys.
Air felt continual thunder with the noise
Made in the general marriage-violence ;
And no man knew the cause of this expense,
But the two hapless lords, Leander's sire,
And poor Leander, poorest where the fire
Of credulous love made him most rich surmis'd :
As short was he of that himself² he prized,
As is an empty gallant full of form,
That thinks each look an act, each drop a storm, 110
That falls from his brave breathings ; most brought up
In our metropolis, and hath his cup

¹ So the Isham copy. Later eds. "torrent."

² Some eds. "himself surpris'd." Dyce gives "himself so priz'd."

Brought after him to feasts ; and much palm bears
 For his rare judgment in th' attire he wears ;
 Hath seen the hot Low-Countries, not their heat,
 Observes their rampires and their buildings yet ;
 And, for your sweet discourse with mouths, is heard

Giving instructions with his very beard ;
 Hath gone with an ambassador, and been
 A great man's mate in travelling, even to Rhene ; 120
 And then puts all his worth in such a face
 As he saw brave men make, and strives for grace
 To get his news forth : as when you descry
 A ship, with all her sail contends to fly
 Out of the narrow Thames with winds unapt,
 Now crosseth here, then there, then this way
 rapt,

And then hath one point reach'd, then alters all,
 And to another crookèd reach doth fall
 Of half a bird-bolt's² shoot, keeping more coil
 Than if she danc'd upon the ocean's toil ; 130
 So serious is his trifling company,
 In all his swelling ship of vacantray
 And so short of himself in his high thought
 Was our Leander in his fortunes brought,
 And in his fort of love that he thought won ;
 But otherwise he scorns comparison.

¹ A short arrow blunted at the end ; it killed birds without piercing them.

O sweet Leander, thy large worth I hide
 In a short grave ! ill-favour'd storms must chide
 Thy sacred favour;¹ I in floods of ink
 Must drown thy graces, which white papers drink, 140
 Even as thy beauties did the foul black seas ;
 I must describe the hell of thy decease,
 That heaven did merit : yet I needs must see
 Our painted fools and cockhorse peasantry
 Still, still usurp, with long lives, loves, and lust,
 The seats of Virtue, cutting short as dust
 Her dear-bought issue : ill to worse converts,
 And tramples in the blood of all deserts.

Night close and silent now goes fast before
 The captains and the soldiers to the shore, 150
 On whom attended the appointed fleet
 At Sestos' bay, that should Leander meet,
 Who feigned he in another ship would pass :
 Which must not be, for no one mean there was
 To get his love home, but the course he took.
 Forth did his beauty for his beauty look,
 And saw her through her torch, as you behold
 Sometimes within the sun a face of gold,
 Formed in strong thoughts, by that tradition's force
 That says a god sits there and guides his course. 160
 His sister was with him ; to whom he show'd
 His guide by sea, and said, " Oft have you view'd
 In one heaven many stars, but never yet
 In one star many heavens till now were met.

¹ Countenance.

See, lovely sister ! see, now Hero shines,
 No heaven but her appears ; each star repines,
 And all are clad in clouds, as if they mourned
 To be by influence of earth out-burned.
 Yet doth she shine, and teacheth Virtue's train
 Still to be constant in hell's blackest reign, 170
 Though even the gods themselves do so entreat
 them

As they did hate, and earth as she would eat them."

Off went his silken robe, and in he leapt,
 Whom the kind waves so licorously cleapt,¹
 Thickening for haste, one in another, so,
 To kiss his skin, that he might almost go
 To Hero's tower, had that kind minute lasted.
 But now the cruel Fates with Até hasted
 To all the winds, and made them battle fight
 Upon the Hellespont, for either's right 180
 Pretended to the windy monarchy ;
 And forth they brake, the seas mixed with the sky,
 And tossed distressed Leander, being in hell,
 As high as heaven : bliss not in height doth dwell.
 The Destinies sate dancing on the waves,
 To see the glorious Winds with mutual braves
 Consume each other : O, true glass, to see
 How ruinous ambitious statists be
 To their own glories ! Poor Leander cried
 For help to sea-born Venus she denied ; 190

To Boreas, that, for his Atthæa's¹ sake
 He would some pity on his Hero take,
 And for his own love's sake, on his desires ;
 But Glory never blows cold Pity's fires.
 Then call'd he Neptune, who, through all the noise,
 Knew with affright his wreck'd Leander's voice,
 And up he rose ; for haste his forehead hit
 'Gainst heaven's hard crystal ; his proud waves he smit
 With his forked sceptre, that could not obey ;
 Much greater powers than Neptune's gave them sway. 200
 They loved Leander so, in groans they brake
 When they came near him ; and such space did take
 'Twixt one another, loath to issue on,
 That in their shallow furrows earth was shown,
 And the poor lover took a little breath :
 But the curst Fates sate spinning of his death
 On every wave, and with the servile Winds
 Tumbled them on him. And now Hero finds,
 By that she felt, her dear Leander's state :
 She wept, and prayed for him to every Fate ; 210
 And every Wind that whipped her with her hair
 About the face, she kissed and spake it fair,
 Kneeled to it, gave it drink out of her eyes
 To quench his thirst : but still their cruelties
 Even her poor torch envied, and rudely beat
 The baiting² flame from that dear food it eat ;

² "The flame taking bait (refreshment), feeding." Dyce. (Old eds. "bating.")

Dear, for it nourish'd her Leander's life ;
 Which with her robe she rescued from their strife ;
 But silk too soft was such hard hearts to break ;
 And she, dear soul, even as her silk, faint, weak, 220
 Could not preserve it ; out, O, out it went !
 Leander still call'd Neptune, that now rent
 His brackish curls, and tore his wrinkled face,
 Where tears in billows did each other chase ;
 And, burst with ruth, he hurl'd his marble mace
 At the stern Fates : it wounded Lachesis
 That drew Leander's thread, and could not miss
 The thread itself, as it her hand did hit,
 But smote it full, and quite did sunder it.
 The more kind Neptune raged, the more he razed 230
 His love's life's fort, and kill'd as he embraced :
 Anger doth still his own mishap increase ;
 If any comfort live, it is in peace.
 O thievish Fates, to let blood, flesh, and sense,
 Build two fair temples for their excellence,
 To robe it with a poisoned influence !
 Though souls' gifts starve, the bodies are held dear
 In ugliest things ; sense-sport preserves a bear :
 But here naught serves our turns : O heaven and earth,
 How most-most wretched is our human birth ! 240
 And now did all the tyrannous crew depart,
 Knowing there was a storm in Hero's heart,
 Greater than they could make, and scorn'd their smart.
 She bow'd herself so low out of her tower,
 That wonder 'twas she fell not ere her hour,

With searching the lamenting waves for him :
Like a poor snail, her gentle supple limb
Hung on her turret's top, so most downright,
As she would dive beneath the darkness quite,
To find her jewel ;—jewel !—her Leander, 250
A name of all earth's jewels pleas'd not her
Like his dear name : “ Leander, still my choice,
Come naught but my Leander ! O my voice,
Turn to Leander ! henceforth be all sounds,
Accents and phrases, that show all griefs' wounds,
Analyzed in Leander ! O black change !
Trumpets, do you, with thunder of your clange,
Drive out this change's horror ! My voice faints :
Where all joy was, now shriek out all complaints !”
Thus cried she ; for her mixèd soul could tell 260
Her love was dead : and when the Morning fell
Prostrate upon the weeping earth for woe,
Blushes, that bled out of her cheeks, did show
Leander brought by Neptune, bruise'd and torn
With cities' ruins he to rocks had worn,
To filthy usuring rocks, that would have blood,
Though they could get of him no other good.
She saw him, and the sight was much-much more
Than might have serv'd to kill her : should her store
Of giant sorrows speak ?—Burst,—die,—bleed, 270
And leave poor plaints to us that shall succeed.
She fell on her love's bosom, hugged it fast,
And with Leander's name she breathed her last.
Neptune for pity in his arms did take them,
Flung them into the air, and did awake them

Like two sweet birds, surnam'd th' Acanthides,
Which we call Thistle-warps, that near no seas
Dare ever come, but still in couples fly,
And feed on thistle-tops, to testify
The hardness of their first life in their last ; 280
The first, in thorns of love, that sorrows past :
And so most beautiful their colours show,
As none (so little) like them ; her sad brow
A sable velvet feather covers quite,
Even like the forehead-cloth that, in the night,
Or when they sorrow, ladies use¹ to wear :
Their wings, blue, red, and yellow, mixed appear :
Colours that, as we construe colours, paint
Their states to life ;—the yellow shows their saint,
The dainty² Venus, left them ; blue their truth ; 290
The red and black, ensigns of death and ruth.
And this true honour from their love-death sprung,—
They were the first that ever poet sung.³

³ In Chapman's day the work of the grammarian Musaeus was supposed to be the genuine production of the fabulous son of Eumolpus.

OVID'S ELEGIES.

ALL the old editions of Marlowe's translation of the Amores are undated, and bear the imprint Middleburgh (in various spellings). It is probable that the copy which Mr. Charles Edmonds discovered at Lamport Hall, Northamptonshire (the seat of Sir Charles Isham, Bart.), is the earliest of extant editions. The title-page of this edition is—Epigrammes and Elegies By I. D. and C. M. At Middleborough 12mo. After the title-page come the Epigrammata, which are signed at the end "I. D." (the initials of Sir John Davies). Following the Epigrammata is a copy of verses headed Ignoto, and then comes a second title-page—Certaine of Ovid's Elegies. By C. Marlowe. At Middleborough. In his preface to a facsimile reprint of the little volume, Mr. Edmonds states his conviction that this edition, notwithstanding the imprint Middleborough, was issued at London from the press of W. Jaggard, who in 1599 printed the Passionate Pilgrime. He grounds his opinion not only on the character of the type and of the misprints, but on the fact that there would be no need for the book to be printed abroad in the first instance. It was not (he thinks) until after June 1599—when (with other books) it was condemned by Archbishop Whitgift to be burnt—that recourse was had to the expedient of reprinting it at Middleburgh. In the notes I refer to this edition as Isham copy.

The next edition, which has the same title-pages as the Isham copy—Epigrammes and Elegies by I. D. and C. M. at Middleborough, 12mo—was certainly, to judge from its general appearance, printed abroad, and by foreigners. The text agrees in the main with that of the Isham copy, but the corruptions are more numerous. I have followed Dyce in referring to this edition as Ed. A.

The Isham copy and Ed. A. contain only a portion of the Elegies. The complete translation appeared in All Ovid's Elegies: 3 Bookes. By C. M. Epigrams by I. D. At Middleborough, 12mo. (Ed. B); and in another edition with the same title-page (Ed. C). The readings of Ed. C. I have occasionally borrowed from Dyce. It is supposed that the book "continued to be printed with Middleburgh on the title, and without date, as late as 1640" (Hazlitt).

OVID'S ELEGIES.

P. OVIDII NASONIS AMORUM.

LIBER PRIMUS.

ELEGIA I.

Quemadmodum a Cupidine, pro bellis amoris scribere coactus sit.

*We which were Ovid's five books, now are three,
For these before the rest preferreth he :
If reading five thou plain'st of tediousness,
Two ta'en away, thy¹ labour will be less ;*

WITH Muse prepared,² I meant to sing of arms,
Choosing a subject fit for fierce alarms :
Both verses were alike till Love (men say)
Began to smile and took one foot away.
Rash boy, who gave thee power to change a line?
We are the Muses' prophets, none of thine.

² Isham copy and ed. A. "vpreard, I meane."

What, if thy mother take Diana's¹ bow,
 Shall Dian fan when love begins to glow?
 In woody groves is't meet that Ceres reign,
 And quiver-bearing Dian till the plain? 10
 Who'll set the fair-tressed Sun in battle-ray
 While Mars doth take the Aonian harp to play?
 Great are thy kingdoms, over-strong and large,
 Ambitious imp, why seek'st thou further charge?
 Are all things thine? the Muses' Tempe thine?
 Then scarce can Phoebus say, "This harp is mine."
 When² in this work's first verse I trod aloft,
 Love slaked my muse, and made my numbers soft:
 I have no mistress nor no favourite,
 Being fittest matter for a wanton wit. 20
 Thus I complained, but Love unlocked his quiver,
 Took out the shaft, ordained my heart to shiver,
 And bent his sinewy bow upon his knee,
 Saying, "Poet, here's a work beseeching thee."
 O, woe is me! he never shoots but hits,
 I burn, love in my idle bosom sits:
 Let my first verse be six, my last five feet:
 Farewell stern war, for blunter poets meet!
 Elegian muse, that warblest amorous lays,
 Girt my shine³ brow with seabank myrtle sprays.⁴ 30

"Quid? si præripiat flavæ Venus arma Minervæ Ventilet accensas flavæ Minerva comas."

² "Cum bene surrexit versu nova pagina, primo!
 At tenuat nervos proximus ille meos."

³ Sheen.

ELEGIA II.

Quod primo amore correptus, in triumphum duci se a
Cupidine patiatur.

What makes my bed seem hard seeing it is soft?
Or why slips down the coverlet so oft?
Although the nights be long I sleep not tho¹
My sides are sore with tumbling to and fro.
Were love the cause it's like I should descry him,
Or lies he close and shoots where none can spy him?
'Twas so; he strook me with a slender dart;
'Tis cruel Love turmoils my captive heart.
Yielding or striving² do we give him might,
Let's yield, a burden easily borne is light. 10
I saw a brandished fire increase in strength,
Which being not shak'd, I saw it die at length.
Young oxen newly yoked are beaten more,
Than oxen which have drawn the plough before:
And rough jades' mouths with stubborn bits are torn,
But managed horses' heads are lightly borne.³
Unwilling lovers, love doth more torment,
Than such as in their bondage feel content.
Lo! I confess, I am thy captive I,
And hold my conquered hands for thee to tie. 20

² So the Isham copy and ed. A. Other eds. "struggling."

³ "Frena minus sentit quisquis ad arma facit."—Marlowe's line strongly supports the view that "bear hard" in Julius Cæsar means "curb, keep a tight rein over" (hence "eye with suspicion"). Cf. Christopher Clifford's School of Horsemanship (1985):—"But the most part of horses takes it [a 'wil of his owne'] through the unskillfulnesse of the rider by bearing too hard a hand upon them," p. 35.

What need'st thou war? I sue to thee for grace :
 With arms to conquer armless men is base.
 Yoke Venus' Doves, put myrtle on thy hair,
 Vulcan will give thee chariots rich and fair :
 The people thee applauding, thou shalt stand,
 Guiding the harmless pigeons with thy hand.
 Young men and women shalt thou lead as thrall,
 So will thy triumph seem magnificent ;
 I, lately caught, will have a new-made wound,
 And captive-like be manacled and bound : 30
 Good meaning, Shame, and such as seek Love's wrack
 Shall follow thee, their hands tied at their back.
 Thee all shall fear, and worship as a king
 Iō triumphing shall thy people sing.
 Smooth speeches, Fear and Rage shall by thee ride,
 Which troops have always been on Cupid's side ;
 Thou with these soldiers conquer'st gods and men,
 Take these away, where is thine honour then ?
 Thy mother shall from heaven applaud this show,
 And on their faces heaps of roses strow, 40
 With beauty of thy wings, thy fair hair gilded,¹
 Ride golden Love in chariots richly builded !
 Unless I err, full many shalt thou burn,
 And give wounds infinite at every turn.
 In spite of thee, forth will thine arrows fly,
 A scorching flame burns all the standers by.

¹ "Our poet's copy of Ovid had 'Tu penna pulchros gemina variante capillos.'"—Dyce. (The true reading "Tu pennas gemma, gemma, variante capillos.")

So, having conquered Inde, was Bacchus' hue ;
Thee pompous birds and him two tigers drew ;
Then seeing I grace thy show in following thee,
Forbear to hurt thyself in spoiling me. 50

Who guards the² conquered with his conquering hands.

Ad amicam.

I ask but right, let her that caught me late,
Either love, or cause that I may never hate ;
I crave³ too much—would she but let me love her ;
Jove knows with such-like prayers I daily move her.
Accept him that shall serve thee all his youth,
Accept him that shall love with spotless truth.
If lofty titles cannot make⁴ me thine,
That am descended but of knightly line,
(Soon may you plough the little land I have ;
I gladly grant my parents given to save ;⁵) 10
Apollo, Bacchus, and the Muses may ;
And Cupid who hath marked me for thy prey ;
My spotless life, which but to gods gives place,
Naked simplicity, and modest grace.
I love but one, and her I love change never,
If men have faith, I'll live with thee for ever.

 And she to whom in shape of swan¹ Jove came;
 And she that on a feigned Bull swam to land,
 Gripping his false horns with her virgin hand,
 So likewise we will through the world be rung

ELEGIA IV.²

Amicam, qua arte quibusque nutibus in caena, presente viro, uti
 debeat, admonet.

Thy husband to a banquet goes with me,
 Pray God it may his latest supper be.
 Shall I sit gazing as a bashful guest,
 While others touch the damsel I love best?
 Wilt lying under him, his bosom clip?
 About thy neck shall he at pleasure skip?
 Marvel not, though the fair bride did incite
 The drunken Centaurs to a sudden fight.
 I am no half horse, nor in woods I dwell,
 Yet scarce my hands from thee contain I well. 10
 But how thou should'st behave thyself now know,
 Nor let the winds away my warnings blow.

Before thy husband come, though I not see
 What may be done, yet there before him be.
 Lie with him gently, when his limbs he spread
 Upon the bed ; but on my foot first tread.
 View me, my becks, and speaking countenance ;
 Take, and return ¹ each secret amorous glance.
 Words without voice shall on my eyebrows sit,
 Lines thou shalt read in wine by my hand writ. 20
 When our lascivious toys come to thy mind,
 Thy rosy cheeks be to thy thumb inclined.
 If aught of me thou speak'st in inward thought,
 Let thy soft finger to thy ear be brought.
 When I, my light, do or say aught that please thee,
 Turn round thy gold ring, as it were to ease thee.
 Strike on the board like them that pray for evil,

⁴ So Dyce for "goblets" of the old eds. ("Rejice libatos illius ore cibos.")

Thy bosom's roseate buds let him not finger,
 Chiefly on thy lips let not his lips linger
 If thou givest kisses, I shall all disclose,¹
 Say they are mine, and hands on thee impose. 40
 Yet this I'll see, but if thy gown aught cover,
 Suspicious fear in all my veins will hover.
 Mingle not thighs, nor to his leg join thine,
 Nor thy soft foot with his hard foot combine.
 I have been wanton, therefore am perplexed,
 And with mistrust of the like measure vexed.
 I and my wench oft under clothes did lurk,
 When pleasure moved us to our sweetest work.
 Do not thou so ; but throw thy mantle hence,
 Lest I should think thee guilty of offence. 50
 Entreat thy husband drink, but do not kiss,
 And while he drinks, to add more do not miss ;
 If he lies down with wine and sleep opprest,
 The thing and place shall counsel us the rest.
 When to go homewards we rise all along
 Have care to walk in middle of the throng.
 There will I find thee or be found by thee,
 There touch whatever thou canst touch of me.
 Ay me ! I warn what profits some few hours !
 But we must part, when heaven with black night
 lours. 60
 At night thy husband clips² thee : I will weep
 And to the doors sight of thyself [will] keep :

² The original has "Nocte vir includet."

Then will he kiss thee, and not only kiss,
But force thee give him my stolen honey-bliss.
Constrained against thy will give it the peasant,
Forbear sweet words, and be your sport unpleasant.
To him I pray it no delight may bring,
Or if it do, to thee no joy thence spring.
But, though this night thy fortune be to try it,
To me to-morrow constantly deny¹ it.

ELEGIA V.

Corinnæ concubitus.

In summer's heat, and mid-time of the day,
To rest my limbs upon a bed I lay ;
One window shut, the other open stood,
Which gave such light as twinkles in a wood,
Like twilight glimpse at setting of the sun,
Or night being past, and yet not day begun ;
Such light to shamefaced maidens must be shown
Where they may sport, and seem to be unknown :
Then came Corinna in a long loose gown,
Her white neck hid with tresses hanging down, 10
Resembling fair Semiramis going to bed,
Or Lais of a thousand wooers sped.²
I snatched her gown : being thin, the harm was small,
Yet strived she to be covered therewithal ;
And striving thus, as one that would be cast,
Betrayed herself, and yielded at the last.

Stark naked as she stood before mine eye,
 Not one wen in her body could I spy.
 What arms and shoulders did I touch and see!
 How apt her breasts were to be pressed by me! 20
 How smooth a belly under her waist saw I,
 How large a leg, and what a lusty thigh!
 To leave the rest, all liked me passing well;
 I clinged her naked¹ body, down she fell:
 Judge you the rest; being tired she bade me kiss;
 Jove send me more such afternoons as this!

ELEGIA VI.²

Ad Janitorem, ut fores sibi aperiat.

Unworthy porter, bound in chains full sore,
 On movèd hooks set ope the churlish door.
 Little I ask, a little entrance make,
 The gate half-ope my bent side in will take.
 Long love my body to such use make[s] slender,
 And to get out dôth like apt members render.
 He shows me how unheard to pass the watch,
 And guides my feet lest, stumbling, falls they catch:
 But in times past I feared vain shades, and night,
 Wondering if any walkèd without light. 10
 Love, hearing it, laughed with his tender mother,
 And smiling said, "Be thou as bold as other."

Forthwith love came ; no dark night-flying sprite,
Nor hands prepared to slaughter, me affright.
Thee fear I too much : only thee I flatter :
Thy lightning can my life in pieces batter.
Why enviest me? this hostile den¹ unbar ;
See how the gates with my tears watered are !
When thou stood'st naked ready to be beat,
For thee I did thy mistress fair entreat. 20
But what entreats for thee sometimes² took place,
(O mischief!) now for me obtain small grace.
Gratis thou mayest be free ; give like for like ;
Night goes away : the door's bar backward strike.
Strike ; so again hard chains shall bind thee never,
Nor servile water shalt thou drink for ever.
Hard-hearted Porter, dost and wilt not hear?
With stiff oak propped the gate doth still appear.
Such rampired gates besieged cities aid ;
In midst of peace why art of arms afraid? 30
Exclud'st a lover, how would'st use a foe?
Strike back the bar, night fast away doth go.
With arms or armèd men I come not guarded ;
I am alone, were furious love discarded.
Although I would, I cannot him cashier,
Before I be divided from my gear.³
See Love with me, wine moderate in my brain,
And on my hairs a crown of flowers remain.

Who fears these arms? who will not go to meet them?
 Night runs away; with open entrance greet them. 40
 Art careless? or is't sleep forbids thee hear,
 Giving the winds my words running in thine ear?
 Well I remember, when I first did hire thee,
 Watching till after midnight did not tire thee.
 But now perchance thy wench with thee doth rest,
 Ah, how thy lot is above my lot blest:
 Though it be so, shut me not out therefore;
 Night goes away: I pray thee ope the door.
 Err we? or do the turnèd hinges sound,
 And opening doors with creaking noise abound?¹ 50
 We err: a strong blast seemed the gates to ope:
 Ay me, how high that gale did lift my hope!
 If Boreas bears² Orithyia's rape in mind,
 Come break these deaf doors with thy boisterous wind.
 Silent the city is: night's dewy host³
 March fast away: the bar strike from the post.
 Or I more stern than fire or sword will turn,
 And with my brand these gorgeous houses burn.
 Night, love, and wine to all extremes persuade:
 Night, shameless wine, and love are fearless made. 60
 All have I spent: no threats or prayers move thee;
 O harder than the doors thou guard'st I prove thee,

² Dyce reads, "If, Boreas, bear'st" (i.e., "thou bear'st"). But the change in the old eds. from the second to the third person is not very harsh.

³ A picturesque rendering of

"Vitreoque madentia rore
Tempora noctis eunt."

No pretty wench's keeper may'st thou be,
 The careful prison is more meet for thee.
 Now frosty night her flight begins to take,
 And crowing cocks poor souls to work awake.
 But thou, my crown, from sad hairs ta'en away,
 On this hard threshold till the morning lay.
 That when my mistress there beholds thee cast,
 She may perceive how we the time did waste. 70
 Whate'er thou art, farewell, be like me pained!
 Careless farewell, with my fault not distained!¹
 And farewell cruel posts, rough threshold's block,

Could I therefore her comely tresses tear?
 Yet was she gracèd with her ruffled hair.
 So fair she was, Atalanta she resembled,
 Before whose bow th' Arcadian wild beasts trembled.
 Such Ariadne was, when she bewails,
 Her perjured Theseus' flying vows and sails.
 So, chaste Minerva, did Cassandra fall
 Deflowered¹ except within thy temple wall.
 That I was mad, and barbarous all men cried :
 She nothing said ; pale fear her tongue had tied. 20
 But secretly her looks with checks did trounce me,
 Her tears, she silent, guilty did pronounce me.
 Would of mine arms my shoulders had been scanted :
 Better I could part of myself have wanted.
 To mine own self have I had strength so furious,
 And to myself could I be so injurious?
 Slaughter and mischief's instruments, no better,
 Deservèd chains these cursed hands shall fetter.
 Punished I am, if I a Roman beat :
 Over my mistress is my right more great? 30
 Tydides left worst signs² of villainy ;
 He first a goddess struck : another I.
 Yet he harmed less ; whom I professed to love
 I harmed : a foe did Diomedè's anger move.
 Go now, thou conqueror, glorious triumphs raise,
 Pay vows to Jove ; engirt thy hairs with bays.

 Let the sad captive foremost, with locks spread
 On her white neck, but for hurt cheeks,¹ be led. 40
 Meeter it were her lips were blue with kissing,
 And on her neck a wanton's² mark not missing.
 But, though I like a swelling flood was driven,
 And as a prey unto blind anger given,
 Was't not enough the fearful wench to chide?
 Nor thunder, in rough threatenings, haughty pride?
 Nor shamefully her coat pull o'er her crown,
 Which to her waist her girdle still kept down?
 But cruelly her tresses having rent,
 My nails to scratch her lovely cheeks I bent. 50
 Sighing she stood, her bloodless white looks shewed,
 Like marble from the Parian mountains hewed.
 Her half-dead joints, and trembling limbs I saw,
 Like poplar leaves blown with a stormy flaw.
 Or slender ears, with gentle zephyr shaken,
 Or waters' tops with the warm south-wind taken.
 And down her cheeks, the trickling tears did flow,
 Like water gushing from consuming snow.
 Then first I did perceive I had offended;
 My blood the tears were that from her descended. 60
 Before her feet thrice prostrate down I fell,
 My fearèd hands thrice back she did repel.

But doubt thou not (revenge doth grief appease),
 With thy sharp nails upon my face to seize ;
 Bescratch mine eyes, spare not my locks to break

 And lest the sad signs of my crime remain,
 Put in their place thy kembèd¹ hairs again.

Execratur lenam quæ puellam suam meretricis arte instituebat.

There is—whoe'er will know a bawd aright,
 Give ear—there is an old trot Dipsas hight.³
 Her name comes from the thing : she being wise,⁴
 Sees not the morn on rosy horses rise,
 She magic arts and Thessal charms doth know,
 And makes large streams back to their fountains flow ;
 She knows with grass, with threads on wrung⁵ wheels

 And what with mares' rank humour⁶ may be done.
 When she will, cloudes the darkened heaven obscure,
 When she will, day shines everywhere most pure. 10

"Virus amantis equæ."

Her I suspect among night's spirits to fly,
And her old body in birds' plumes to lie.
Fame saith as I suspect ; and in her eyes,
Two eyeballs shine, and double light thence flies.
Great grandsires from their ancient graves she chides,
And with long charms the solid earth divides.
She draws chaste women to incontinence,
Nor doth her tongue want harmful eloquence. 20
By chance I heard her talk ; these words she said,
While closely hid betwixt two doors I laid.
" Mistress, thou knowest thou hast a blest youth pleased,
He stayed and on thy looks his gazes seized.
And why should'st not please ; none thy face exceeds ;
Ay me, thy body hath no worthy weeds !
As thou art fair, would thou wert fortunate !
Wert thou rich, poor should not be my state.
Th' opposèd star of Mars hath done thee harm ;
Now Mars is gone, Venus thy side doth warm, 30
And brings good fortune ; a rich lover plants
His love on thee, and can supply thy wants.
Such is his form as may with thine compare,
Would he not buy thee, thou for him should'st care."¹
She blushed : " Red shame becomes white cheeks ; but this
If feigned, doth well ; if true, it doth amiss.
When on thy lap thine eyes thou dost deject,
Each one according to his gifts respect.

¹ "Si te non emptam vellet emendus erat." (Marlowe's copy must have read "amandus.")

Perhaps the Sabines rude, when Tattius reigned
 To yield their love to more than one disdained. 40
 Now Mars doth rage abroad without all pity,
 And Venus rules in her Æneas' city.
 Fair women play ; she's chaste whom none will have
 Or, but for bashfulness, herself would crave.
 Shake off these wrinkles that thy front assault ;
 Wrinkles in beauty is a grievous fault.

Lest they should fly ; being ta'en, the tyrant play. 70
Dissemble so, as loved he may be thought,
And take heed lest he gets that love for naught.
Deny him oft ; feign now thy head doth ache :

Receive him soon, lest patient use he gain,
Or lest his love oft beaten back should wane.
To beggars shut, to bringers ope thy gate ;
Let him within hear barred-out lovers prate.
And, as first wronged, the wrongèd sometimes banish ;
Thy fault with his fault so repulsed will vanish. 80
But never give a spacious time to ire ;
Anger delayed doth oft to hate retire.
And let thine eyes constrained learn to weep,
That this or that man may thy cheeks moist keep.
Nor, if thou cozenest one, dread to forswear,
Venus to mocked men lends a senseless ear.
Servants fit for thy purpose thou must hire,
To teach thy lover what thy thoughts desire.

What age fits Mars, with Venus doth agree ;
 'Tis shame for eld in war or love to be.
 What years in soldiers captains do require,
 Those in their lovers pretty maids desire.

 No faithless witch in Thessal waters bathed thee. 40
 No sickness harmed thee (far be that away!),
 No envious tongue wrought thy thick locks' decay.
 By thine own hand and fault thy hurt doth grow,
 Thou mad'st thy head with compound poison flow.
 Now Germany shall captive hair-tires send thee,
 And vanquished people curious dressings lend thee.
 Which some admiring, O thou oft wilt blush!
 And say, "He likes me for my borrowed bush.
 Praising for me some unknown Guelder² dame,
 But I remember when it was my fame." 50
 Alas she almost weeps, and her white cheeks,
 Dyed red with shame to hide from shame she seeks.

² "Nescio quam pro me laudat nunc iste Sygambram."

She holds, and views her old locks in her lap ;
 Ay me ! rare gifts unworthy such a hap !
 Cheer up thyself, thy loss thou may'st repair,
 And be hereafter seen with native hair.

ELEGIA XV.

Ad invidos, quod fama poetarum sit perennis.

Envy, why carp'st thou my time's spent so ill ?
 And term'st¹ my works fruits of an idle quill ?
 Or that unlike the line from whence I sprung²
 War's dusty honours are refused being young ?
 Nor that I study not the brawling laws,
 Nor set my voice to sail in every cause ?
 Thy scope is mortal ; mine, eternal fame.
 That all the world may³ ever chant my name.
 Homer shall live while Tenedos stands and Ide,
 Or to⁴ the sea swift Simois shall⁵ slide. 10
 Ascræus lives while grapes with new wine swell,
 Or men with crookèd sickles corn down fell.
 The⁶ world shall of Callimachus ever speak ;
 His art excelled, although his wit was weak.
 For ever lasts high Sophocles' proud vein,
 With sun and moon Aratus shall remain.

⁶ Isham copy and ed. A omit this line and the next.

While bondmen cheat, fathers [be] hard,¹ bawds whorish,
 And strumpets flatter, shall Menander flourish.
 Rude Ennius, and Plautus² full of wit,
 Are both in Fame's eternal legend writ. 20
 What age of Varro's name shall not be told,
 And Jason's Argo,³ and the fleece of gold?
 Lofty Lucretius shall live that hour,
 That nature shall dissolve this earthly bower.
 Æneas' war and Tityrus shall be read,
 While Rome of all the conquered⁴ world is head.
 Till Cupid's bow, and fiery shafts be broken,
 Thy verses, sweet Tibullus, shall be spoken.
 And Gallus shall be known from East to West,
 So shall Lycoris whom he lovèd best. 30
 Therefore when flint and iron wear away,
 Verse is immortal and shall ne'er decay.
 To⁵ verse let kings give place and kingly shows,
 And banks o'er which gold-bearing Tagus flows.
 Let base-conceited wits admire vild things;
 Fair Phœbus lead me to the Muses' springs.
 About my head be quivering myrtle wound,
 And in sad lovers' heads let me be found.
 The living, not the dead, can envy bite,
 For after death all men receive their right. 40

² The poet must have read "animosi Maccius oris." The true reading is "animosique Accius oris."

Then though death racks¹ my bones in funeral fire,
I'll live, and as he pulls me down mount higher.

The same, by B. I.²

Envy, why twitt'st thou me, my time's spent ill?
And call'st my verse fruits of an idle quill?
Or that (unlike the line from whence I sprung)
War's dusty honours I pursue not young?
Or that I study not the tedious laws;
And prostitute my voice in every cause?
Thy scope is mortal; mine eternal fame,
Which through the world shall ever chant my name.
Homer will live, whilst Tenedos stands, and Ide,
Or to the sea, fleet Symois doth slide: 10
And so shall Hesiod too, while vines do bear,
Or crookèd sickles crop the ripened ear.
Callimachus, though in invention low,
Shall still be sung, since he in art doth flow;
No loss shall come to Sophocles' proud vein;
With sun and moon Aratus shall remain.
Whilst slaves be false, fathers hard, and bawds be whorish,
Whilst harlots flatter, shall Meander flourish.
Ennius, though rude, and Accius' high-reared strain,
A fresh applause in every age shall gain. 20

¹ So the Isham copy.—Ed. A (followed by Dyce) gives “rocks.”—Eds. B and C “rakes” (and so Cunningham).

² I.e. Ben Jonson, who afterwards introduced it into the Poetaster (1. 1). This version is merely a revision of the preceding, which must also have been written by Ben Jonson.

Of Varro's name, what ear shall not be told?
Of Jason's Argo and the fleece of gold?
Then, shall Lucretius' lofty numbers die,
When earth, and seas in fire and flames shall fry.
Tityrus, Tillage, Æney shall be read,¹
Whilst Rome of all the conquered world is head.
Till Cupid's fires be out, and his bow broken,
Thy verses, neat Tibulus, shall be spoken.
Our Gallus shall be known from East to West,
So shall Lycoris, whom he now loves best. 30
The suffering ploughshare or the flint may wear,
But heavenly poesy no death can fear.
Kings shall give place to it, and kingly shows,
The banks o'er which gold-bearing Tagus flows.
Kneel hinds to trash: me let bright Phœbus swell,
With cups full flowing from the Muses' well.
The frost-drad² myrtle shall impale my head,
And of sad lovers I'll be often read.
Envy the living, not the dead doth bite,
For after death all men receive their right. 40
Then when this body falls in funeral fire,
My name shall live, and my best part aspire.

LIBER SECUNDUS.

ELEGIA I.¹

Quod pro gigantomachia amores scribere sit coactus.

I, Ovid, poet, of my² wantonness,
Born at Peligny, to write more address.
So Cupid wills. Far hence be the severe !
You are unapt my looser lines to hear.
Let maids whom hot desire to husbands lead,³
And rude boys, touched with unknown love, me read :
That some youth hurt, as I am, with Love's bow,
His own flame's best-acquainted signs may know.
And long admiring say, "By what means learned,
Hath this same poet my sad chance discern'd?" 10
I durst the great celestial battles tell,
Hundred-hand Gyges, and had done it well ;
With Earth's revenge, and how Olympus top
High Ossa bore, Mount Pelion up to prop ;

Jove and Jove's thunderbolts I had in hand,
 Which for¹ his heaven fell on the giants' band.
 My wench her door shut, Jove's affairs I left,
 Even Jove himself out of my wit was reft.
 Pardon me, Jove! thy weapons aid me nought,
 Her shut gates greater lightning than thine brought. 20
 Toys, and light elegies, my darts I took,
 Quickly soft words hard doors wide-open strook.
 Verses reduce the hornèd bloody moon,
 And call the sun's white horses back² at noon.
 Snakes leap by verse from caves of broken mountains,³
 And turnèd streams run backward to their fountains.
 Verses ope doors; and locks put in the post,
 Although of oak, to yield to verses boast.
 What helps it me of fierce Achill to sing?
 What good to me will either Ajax bring? 30
 Or he who warred and wandered twenty year?
 Or woful Hector whom wild jades did tear?
 But when I praise a pretty wench's face,
 She in requital doth me oft embrace.
 A great reward! Heroes of⁴ famous names
 Farewell! your favour nought my mind inflames.
 Wenches apply your fair looks to my verse,
 Which golden Love doth unto me rehearse.

ELEGIA II.¹

Ad Bagoum, ut custodiam puellæ sibi commissæ laxiorem habeat.

Bagous, whose care doth thy² mistress bridle,
 While I speak some few, yet fit words, be idle.
 I saw the damsel walking yesterday,
 There, where the porch doth Danaus' fact³ display :
 She pleased me soon ; I sent, and did her woo ;
 Her trembling hand writ back she might not do.
 And asking why, this answer she redoubled,
 Because thy care too much thy mistress troubled.
 Keeper, if thou be wise, cease hate to cherish,
 Believe me, whom we fear, we wish to perish. 10
 Nor is her husband wise : what needs defence,
 When unprotected⁴ there is no expense ?
 But furiously he follow⁵ his love's fire,
 And thinks her chaste whom many do desire :
 Stolen liberty she may by thee obtain,
 Which giving her, she may give thee again :
 Wilt thou her fault learn ? she may make thee tremble.
 Fear to be guilty, then thou may'st dissemble.
 Think when she reads, her mother letters sent her :
 Let him go forth known, that unknown did enter. 20

1 Not in Isham copy or ed. "A."

2 So ed. B.—Ed. C "my."

3 The original has "agmen." Cunningham suggests "pack." If we retain "fact" the meaning is "Danaus' guilt."

4 Old eds. "vn-protected." ("Unde nihil, quamvis non tueare, perit.")

5 So ed. B.—Ed. C "follows." (The sense wanted is "Furiously let him follow" &c.)

Let him go see her though she do not languish,
And then report her sick and full of anguish.
If long she stays, to think the time more short,
Lay down thy forehead in thy lap to snort.
Inquire not what with Isis may be done,
Nor fear lest she to the theatres run.
Knowing her scapes, thine honour shall increase ;
And what less labour than to hold thy peace ?
Let him please, haunt the house, be kindly used,
Enjoy the wench ; let all else be refused. 30
Vain causes feign of him, the true to hide,
And what she likes, let both hold ratified.
When most her husband bends the brows and frowns,
His fawning wench with her desire he crowns.
But yet sometimes to chide thee let her fall
Counterfeit tears : and thee lewd hangman call.
Object thou then, what she may well excuse,
To stain all faith in truth, by false crimes' use.
Of wealth and honour so shall grow thy heap :
Do this, and soon thou shalt thy freedom reap. 40
On tell-tales' necks thou seest the link-knit chains,
The filthy prison faithless breasts restrains.
Water in waters, and fruit, flying touch,
Tantalus seeks, his long tongue's gain is such.
While Juno's watchman Iö too much eyed,
Him timeless¹ death took, she was deified.

I saw one's legs with fetters black and blue,
 By whom the husband his wife's incest¹ knew :
 More he deserved ; to both great harm he framed,
 The man did grieve, the woman was defamed. 50
 Trust me all husbands for such faults are sad,
 Nor make they any man that hears them glad.
 If he loves not, deaf ears thou dost importune,
 Or if he loves, thy tale breeds his misfortune.
 Nor is it easy proved though manifest ;
 She safe by favour of her judge doth rest.
 Though himself see, he'll credit her denial,
 Condemn his eyes, and say there is no trial.
 Spying his mistress' tears he will lament
 And say " This blab shall suffer punishment." 60
 Why fight'st 'gainst odds ? to thee, being cast, do hap
 Sharp stripes ; she sitteth in the judge's lap.
 To meet for poison or vild facts² we crave not ;
 My hands an unsheathed shining weapon have not.
 We seek that, through thee, safely love we may ;
 What can be easier than the thing we pray ?

ELEGIA III.³

Ad Eunuchum servantem dominam.

Ay me, an eunuch keeps my mistress chaste,
 That cannot Venus' mutual pleasure taste.

Who first deprived young boys of their best part,
 With self-same wounds he gave, he ought to smart.
 To kind requests thou would'st more gentle prove,
 If ever wench had made lukewarm thy love :
 Thou wert not born to ride, or arms to bear,
 Thy hands agree not with the warlike spear.
 Men handle those ; all manly hopes resign,
 Thy mistress' ensigns must be likewise thine. 10
 Please her—her hate makes others thee abhor ;
 If she discards thee, what use serv'st thou for ?
 Good form there is, years apt to play together :
 Unmeet is beauty without use to wither.
 She may deceive thee, though thou her protect ;
 What two determine never wants effect.
 Our prayers move thee to assist our drift,
 While thou hast time yet to bestow that gift.

ELEGIA IV.

Quod amet mulieres, cujuscunque formæ sint.

I mean not to defend the scapes¹ of any,
 Or justify my vices being many ;
 For I confess, if that might merit favour,
 Here I display my lewd and loose behaviour.
 I loathe, yet after that I loathe I run :
 Oh, how the burthen irks, that we should² shun.

² "Heu quam, quae studeas ponere, ferre grave est."

I cannot rule myself but where Love please ;
 Am ¹ driven like a ship upon rough seas.
 No one face likes me best, all faces move,
 A hundred reasons make me ever love. 10
 If any eye me with a modest look,
 I burn,² and by that blushful glance am took ;
 And she that's coy I like, for being no clown,
 Methinks she would be nimble when she's down.
 Though her sour looks a Sabine's brow resemble,
 I think she'll do, but deeply can dissemble.
 If she be learned, then for her skill I crave her ;
 If not, because she's simple I would have her.
 Before Callimachus one prefers me far ;
 Seeing she likes my books, why should we jar ? 20
 Another rails at me, and that I write,
 Yet would I lie with her, if that I might :
 Trips she, it likes me well ; plods she, what than ³ ?
 She would be nimbler lying with a man.
 And when one sweetly sings, then straight I long,
 To quaver on her lips even in her song ;
 Or if one touch the lute with art and cunning,
 Who would not love those hands⁴ for their swift running ?
 And her I like that with a majesty,
 Folds up her arms, and makes low courtesy. 30

¹ So eds. B, C.—Isham copy and ed. A “And.”

² This is Dyce's certain correction for the old eds. “blush.” (The originals has “uror.”)

³ Then.

⁴ Ed. A “those nimble hands.”

To¹ leave myself, that am in love with all,
 Some one of these might make the chastest fall.
 If she be tall, she's like an Amazon,
 And therefore fills the bed she lies upon :
 If short, she lies the rounder : to speak² troth,
 Both short and long please me, for I love both.
 I³ think what one undecked would be, being drest ;
 Is she attired ? then show her graces best.
 A white wench thralls me, so doth golden yellow :
 And nut-brown girls in doing have no fellow. 40
 If her white neck be shadowed with black hair,
 Why so was Leda's, yet was Leda fair.
 Amber-tress'd⁴ is she ? then on the morn think I :
 My love alludes to every history :
 A young wench pleaseth, and an old is good,
 This for her looks, that for her womanhood :
 Nay what is she, that any Roman loves,
 But my ambitious ranging mind approves ?

ELEGIA V.⁵

Minding thy fault, with death I wish to revel ;
 Alas ! a wench is a perpetual evil.
 No intercepted lines thy deeds display,
 No gifts given secretly thy crime bewray.
 O would my proofs as vain might be withstood !
 Ay me, poor soul, why is my cause so good ?
 He's happy, that his love dares boldly credit ;
 To whom his wench can say, " I never did it." 10
 He's cruel, and too much his grief doth favour,
 That seeks the conquest by her loose behaviour.
 Poor wretch,¹ I saw when thou didst think I slumbered ;
 Not drunk, your faults on the spilt wine I numbered.
 I saw your nodding eyebrows much to speak,
 Even from your cheeks, part of a voice did break.
 Not silent were thine eyes, the board with wine
 Was scribbled, and thy fingers writ a line.
 I knew your speech (what do not lovers see ?)
 And words that seemed for certain marks to be. 20
 Now many guests were gone, the feast being done,
 The youthful sort to divers pastimes run.
 I saw you then unlawful kisses join ;
 (Such with my tongue it likes me to purloin) ;
 None such the sister gives her brother grave,
 But such kind wenches let their lovers have.
 Phœbus gave not Diana such, 'tis thought,
 But Venus often to her Mars such brought.

¹ So Dyce for " Poor wench;" of the old eds.—The original has " Ipse miser vidi."

"What dost?" I cried; "transport'st thou my delight?
 My lordly hands I'll throw upon my right. 30
 Such bliss is only common to us two,
 In this sweet good why hath a third to do?"
 This, and what grief enforced me say, I said:
 A scarlet blush her guilty face arrayed;
 Even such as by Aurora hath the sky,
 Or maids that their betrothèd husbands spy;
 Such as a rose mixed with a lily breeds,
 Or when the moon travails with charmed steeds.
 Or such as, lest long years should turn the dye,
 Arachne¹ stains Assyrian ivory. 40
 To these, or some of these, like was her colour:
 By chance her beauty never shinèd fuller.
 She viewed the earth; the earth to view, beseeemed her.
 She lookèd sad; sad, comely I esteemed her.
 Even kembèd as they were, her locks to rend,
 And scratch her fair soft cheeks I did intend.
 Seeing her face, mine upreared arms descended,
 With her own armour was my wench defended.
 I, that erewhile was fierce, now humbly sue,
 Lest with worse kisses she should me endue. 50
 She laughed, and kissed so sweetly as might make Wrath-kindled Jove away his thunder shake.

¹ "Maeonis Assyrium femina tinxit opus." Dyce remarks that Marlowe "was induced to give this extraordinary version of the line by recollecting that in the sixth book of Ovid's Metamorphoses Arachne is termed 'Maeonis,' while her father is mentioned as a dyer."

I grieve lest others should such good perceive,
 And wish hereby them all unknown¹ to leave.
 Also much better were they than I tell,
 And ever seemed as some new sweet befell.
 'Tis ill they pleased so much, for in my lips
 Lay her whole tongue hid, mine in hers she dips.
 This grieves me not ; no joinèd kisses spent,
 Bewail I only, though I them lament. 60
 Nowhere can they be taught but in the bed ;
 I know no master of so great hire sped.²

ELEGIA VI.³

In mortem psittaci.

 Is dead ; all fowls her exequies frequent !
 Go godly⁵ birds, striking your breasts, bewail,
 And with rough claws your tender cheeks assail.

Thy tunes let this rare bird's sad funeral borrow ;
Itys¹ a great, but ancient cause of sorrow. 10
All you whose pinions in the clear air soar,
But most, thou friendly turtle-dove, deplore.
Full concord all your lives was you betwixt,
And to the end your constant faith stood fixt.
What Pylades did to Orestes prove,
Such to the parrot was the turtle-dove.
But what availed this faith? her rarest hue?
Or voice that how to change the wild notes knew?
What helps it thou wert given to please my wench?
Birds' hapless glory, death thy life doth quench. 20
Thou with thy quills might'st make green emeralds dark,
And pass our scarlet of red saffron's mark.
No such voice-feigning bird was on the ground,
Thou spok'st thy words so well with stammering sound.
Envy hath rapt thee, no fierce wars thou mov'dst ;
Vain-babbling speech, and pleasant peace thou lov'dst.
Behold how quails among their battles live,
Which do perchance old age unto them give.
A little filled thee, and for love of talk,
Thy mouth to taste of many meats did balk. 30
Nuts were thy food, and poppy caused thee sleep,
Pure water's moisture thirst away did keep.

 Thersites did Protesilaus survive ;
 And Hector died, his brothers yet alive.
 My wench's vows for thee what should I show,
 Which stormy south winds into sea did blow ?
 The seventh day came, none following might'st thou

 And the Fate's distaff empty stood to thee :
 Yet words in thy benumbèd palate rung ;
 "Farewell, Corinna," cried thy dying tongue.
 Elysium hath a wood of holm-trees black,
 Whose earth doth not perpetual green grass lack. 50
 There good birds rest (if we believe things hidden),
 Whence unclean fowls are said to be forbidden.
 There harmless swans feed all abroad the river ;
 There lives the phoenix, one alone bird ever ;
 There Juno's bird displays his gorgeous feather,
 And loving doves kiss eagerly together.
 The parrot into wood received with these,
 Turns all the godly⁴ birds to what she please.

Amicæ se purgat, quod ancillam non amet.

Dost me of new crimes always guilty frame?
 To overcome, so oft to fight I shame.
 If on the marble theatre I look,
 One among many is, to grieve thee, took.
 If some fair wench me secretly behold,
 Thou arguest she doth secret marks unfold.
 If I praise any, thy poor hairs thou tearest ;
 If blame, dissembling of my fault thou fearest.
 If I look well, thou think'st thou dost not move,
 If ill, thou say'st I die for others' love. 10
 Would I were culpable of some offence,
 They that deserve pain, bear't with patience.
 Now rash accusing, and thy vain belief,
 Forbid thine anger to procure my grief.
 Lo, how the miserable great-eared ass,
 Dulled with much beating, slowly forth doth pass !
 Behold Cypassis, wont to dress thy head,
 Is charged to violate her mistress' bed !
 The gods from this sin rid me of suspicion,
 To like a base wench of despised condition. 20

 Or any back, made rough with stripes, embrace?
 Add she was diligent thy locks to braid,
 And, for her skill, to thee a grateful maid.
 Should I solicit her that is so just,—
 To take repulse, and cause her show my lust?
 I swear by Venus, and the winged boy's bow,
 Myself unguilty of this crime I know.

ELEGIA VIII.¹

Ad Cypassim ancillam Corinnæ.

Cypassis, that a thousand ways trim'st hair,
 Worthy to kemb none but a goddess fair,
 Our pleasant scapes show thee no clown to be,
 Apt to thy mistress, but more apt to me.
 Who that our bodies were comprest bewrayed?
 Whence knows Corinna that with thee I played?
 Yet blushed I not, nor used I any saying,
 That might be urged to witness our false playing.
 What if a man with bondwomen offend,
 To prove him foolish did I e'er contend?
 Achilles burnt with face of captive Brisèis,
 Great Agamemnon loved his servant Chrysèis.²
 Greater than these myself I not esteem:
 What gracèd kings, in me no shame I deem.

 By Venus deity how did I protest!
 Thou goddess dost command a warm south blast,
 My self oaths in Carpathian seas to cast. 20
 For which good turn my sweet reward repay,
 Let me lie with thee, brown Cypass, to-day.
 Ungrate, why feign'st new fears, and dost refuse?
 Well may'st thou one thing for thy mistress use.⁴
 If thou deniest, fool, I'll our deeds express,
 And as a traitor mine own faults confess;
 Telling thy mistress where I was with thee,
 How oft, and by what means, we did agree.

ELEGIA IX.⁵

Ad Cupidinem.

O Cupid, that dost never cease my smart!
 O boy, that liest so slothful in my heart!

Did not Pelides whom his spear did grieve,
 Being required, with speedy help relieve?
 Hunters leave taken beasts, pursue the chase,
 And than things found do ever further pace. 10
 We people wholly given thee, feel thine arms,
 Thy dull hand stays thy striving enemies' harms.
 Dost joy to have thy hookèd arrows shaken
 In naked bones? love hath my bones left naked.
 So many men and maidens without love,
 Hence with great laud thou may'st a triumph move.
 Rome, if her strength the huge world had not filled,
 With strawy cabins now her courts should build.
 The weary soldier hath the conquered fields,
 His sword, laid by, safe, tho' rude places yields;¹ 20
 The dock inharbours ships drawn from the floods,
 Horse freed from service range abroad the woods.
 And time it was for me to live in quiet,
 That have so oft served pretty wenches' diet.
 Yet should I curse a God, if he but said,
 "Live without love," so sweet ill is a maid.
 For when my loathing it of heat deprives me,
 I know not whither my mind's whirlwind drives me.
 Even as a headstrong courser bears away
 His rider, vainly striving him to stay; 30
 Or as a sudden gale thrusts into sea
 The haven-touching bark, now near the lea;

¹ In some strange fashion Marlowe has mistaken the substantive "rudis" (the staff received by the gladiator on his discharge) with the adjective "rudis" (rude). The original has "Tutaque deposito poscitur ense rudis."

So wavering Cupid brings me back amain,
 And purple Love resumes his darts again.
 Strike, boy, I offer thee my naked breast,
 Here thou hast strength, here thy right hand doth rest.
 Here of themselves thy shafts come, as if shot ;
 Better than I their quiver knows them not :
 Hapless is he that all the night lies quiet.
 And slumbering, thinks himself much blessèd by it. 40
 Fool, what is sleep but image of cold death,
 Long shalt thou rest when Fates expire thy breath.
 But me let crafty damsel's words deceive,
 Great joys by hope I inly shall conceive.
 Now let her flatter me, now chide me hard,
 Let me¹ enjoy her oft, oft be debarred.
 Cupid, by thee, Mars in great doubt doth trample,
 And thy stepfather fights by thy example.
 Light art thou, and more windy than thy wings ;
 Joys with uncertain faith thou tak'st and brings : 50
 Yet Love, if thou with thy fair mother hear,

Græcinus (well I wot) thou told'st me once,
 I could not be in love with two at once ;

By thee deceived, by thee surprised am I,
 For now I love two women equally :
 Both are well favoured, both rich in array,
 Which is the loveliest¹ it is hard to say :
 This seems the fairest, so doth that to me ;
 And² this doth please me most, and so doth she ;
 Even as a boat tossed by contràry wind,
 So with this love and that wavers my mind. 10
 Venus, why doublest thou my endless smart ?
 Was not one wench enough to grieve my heart ?
 Why add'st thou stars to heaven, leaves to green woods,
 And to the deep³ vast sea fresh water-floods ?
 Yet this is better far than lie alone :
 Let such as be mine enemies have none ;
 Yea, let my foes sleep in an empty bed,
 And in the midst their bodies largely spread :
 But may soft⁴ love rouse up my drowsy eyes,
 And from my mistress' bosom let me rise ! 20
 Let one wench cloy me with sweet love's delight,
 If one can do't ; if not, two every night.
 Though I am slender, I have store of pith,
 Nor want I strength, but weight, to press her with :
 Pleasure adds fuel to my lustful fire,
 I pay them home with that they most desire :

Lo, country gods and know[n] bed to forsake
 Corinna means, and dangerous ways to take.
 For thee the East and West winds make me pale,
 With icy Boreas, and the Southern gale. 10
 Thou shalt admire no woods or cities there,
 The unjust seas all bluish do appear.
 The ocean hath no painted stones or shells,
 The sucking¹ shore with their abundance swells.
 Maids on the shore, with marble-white feet tread,
 So far 'tis safe ; but to go farther, dread.
 Let others tell how winds fierce battles wage,
 How Scylla's and Charybdis' waters rage ;
 And with what rock[s] the feared Ceraunia threat ;
 In what gulf either Syrtes have their seat. 20
 Let others tell this, and what each one speaks
 Believe ; no tempest the believer wrecks.²
 Too late you look back, when with anchors weighed,
 The crookèd bark hath her swift sails displayed.
 The careful shipman now fears angry gusts,
 And with the waters sees death near him thrusts.
 But if that Triton toss the troubled flood,
 In all thy face will be no crimson blood.
 Then wilt thou Leda's noble twin-stars pray,
 And, he is happy whom the earth holds, say. 30

² Dyce was doubtless right in supposing "wrecks" to be used metri causa for "wrecks." Cunningham wanted to give the meaning "recks;" but that meaning does not suit the context. The original has "credenti nulla procella nocet."

It is more safe to sleep, to read a book,
The Thracian harp with cunning to have strook.
But if my words with wingèd storm hence slip,
Yet, Galatea, favour thou her ship.
The loss of such a wench much blame will gather,
Both to the sea-nymphs and the sea-nymphs' father.
Go, minding to return with prosperous wind,
Whose blast may hither strongly be inclined.
Let Nereus bend the waves unto this shore,
Hither the winds blow, here the spring-tide roar. 40
Request mild Zephyr's help for thy avail,
And with thy hand assist thy swelling sail.
I from the shore thy known ship first will see,
And say it brings her that preserveth me.
I'll clip¹ and kiss thee with all contentation ;
For thy return shall fall the vowed oblation ;
And in the form of beds we'll strew soft sand ;
Each little hill shall for a table stand :
There, wine being filled, thou many things shalt tell,
How, almost wrecked, thy ship in main seas fell. 50
And hasting to me, neither darksome night,
Nor violent south-winds did thee aught affright,
I'll think all true, though it be feignèd matter !
Mine own desires why should myself not flatter ?
Let the bright day-star cause in heaven this day be,
To bring that happy time so soon as may be.

In midst thereof a stone-paved sacred spring,
Where round about small birds most sweetly sing.
Here while I walk, hid close in shady grove,
To find what work my muse might move, I strove,

This thou wilt say to be a worthy ground.
Thy muse hath played what may mild girls content,
And by those numbers is thy first youth spent.

 The more thou look'st, the more the gown's envied.
 Swift Atalanta's flying legs, like these,
 Wish in his hands grasped did Hippomenes. 30
 Coat-tucked Diana's legs are painted like them,
 When strong wild beasts, she, stronger, hunts to strike
 them.

Ere these were seen, I burnt : what will these do ?
 Flames into flame, floods thou pour'st seas into,
 By these I judge ; delight me may the rest,
 Which lie hid, under her thin veil supprest.
 Yet in the meantime wilt small winds bestow,
 That from thy fan, moved by my hand, may blow ?
 Or is my heat of mind, not of the sky ?
 Is't women's love my captive breast doth fry ? 40
 While thus I speak, black dust her white robes ray ;⁴
 Foul dust, from her fair body go away !
 Now comes the pomp ; themselves let all men cheer ;⁵
 The shout is nigh ; the golden pomp comes here.

First, Victory is brought with large spread wing :
 Goddess, come here ; make my love conquering.
 Applaud you Neptune, that dare trust his wave,
 The sea I use not : me my earth must have.
 Soldier applaud thy Mars, no wars we move,
 Peace pleaseth me, and in mid peace is love. 50
 With augurs Phœbus, Phœbe with hunters stands.
 To thee Minerva turn the craftsmen's hands.
 Ceres and Bacchus countrymen adore,
 Champions please ¹ Pollux, Castor loves horsemen more.
 Thee, gentle Venus, and the boy that flies,
 We praise : great goddess aid my enterprise.
 Let my new mistress grant to be beloved ;
 She becked, and prosperous signs gave as she moved.
 What Venus promised, promise thou we pray
 Greater than her, by her leave, thou'rt, I'll say. 60
 The gods, and their rich pomp witness with me,
 For evermore thou shalt my mistress be.
 Thy legs hang down, thou may'st, if that be best,
 Awhile ² thy tiptoes on the footstool ³ rest.
 Now greatest spectacles the Prætor sends,
 Four chariot-horses from the lists' even ends.
 I see whom thou affect'st : he shall subdue ;
 The horses seem as thy ⁴ desire they knew.
 Alas, he runs too far about the ring ;
 What dost ? thy waggon in less compass bring. 70

What dost, unhappy? her good wishes fade :
 Let with strong hand the rein to bend be made.
 One slow we favour, Romans, him revoke :
 And each give signs by casting up his cloak.
 They call him back ; lest their gowns toss thy hair,
 To hide thee in my bosom straight repair.
 But now again the barriers open lie,
 And forth the gay troops on swift horses fly.
 At least now conquer, and outrun the rest :
 My mistress' wish confirm with my request. 80
 My mistress hath her wish ; my wish remain :
 He holds the palm : my palm is yet to gain.
 She smiled, and with quick eyes behight¹ some grace :
 Pay it not here, but in another place.

ELEGIA III.²

De amica quæ perjuraverat.

What, are there gods? herself she hath forswore,
 And yet remains the face she had before.
 How long her locks were ere her oath she took,
 So long they be since she her faith forsook.
 Fair white with rose-red was before commixt ;
 Now shine her looks pure white and red betwixt.
 Her foot was small : her foot's form is most fit :
 Comely tall was she, comely tall she's yet.

¹ "Promisit."

² Not in Isham copy or ed. A.

Sharp eyes she had : radiant like stars they be,
 By which she, perjured oft, hath lied to¹ me. 10
 In sooth, th' eternal powers grant maids society
 Falsely to swear ; their beauty hath some deity.
 By her eyes, I remember, late she swore,
 And by mine eyes, and mine were painèd sore.
 Say gods : if she unpunished you deceive,
 For other faults why do I loss receive.
 But did you not so envy² Cepheus' daughter,
 For her ill-beauteous mother judged to slaughter.
 'Tis not enough, she shakes your record off,
 And, unrevenged, mocked gods with me doth scoff. 20
 But by my pain to purge her perjuries,
 Cozened, I am the cozener's sacrifice.
 God is a name, no substance, feared in vain,
 And doth the world in fond belief detain.
 Or if there be a God, he loves fine wenches,
 And all things too much in their sole power drenches.
 Mars girts his deadly sword on for my harm ;
 Pallas' lance strikes me with unconquered arm ;
 At me Apollo bends his pliant bow ;
 At me Jove's right hand lightning hath to throw. 30
 The wrongèd gods dread fair ones to offend,
 And fear those, that to fear them least intend.
 Who now will care the altars to perfume ?
 Tut, men should not their courage so consume.

² " At non invidiæ vobis Cephèia virgo est,
 Pro male formosa jussa parente mori ?"
 (" Invidiæ " here means " discredit, odium.")

Jove throws down woods and castles with his fire,
 But bids his darts from perjured girls retire.
 Poor Semele among so many burned,
 Her own request to her own torment turned.
 But when her lover came, had she drawn back,
 The father's thigh should unborn Bacchus lack. 40
 Why grieve I? and of heaven reproaches pen?
 The gods have eyes, and breasts as well as men.
 Were I a god, I should give women leave,
 With lying lips my godhead to deceive.
 Myself would swear the wenches true did swear,
 And I would be none of the gods severe.
 But yet their gift more moderately use,
 Or in mine eyes, good wench, no pain transfuse.

ELEGIA IV.¹

Ad virum servantem conjugem.

Rude man, 'tis vain thy damsel to commend
 To keeper's trust: their wits should them defend.
 Who, without fear, is chaste, is chaste in sooth:
 Who, because means want, doeth not, she doth.
 Though thou her body guard, her mind is stained;
 Nor, 'less² she will, can any be restrained.
 Nor can'st by watching keep her mind from sin,
 All being shut out, the adulterer is within.
 Who may offend, sins least; power to do ill
 The fainting seeds of naughtiness doth kill. 10

¹ Not in Isham copy or ed. A.² Old eds, "least." ("Nec custodiri, ni velit, ulla potest.")

Forbear to kindle vice by prohibition ;
Sooner shall kindness gain thy will's fruition.
I saw a horse against the bit stiff-necked,
Like lightning go, his struggling mouth being checked :
When he perceived the reins let slack, he stayed,
And on his loose mane the loose bridle laid.
How to attain what is denied we think,
Even as the sick desire forbidden drink.
Argus had either way an hundred eyes,
Yet by deceit Love did them all surprise. 20
In stone and iron walls Danæe shut,
Came forth a mother, though a maid there put.
Penelope, though no watch looked unto her,
Was not defiled by any gallant wooer.
What's kept, we covet more : the care makes theft,
Few love what others have unguarded left.
Nor doth her face please, but her husband's love :
I know not what men think should thee so move¹
She is not chaste that's kept, but a dear whore :²
Thy fear is than her body valued more. 30
Although thou chafe, stolen pleasure is sweet play ;
She pleaseth best, " I fear," if any say.
A free-born wench, no right 'tis up to lock,
So use we women of strange nations' stock.
Because the keeper may come say, " I did it,"
She must be honest to thy servant's credit.

² Dyce calls this line an "erroneous version of ' Non proba sit quam vir servat, sed adultera ; cara est.'" But Merkel's reading is " Non proba fit quam vir servat, sed adultera cara"—which is accurately rendered by Marlowe.

He is too clownish whom a lewd wife grieves,
 And this town's well-known custom not believes ;
 Where Mars his sons not without fault did breed,
 Remus and Romulus, Iliã's twin-born seed. 40
 Cannot a fair one, if not chaste, please thee?
 Never can these by any means agree.
 Kindly thy mistress use, if thou be wise ;
 Look gently, and rough husbands' laws despise.
 Honour what friends thy wife gives, she'll give many,
 Least labour so shall win great grace of any.
 So shalt thou go with youths to feasts together,
 And see at home much that thou ne'er brought'st thither.

ELEGIA VI.¹

Ad amnem dum iter faceret ad amicam.

Flood with reed-grown² slime banks, till I be past
 Thy waters stay : I to my mistress haste.
 Thou hast no bridge, nor boat with ropes to throw,
 That may transport me, without oars to row.
 Thee I have passed, and knew thy stream none such,

 With snow thawed from the next hill now thou gushest,³
 And in thy foul deep waters thick thou rushest.

 My foot upon the further bank to set,
 Now wish I those wings noble Perseus had,
 Bearing the head with dreadful adders¹ clad;
 Now wish the chariot, whence corn fields were found,
 First to be thrown upon the untilled ground:
 I speak old poet's wonderful inventions,
 Ne'er was, nor [e'er] shall be, what my verse mentions.
 Rather, thou large bank-overflowing river,
 Slide in thy bounds; so shalt thou run for ever. 20

 She, wailing Mar's sin and her uncle's crime,
 Strayed barefoot through sole places² on a time. 50
 Her, from his swift waves, the bold flood perceived,
 And from the mid ford his hoarse voice upheaved,
 Saying, " Why sadly tread'st my banks upon,
 Ilia sprung from Idæan Laomedon ?
 Where's thy attire ? why wanderest here alone ?
 To stay thy tresses white veil hast thou none ?
 Why weep'st and spoil'st with tears thy watery eyes ?

Gifts than my promise greater thou shalt have."
This said he : she her modest eyes held down.
Her woful bosom a warm shower did drown.
Thrice she prepared to fly, thrice she did stay,
By fear deprived of strength to run away. 70
Yet rending with enragèd thumb her tresses,
Her trembling mouth these unmeet sounds expresses :
"O would in my forefathers' tomb deep laid,
My bones had been while yet I was a maid :
Why being a vestal am I wooed to wed,
Deflowered and stainèd in unlawful bed.
Why stay I? men point at me for a whore,
Shame, that should make me blush, I have no more."
This said ; her coat hoodwinked her fearful eyes,
And into water desperately she flies. 80
'Tis said the slippery stream held up her breast,
And kindly gave her what she likèd best.
And I believe some wench thou hast affected,
But woods and groves keep your faults undetected.

 Nor hanging oars the troubled seas did sweep,
 Men kept the shore and sailed not into deep.
 Against thyself, man's nature, thou wert cunning,
 And to thine own loss was thy wit swift running.
 Why gird'st thy cities with a towerèd wall,
 Why let'st discordant hands to armour fall ?

Thee, sacred poet, could sad flames destroy?
 Nor fearèd they thy body to annoy?
 The holy gods' gilt temples they might fire,
 That durst to so great wickedness aspire.
 Eryx' bright empress turned her looks aside,
 And some, that she refrained tears, have denied.
 Yet better is't, than if Corcyra's Isle,
 Had thee unknown interred in ground most vile.

Ad Cererem, conquerens quod ejus sacris cum amica concumbere non permittatur.

Come were the times of Ceres' sacrifice ;
In empty bed alone my mistress lies.
Golden-haired Ceres crowned with ears of corn,
Why are our pleasures by thy means forborne ?
Thee, goddess, bountiful all nations judge,
Nor less at man's prosperity any grudge.
Rude husbandmen baked not their corn before,
Nor on the earth was known the name of floor.²
On mast of oaks, first oracles, men fed ;
This was their meat, the soft grass was their bed. 10
First Ceres taught the seed in fields to swell,
And ripe-eared corn with sharp-edged scythes to fell.
She first constrained bulls' necks to bear the yoke,
And untilled ground with crooked ploughshares broke.
Who thinks her to be glad at lovers' smart,
And worshipped by their pain and lying apart ?
Nor is she, though she loves the fertile fields,
A clown, nor no love from her warm breast yields :
Be witness Crete (nor Crete doth all things feign)
Crete proud that Jove her nursery maintain. 20
There, he who rules the world's star-spangled towers,
A little boy drunk teat-distilling showers.
Faith to the witness Jove's praise doth apply ;
Ceres, I think, no known fault will deny.

² Threshing-floor ("area").

The goddess saw Iasion on Candian Ide,
 With strong hand striking wild beasts' bristled hide.
 She saw, and as her marrow took the flame,
 Was divers ways distract with love and shame.
 Love conquered shame, the furrows dry were burned,
 And corn with least part of itself returned. 30
 When well-tossed mattocks did the ground prepare,
 Being fit-broken with the crooked share,
 And seeds were equally in large fields cast,
 The ploughman's hopes were frustrate at the last.
 The grain-rich goddess in high woods did stray,
 Her long hair's ear-wrought garland fell away.
 Only was Crete fruitful that plenteous year ;
 Where Ceres went, each place was harvest there.
 Ida, the seat of groves, did sing¹ with corn,
 Which by the wild boar in the woods was shorn. 40
 Law-giving Minos did such years desire,
 And wished the goddess long might feel love's fire.
 Ceres, what sports² to thee so grievous were,
 As in thy sacrifice we them forbear ?
 Why am I sad, when Proserpine is found,
 And Juno-like with Dis reigns under ground ?
 Festival days ask Venus, songs, and wine,
 These gifts are meet to please the powers divine.

ELEGIA XI.¹

Ad amicam a cuius amore discedere non potest.

Long have I borne much, mad thy faults me make ;
 Dishonest love, my wearied breast forsake !
 Now have I freed myself, and fled the chain,
 And what I have borne, shame to bear again.
 We vanquish, and tread tamed love under feet,
 Victorious wreaths² at length my temples greet.
 Suffer, and harden : good grows by this grief,
 Oft bitter juice brings to the sick relief.
 I have sustained, so oft thrust from the door,
 To lay my body on the hard moist floor. 10
 I know not whom thou lewdly didst embrace,
 When I to watch supplied a servant's place.
 I saw when forth a tired lover went,
 His side past service, and his courage spent,
 Yet this is less than if he had seen me ;
 May that shame fall mine enemies' chance to be.
 When have not I, fixed to thy side, close laid ?
 I have thy husband, guard, and fellow played.
 The people by my company she pleased ;
 My love was cause that more men's love she seized. 20
 What, should I tell her vain tongue's filthy lies,
 And, to my loss, god-wronging perjuries ?
 What secret becks in banquets with her youths,
 With privy signs, and talk dissembling truths ?

² The original has "Venerunt capiti cornua sera meo."

Hearing her to be sick, I thither ran,
But with my rival sick she was not than.
These hardened me, with what I keep obscure :¹
Some other seek, who will these things endure.
Now my ship in the wishèd haven crowned,
With joy hears Neptune's swelling waters sound. 30
Leave thy once-powerful words, and flatteries,
I am not as I was before, unwise.
Now love and hate my light breast each way move,
But victory, I think, will hap to love.
I'll hate, if I can ; if not, love 'gainst my will,
Bulls hate the yoke, yet what they hate have still.
I fly her lust, but follow beauty's creature,
I loathe her manners, love her body's feature.
Nor with thee, nor without thee can I live,
And doubt to which desire the palm to give. 40
Or less fair, or less lewd would thou might'st be :
Beauty with lewdness doth right ill agree.
Her deeds gain hate, her face entreateth love ;
Ah, she doth more worth than her vices prove !
Spare me, oh, by our fellow bed, by all
The gods, who by thee, to be perjured fall.²
And by thy face to me a power divine,
And by thine eyes, whose radiance burns out mine !
Whate'er thou art, mine art thou : choose this course,
Wilt have me willing, or to love by force. 50
Rather I'll hoist up sail, and use the wind,
That I may love yet, though against my mind.

What day was that, which all sad haps to bring,
White birds to lovers did not² always sing?
Or is I think my wish against the stars?
Or shall I plain some god against me wars?
Who mine was called, whom I loved more than any,
I fear with me is common now to many.
Err I? or by my books³ is she so known?
'Tis so : by my wit her abuse is grown.
And justly : for her praise why did I tell?
The wench by my fault is set forth to sell. 10
The bawd I play, lovers to her I guide :
Her gate by my hands is set open wide.
'Tis doubtful whether verse avail or harm,
Against my good they were an envious charm.
When Thebes, when Troy, when Cæsar should be writ,
Alone Corinna moves my wanton wit.
With Muse opposed, would I my lines had done,
And Phœbus had forsook my work begun !
Nor, as use will not poets' record hear,
Would I my words would any credit bear. 20

De Junonis festo.

When fruit-filled Tuscia should a wife give me,
 We touched the walls, Camillus, won by thee.
 The priests to Juno did prepare chaste feasts,
 With famous pageants, and their home-bred beasts.
 To know their rites well recompensed my stay,
 Though thither leads a rough steep hilly way.
 There stands an old wood with thick trees dark clouded :
 Who sees it grants some deity there is shrouded.
 An altar takes men's incense and oblation,
 An altar made after the ancient fashion. 10
 Here, when the pipe with solemn tunes doth sound,
 The annual pomp goes on the covered ² ground.
 White heifers by glad people forth are led,
 Which with the grass of Tuscan fields are fed,
 And calves from whose feared front no threatening flies,
 And little pigs, base hogsties' sacrifice,
 And rams with horns their hard heads wreathèd back ;
 Only the goddess-hated goat did lack,
 By whom disclosed, she in the high woods took,
 Is said to have attempted flight forsook. 20
 Now ³ is the goat brought through the boys with darts,
 And give[n] to him that the first wound imparts.

AD MUSAM. I.

FLY, merry Muse, unto that merry town,
Where thou mayst plays, revels, and triumphs see ;
The house of fame, and theatre of renown,
Where all good wits and spirits love to be.
Fall in between their hands that praise and love thee,²
And be to them a laughter and a jest :
But as for them which scorning shall reprove³ thee,
Disdain their wits, and think thine own the best.
But if thou find any so gross and dull,
That thinks I do to private taxing⁴ lean,

10

¹ Dyce has carefully recorded the readings of a MS. copy (Harl. MS. 1836) of the present epigrams. As in most cases the variations are unimportant, I have not thought it necessary to reproduce Dyce's elaborate collation. Where the MS. readings are distinctly preferable I have adopted them ; but in such cases I have been careful to record the readings of the printed copies.

² So Dyce.—Old eds. "loue and praise thee ;" MS. "Seeme to love thee."

³ So Isham copy and MS. Ed. A "approve."

⁴ Censuring. Dyce compares the Induction to the Knight of the Burning Pestle :—

" Fly far from hence
All private taxes."

Bid him go hang, for he is but a gull,
 And knows not what an epigram doth ¹ mean,
 Which taxeth,² under a particular name,
 A general vice which merits public blame.

OF A GULL. II.

Oft in my laughing rhymes I name a gull;
 But this new term will many questions breed;
 Therefore at first I will express at full,
 Who is a true and perfect gull indeed.
 A gull is he who fears a velvet gown,
 And, when a wench is brave, dares not speak to her;
 A gull is he which traverseth the town,
 And is for marriage known a common wooer;
 A gull is he which, while he proudly wears
 A silver-hilted rapier by his side, 10
 Endures the lie³ and knocks about the ears,
 Whilst in his sheath his sleeping sword doth bide;
 A gull is he which wears good handsome clothes,
 And stands in presence stroking up his hair,
 And fills up his unperfect speech with oaths,
 But speaks not one wise word throughout the year:
 But, to define a gull in terms precise,—
 A gull is he which seems and is not wise.⁴

⁴ “To this epigram there is an evident allusion in the following one

IN REFUM. III.

Rufus the courtier, at the theatre,
 Leaving the best and most conspicuous place,
 Doth either to the stage¹ himself transfer,
 Or through a grate² doth show his double face,

Our English Martiall hath full pleasantly
 In his close nips describde a gull to thee :
 I'll follow him, and set downe my conceit
 What a gull is—oh, word of much receipt !
 He is a gull whose indiscretion
 Cracks his purse-strings to be in fashion ;
 He is a gull who is long in taking roote
 In barraine soyle where can be but small fruite ;
 He is a gull who runnes himselfe in debt
 For twelue dayes' wonder, hoping so to get ;
 He is a gull whose conscience is a block,
 Not to take interest, but wastes his stock ;
 He is a gull who cannot haue a whore,
 But brags how much he spends upon her score ;
 He is a gull that for commoditie
 Payes tenne times ten, and sells the same for threee ;
 He is a gull who, passing finicall,
 Peiseth each word to be rhetoricall ;
 And, to conclude, who selfe-conceitedly
 Thinks al men guls, ther's none more gull then he.'

Guilpin's Skialetheia, &c. 1598, Epig. 20."
 —Dyce.

¹ It was a common practice for gallants to sit upon hired stools in the stage, especially at the private theatres. From the Induction to Marston's Malcontent it appears that the custom was not tolerated at some of the public theatres. The ordinary charge for the use of a stool was sixpence.

² Malone was no doubt right in supposing that there is here an allusion to the "private boxes" placed at each side of the balcony at the back of the stage. They must have been very dark and uncomfortable. In the Gull's Horn-Book Dekker says that "much new Satin was there dampned by being smothered to death in darkness."

For that the clamorous fry of Inns of Court
 Fill up the private rooms of greater price,
 And such a place where all may have resort
 He in his singularity doth despise.
 Yet doth not his particular humour shun
 The common stews and brothels of the town,
 Though all the world in troops do thither run,
 Clean and unclean, the gentle and the clown :
 Then why should Rufus in his pride abhor
 A common seat, that loves a common whore ?

 But since the devil brought them thus together,
 To my discoursing thoughts it is a wonder, 10
 Why presently as soon as they came thither,
 The self-same devil did them part asunder.

 That thus did part them ere they did some evil.

 IN TITUM. VI.

A curious illustration of this is found in the Metamorphosis of the Walnut Tree of Borehall, written about 1645, when the poet [William Basse] brings trees of all descriptions to the funeral, particularly a gigantic oak—

“That thing defiles a man, that doth proceed
From out the mouth, not that which enters in.”
Hence is it that we seldom hear him swear;

The fall of money,¹ and burning of Paul's steeple,²
 The blazing star,³ and Spaniards' overthrow :⁴
 By these events, notorious to the people,
 He measures times, and things forepast doth show :
 But most of all, he chiefly reckons by
 A private chance,—the death of his curst⁵ wife ;
 This is to him the dearest memory,
 And th' happiest accident of all his life.

 IN MARCUM. XXI.

When Marcus comes from Mins',⁶ he still doth swear,
 By "come⁷ on seven," that all is lost and gone :

¹ "This yeare [1560] in the end of September the copper monies which had been coyned under King Henry the Eight and once before abased by King Edward the Sixth, were again brought to a lower valuacion." —Hayward's Annals of Queen Elizabeth, p. 73.

² On the 4th June 1561, the steeple of St. Paul's was struck by lightning.

³ "On the 10th of October (some say on the 7th) appeared a blazing star in the north, bushing towards the east, which was nightly seen diminishing of his brightness until the 21st of the same month." —Stow's Annales, under the year 1580 (ed. 1615, p. 687).

⁴ The defeat of the Spanish Armada in 1588.

⁵ Vixenish.

⁶ Dyce conjectures that this was the name of some person who kept an ordinary where gaming was practised. (MS. "for newes.")

⁷ So eds. B, C. —Isham copy and ed. A "a seaven."

But that's not true ; for he hath lost his hair,
Only for that he came too much on ¹ one.

IN CYPRIUM. XXII.

The fine youth Cyprius is more terse and neat
Than the new garden of the Old Temple is ;
And still the newest fashion he doth get,
And with the time doth change from that to this ;
He wears a hat now of the flat-crown block,²
The treble ruff,³ long coat, and doublet French ;
He takes tobacco, and doth wear a lock,⁴
And wastes more time in dressing than a wench.

Yet this new-fangled youth, made for these times,
Doth, above all, praise old George ⁵ Gascoigne's rhymes.⁶

IN CINEAM. XXIII.

When Cineas comes amongst his friends in morning,
He slyly looks ⁷ who first his cap doth move :

² Shape or fashion ; properly the wooden mould on which the crown of a hat is shaped.

³ So MS.—Old eds. "ruffes."

⁴ Love-lock ; a lock of hair hanging down the shoulder in the left side. It was usually plaited with ribands.

⁵ So MS. and eds. B, C.—Not in Isham copy or ed. A.

⁶ Gascoigne's "rhymes" have been edited in two thick volumes by Mr. Carew Hazlitt. He died on 7th October 1577. In Gabriel Harvey's Letter Book (recently edited by Mr. Edward Scott for the Camden Society) there are some elegies on him.

⁷ So Isham copy and ed. A.—Eds. B, C "spies."—MS. "notes."

Him he salutes, the rest so grimly scorning,
 As if for ever they had lost his love.
 I, knowing how it doth the humour fit
 Of this fond gull to be saluted first,
 Catch at my cap, but move it not a whit :
 Which he perceiving,¹ seems for spite to burst.
 But, Cineas, why expect you more of me
 Than I of you? I am as good a man, 10
 And better too by many a quality,
 For vault, and dance, and fence, and rhyme I can :
 You keep a whore at your own charge, men tell me ;
 Indeed, friend Cineas, therein you excel me.²

 IN GALLUM. XXIV.

Gallus hath been this summer-time in Friesland,
 And now, return'd, he speaks such warlike words,
 As, if I could their English understand,
 I fear me they would cut my throat like swords ;

¹ So the MS.—Isham copy and ed. A “Which perceiving he.”—Eds. B, C “Which to perceiving he.”

² The MS. adds—

“You keepe a whore att your [own] charge in towne ;
 Indeede, frend Ceneas, there you put me downe.”

He talks of counter-scarfs,¹ and casamates,²
 Of parapets, curtains, and palisadoes;³
 Of flankers, ravelins, gabions he prates,
 And of false-brays,⁴ and sallies, and scaladoes.⁵
 But, to requite such gulling terms as these,
 With words to my profession I reply ;
 I tell of fourching, vouchers, and counterpleas,
 Of withernams, essoins, and champarty.
 So, neither of us understanding either,
 We part as wise as when we came together.

'And made those strange approaches by false-brays,
 Reduits, half-moons, horn-works, and such close ways.'

B. Jons. Underwoods."—Nares.

⁵ Dyce points out that this passage is imitated in Fitzgeoffrey's Notes from Black-Fryers, Sig. E. 7, ed. 1620.

⁶ In this epigram, as Dyce showed, Davies is glancing at a sonnet of Making his mistress march with men of war,

 With title of "Tenth Worthy" doth her lade.
 Methinks that gull did use his terms as fit,
 Which term'd his love "a giant for her wit."

 IN GELLAM. XXVI.

If Gella's beauty be examinèd,
 She hath a dull dead eye, a saddle nose,
 An ill-shap'd face, with morphew overspread,
 And rotten teeth, which she in laughing shows ;
 Briefly, she is the filthiest wench in town,
 Of all that do the art of whoring use :
 But when she hath put on her satin gown,
 Her cut¹ lawn apron, and her velvet shoes,
 Her green silk stockings, and her petticoat
 Of taffeta, with golden fringe around, 10
 And is withal perfum'd with civet hot,
 Which doth her valiant stinking breath confound,—
 Yet she with these additions is no more
 Than a sweet, filthy, fine, ill-favour'd whore.

Drayton's "To the Celestiall Numbers" in Idea. Jonson told Drummond that "S. J. Davies played in ane Epigrame on Draton's, who in a sonnet concluded his mistress might been the Ninth [sic] Worthy ; and said he used a phrase like Dametas in Arcadia, who said, For wit his Mistresse might be a Gyant."—Notes of Ben Jonson's Conversations with Drummond, p. 15. (ed. Shakesp. Soc.)

IN SYLLAM. XXVII.

Sylla is often challeng'd to the field,
 To answer, like a gentleman, his foes :
 But then doth he this¹ only answer yield,
 That he hath livings and fair lands to lose.
 Sylla, if none but beggars valiant were,
 The king of Spain would put us all in fear.

IN SYLLAM. XXVIII.

Who dares affirm that Sylla dare not fight?
 When I dare swear he dares adventure more
 Than the most brave and most² all-daring wight
 That ever arms with resolution bore ;
 He that dare touch the most unwholesome whore
 That ever was retir'd into the spittle,
 And dares court wenches standing at a door
 (The portion of his wit being passing little) ;
 He that dares give his dearest friends offences,
 Which other valiant fools do fear to do,
 And, when a fever doth confound his senses,
 Dare eat raw beef, and drink strong wine thereto ;

10

² So Isham copy.—Ed. A “most brave, most all daring.”—Eds. B, C “most brave and all daring.”—MS. “most valiant and all-daring.”

He that dares take tobacco on the stage,¹
Dares man a whore at noon-day through the street,
Dares dance in Paul's, and in this formal age
Dares say and do whatever is unmeet ;
Whom fear of shame could never yet affright,
Who dares affirm that Sylla dares not fight ?

IN HEYWODUM. XXIX.

Heywood,² that did in epigrams excel,
Is now put down since my light Muse arose ;³
As buckets are put down into a well,
Or as a schoolboy putteth down his hose.

¹ There are frequent allusions to this practice. Cf. Induction to Cynthia's Revels :—" I have my three sorts of tobacco in my pocket ; my light by me."

² John Heywood, the well-known epigrammatist and interlude-writer. His Proverbs were edited in 1874, with a pleasantly-written Introduction and useful notes, by Mr. Julian Sharman.

³ Dyce refers to a passage of Sir John Harington's Metamorphosis of Ajax, 1596 :—" This Haywood for his proverbs and epigrams is not yet put down by any of our country, though one [marginal note, M. Davies] doth indeed come near him, that graces him the more in saying he puts him down." He quotes also from Bastard's Chrestoleros, 1598 (Lib. ii. Ep. 15 ; Lib. iii. Ep. 3, and Freeman's Rubbe and a Great Cast (Pt. ii., Ep. 100), allusions to the present epigram.

IN DACUM.¹ XXX.

Amongst the poets Dacus number'd is,
 Yet could he never make an English rhyme :
 But some prose speeches I have heard of his,
 Which have been spoken many a hundred time ;
 The man that keeps the elephant hath one,
 Wherein he tells the wonders of the beast ;
 Another Banks pronouncèd long agone,
 When he his curtal's² qualities express'd:
 He first taught him that keeps the monuments
 At Westminster, his formal tale to say,
 And also him which puppets represents,
 And also him which with the ape doth play.
 Though all his poetry be like to this,
 Amongst the poets Dacus number'd is.

 IN PRISCUM. XXXI.

When Priscus, rais'd from low to high estate,
 Rode through the street in pompous jollity,
 Caius, his poor familiar friend of late,
 Bespake him thus, " Sir, now you know not me."
 "'Tis likely, friend," quoth Priscus, " to be so,
 For at this time myself I do not know."

² All the information about Banks' wonderful horse Morocco ("the little horse that ambled on the top of Paul's") is collected in Mr. Halliwell-Phillips' Memoranda on Love's Labour Lost.

IN BRUNUM. XXXII.

Brunus, which deems¹ himself a fair sweet youth,
Is nine and thirty² year of age at least ;
Yet was he never, to confess the truth,
But a dry starveling when he was at best.
This gull was sick to show his nightcap fine,
And his wrought pillow overspread with lawn ;
But hath been well since his grief's cause hath line³
At Trollop's by Saint Clement's Church in pawn.

IN FRANCIUM. XXXIII.

When Francus comes to solace with his whore,
He sends for rods, and strips himself stark naked ;
For his lust sleeps, and will not rise before,
By whipping of the wench, it be awakèd.
I envy him not, but wish I⁴ had the power
To make myself his wench but one half-hour.

IN CASTOREM. XXXIV.

Of speaking well why do we learn the skill,
Hoping thereby honour and wealth to gain ?
Sith railing Castor doth, by speaking ill,
Opinion of much wit, and gold obtain.

Septimius¹ lives, and is like garlic seen,
 For though his head be white, his blade is green.
 This old mad colt deserves a martyr's praise,
 For he was burnèd² in Queen Mary's days.

OF TOBACCO. XXXVI.

Homer of Moly and Nepenthe sings ;
 Moly, the gods' most sovereign herb divine,
 Nepenthe, Helen's³ drink, which gladness brings,
 Heart's grief expels, and doth the wit refine.
 But this our age another world hath found,
 From whence an herb of heavenly power is brought ;
 Moly is not so sovereign for a wound,
 Nor hath nepenthe so great wonders wrought.
 It is tobacco, whose sweet subtle⁴ fume
 The hellish torment of the teeth doth ease, 10
 By drawing down and drying up the rheum,
 The mother and the nurse of each disease ;

¹ So ed. B.—Isham copy, ed. A, and MS. "Septimus."

² "Burn" is often used with an indelicate double entendre. Cf. Lear iii, 2, "No heretics burned but wenchers' suitors;" Troilus and Cressida, v, 2, "A burning devil take them."

³ Isham copy, "Heuens;" and eds. B, C "Heuens."—MS. "helevs."—Davies alludes to Odyssey iv., 219, &c.

⁴ So MS.—Old eds. "substantiall."

It is tobacco, which doth cold expel,
 And clears th' obstructions of the arteries,
 And surfeits threatening death digesteth well,
 Decocting all the stomach's crudities ;¹
 It is tobacco, which hath power to clarify
 The cloudy mists before dim eyes appearing ;
 It is tobacco, which hath power to rarify
 The thick gross humour which doth stop the hearing ; 20
 The wasting hectic, and the quartan fever,
 Which doth of physic make a mockery,
 The gout it cures, and helps ill breaths for ever,
 Whether the cause in teeth or stomach be ;
 And though ill breaths were by it but confounded,
 Yet that vild² medicine it doth far excel,
 Which by Sir Thomas More³ hath been propounded,
 For this is thought a gentleman-like smell.
 O, that I were one of these mountebanks
 Which praise their oils and powders which they sell ! 30
 My customers would give me coin with thanks ;
 I for this ware, forsooth,⁴ a tale would tell :

¹ We are reminded of Bobadil's encomium of tobacco :—"I could say what I know of the virtue of it, for the expulsion of rheums, raw humours, crudities, obstructions, with a thousand of this kind ; but I profess myself no quacksalver. Only this much : by Hercules I do hold it and will affirm it before any prince in Europe to be the most sovereign and precious weed that ever the earth tendered to the use of man."

² So MS. —Not in old eds.

⁴ So eds. A, B, C. —Isham copy "so smooth." —MS. "so faire."

Yet would I use none of these terms before ;
 I would but say, that it the pox will cure ;
 This were enough, without discoursing more,
 All our brave gallants in the town t'allure.

IN CRASSUM. XXXVII.

Crassus his lies are no ¹ pernicious lies,
 But pleasant fictions, hurtful unto none
 But to himself ; for no man counts him wise
 To tell for truth that which for false is known.
 He swears that Gaunt ² is three-score miles about,
 And that the bridge at Paris ³ on the Seine
 Is of such thickness, length, and breadth throughout,
 That six-score arches can it scarce sustain ;
 He swears he saw so great a dead man's skull
 At Canterbury digg'd out of the ground, 10
 As ⁴ would contain of wheat three bushels full ;
 And that in Kent are twenty yeomen found,
 Of which the poorest every year ⁵ dispends
 Five thousand pound : these and five thousand mo
 So oft he hath recited to his friends,
 That now himself persuades himself 'tis so.

Of bridges, towns, and things that have no life?
He is a lawyer, and doth well espy
That for such lies an action will not lie.

IN PHILONEM. XXXVIII.

Philo, the lawyer,¹ and the fortune-teller,
The school-master, the midwife,² and the bawd,
The conjurer, the buyer and the seller
Of painting which with breathing will be thaw'd,
Doth practise physic; and his credit grows,
As doth the ballad-singer's auditory,
Which hath at Temple-Bar his standing chose,
And to the vulgar sings an ale-house story:
First stands a porter; then an oyster-wife
Doth stint her cry and stay her steps to hear him; 10
Then comes a cutpurse ready with his³ knife,
And then a country client presseth⁴ near him;
There stands the constable, there stands the whore,
And, hearkening⁵ to the song, mark⁶ not each other;

 And doth no more mistrust him than his brother :
 This² Orpheus to such hearers giveth music,
 And Philo to such patients giveth physic.

 IN FUSCUM. XXXIX.

Fuscus is free, and hath the world at will ;
 Yet, in the course of life that he doth lead,
 He's like a horse which, turning round a mill,
 Doth always in the self-same circle tread :
 First, he doth rise at ten ;³ and at eleven
 He goes to Gill's, where he doth eat till one ;
 Then sees a play till six ;⁴ and sups at seven ;

 With the foregoing description of the "ballad-singer's auditory" compare Wordsworth's lines On the power of Music, and Vincent Bourne's charming Latin verses (entitled Cantatrices) on the Ballad Singers of the Seven Dials.

² So MS.—Eds. "Thus."

³ Cf. a somewhat similar description in Guilpin's Skialetheia (Ep.
 25):—

"My lord most court-like lies abed till noon,
 Then all high-stomacht riseth to his dinner ;
 Falls straight to dice before his meat be down,
 Or to digest walks to some female sinner ;
 Perhaps fore-tired he gets him to a play,
 Comes home to supper and then falls to dice ;
 Then his devotion wakes till it be day,
 And so to bed where unto noon he lies."

⁴ If the play ended at six, it could hardly have begun before three.
 From numerous passages it appears that performances frequently began at three, or even later. Probably the curtain rose at one in the winter and three in the summer.

And, after supper, straight to bed is gone ;
And there till ten next day he doth remain ;
And then he dines ; then sees a comedy ; 10
And then he sups, and goes to bed again :
Thus round he runs without variety,
 Save that sometimes he comes not to the play,
* But falls into a whore-house by the way.

IN AFRUM. XL.

The smell-feast¹ Afer travels to the Burse
Twice every day, the flying news to hear ;
Which, when he hath no money in his purse,
To rich men's tables he doth ever² bear.
He tells how Groni[n]gen³ is taken in⁴
By the brave conduct of illustrious Vere,
And how the Spanish forces Brest would win,
But that they do victorious Norris⁵ fear.
No sooner is a ship at sea surpris'd,
But straight he learns the news, and doth disclose it ;

² So MS.—Old eds. "often."

³ Groningen was taken by Maurice of Nassau. Vere was present at the siege.

⁴ The expression "take in" (in the sense of "conquer, capture") is very common.

⁵ An English expedition, under Sir John Norris, was sent to Brittany in 1594.

No¹ sooner hath the Turk a plot devis'd

 Fair-written in a scroll he hath the names
 Of all the widows which the plague hath made;
 And persons, times, and places, still he frames
 To every tale, the better to persuade.
 We call him Fame, for that the wide-mouth slave
 Will eat as fast as he will utter lies; 20
 For fame is said an hundred mouths to have,
 And he eats more than would five-score suffice.

IN PAULUM. XLI.

By lawful mart, and by unlawful stealth,
 Paulus, in spite of envy, fortunate,
 Derives out of the ocean so much wealth,
 As he may well maintain a lord's estate:
 But on the land a little gulf there is,
 Wherein he drowneth all this² wealth of his.

Publius, a¹ student at the Common-Law,

³ In Titus Andronicus, v.1, we have the expression "to fight at head" ("As true a dog as ever fought at head"). "To fly at the head" was equivalent to "attack;" and in Nares' Glossary (ed. Halliwell) the expression "run on head," in the sense of incite, is quoted from Heywood's Spider and Flie, 1556.

When I this proposition had defended,
 "A coward cannot be an honest man,"
 Thou, Sylla, seem'st forthwith to be offended,
 And hold'st² the contrary, and swear'st³ he can.
 But when I tell thee that he will forsake
 His dearest friend in peril of his life,
 Thou then art chang'd, and say'st thou didst mistake ;
 And so we end our argument and strife :
 Yet I think oft, and think I think aright,
 Thy argument argues thou wilt not fight.

IN DACUM. XLV.

Dacus,⁴ with some good colour and pretence,

IN MARCUM. XLVI.

Why dost thou, Marcus, in thy misery been ridiculed in Ep. xxx.). In Daniel's Complaint of Rosamond (1592) are the lines :—

“ Ah, beauty, syren, faire enchanting good,
Sweet silent rhetorique of perswading eyes,
Dumb eloquence, whose power doth move the blood
More than the words or wisdom of the wise,” &c.

Perhaps there is an allusion to this epigram in Marston's fourth satire :—

“ What, shall not Rosamond or Gaveston
Ope their sweet lips without detraction ?
But must our modern critticks envious eye
Seeme thus to quote some grosse deformity,
Where art not error shineth in their stile,
But error and no art doth thee beguile ?”

MEDITATIONS OF A GULL. XLVII.

See, yonder melancholy gentleman,
 Which, hood-wink'd with his hat, alone doth sit !
 Think what he thinks, and tell me, if you can,
 What great affairs trouble his little wit.
 He thinks not of the war 'twixt France and Spain,¹
 Whether it be for Europe's good or ill,
 Nor whether the Empire can itself maintain
 Against the Turkish power encroaching still ;²
 Nor what great town in all the Netherlands
 The States determine to besiege this spring, 10
 Nor how the Scottish policy now stands,
 Nor what becomes of the Irish mutining.³
 But he doth seriously bethink him whether
 Of the gull'd people he be more esteem'd
 For his long cloak or for⁴ his great black feather
 By which each gull is now a gallant deem'd ;
 Or of a journey he deliberates
 To Paris-garden, Cock-pit, or the play ;
 Or how to steal a dog he meditates,
 Or what he shall unto his mistress say.
 Yet with these thoughts he thinks himself most fit
 To be of counsel with a king for wit.

AD MUSAM. XLVIII.

Peace, idle Muse, have done ! for it is time,
 Since lousy Ponticus envies my fame,
 And swears the better sort are much to blame
 To make me so well known for my ill rhyme.
 Yet Banks his horse¹ is better known than he ;
 So are the camels and the western hog,
 And so is Lepidus his printed dog² :
 Why doth not Ponticus their fames envy ?
 Besides, this Muse of mine and the black feather
 Grew both together fresh in estimation ; 10
 And both, grown stale, were cast away together :
 What fame is this that scarce lasts out a fashion ?
 Only this last in credit doth remain,
 That from henceforth each bastard cast-forth rhyme,
 Which doth but savour of a libel vein,
 Shall call me father, and be thought my crime ;
 So dull, and with so little sense endued,
 Is my gross-headed judge the multitude.

J. D.

² Dyce points out that by Lepidus is meant Sir John Harington, whose dog Bungey is represented in a compartment of the engraved title-page of the translation of Orlando Furioso, 1591. In his epigrams (Book III. Ep. 21) Harington refers to this epigram of Davies, and expresses himself greatly pleased at the compliment paid to his dog.

IGNOTO.

I¹ LOVE thee not for sacred chastity,—
Who loves for that?—nor for thy sprightly wit ;
I love thee not for thy sweet modesty,
Which makes thee in perfection's throne to sit ;
I love thee not for thy enchanting eye,
Thy beauty['s] ravishing perfection ;
I love thee not for unchaste luxury,
Nor for thy body's fair proportion ;
I love thee not for that my soul doth dance
And leap with pleasure, when those lips of thine
Give musical and graceful utterance
To some (by thee made happy) poet's line ;
I love thee not for voice or slender small :
But wilt thou know wherefore ? fair sweet, for all.

Faith, wench, I cannot court thy sprightly eyes,
With the base-viol plac'd between my thighs ;
I cannot lisp, nor to some fiddle sing,
Nor run upon a high-stretch'd minikin ;
I cannot whine in puling elegies,
Entombing Cupid with sad obsequies ;

¹ This sonnet and the two following pieces are only found in Isham copy and ed. A.

I am not fashion'd for these amorous times,
 To court thy beauty with lascivious rhymes ;
 I cannot dally, caper, dance, and sing,
 Oiling my saint with supple sonneting ;
 I cannot cross my arms, or sigh " Ay me,
 Ay me, forlorn ! " egregious foppery !
 I cannot buss thy fist,¹ play with thy hair,
 Swearing by Jove, " thou art most debonair ! "
 Not I, by cock ! but [I] shall tell thee roundly,—
 Hark in thine ear,—zounds, I can () thee soundly.

Sweet wench, I love thee : yet I will not sue,
 Or show my love as musky courtiers do ;
 I'll not carouse a health to honour thee,
 In this same bezzling² drunken courtesy,
 And, when all's quaff'd, eat up my bousing-glass³
 In glory that I am thy servile ass ;
 Nor will I wear a rotten Bourbon lock,⁴
 As some sworn peasant to a female smock.
 Well-featur'd lass, thou know'st I love thee dear :
 Yet for thy sake I will not bore mine ear,
 To hang thy dirty silken shoe-tires there ;
 Nor for thy love will I once gnash a brick,
 Or some pied colours in my bonnet stick :⁵
 But, by the chaps of hell, to do thee good,
 I'll freely spend my thrice-decocted blood.

THE FIRST BOOK OF LUCAN.

*Lucans First Booke Translated Line for Line, By Chr. Marlow.
At London, Printed by P. Short, and are to be sold by Walter Burre at the Signe of the Flower de Luce in Pauls Churchyard, 1600, 4to.*

This is the only early edition. The title-page of the 1600 4to. of Hero and Leander has the words, "Whereunto is added the first booke of Lucan;" but the two pieces are not found in conjunction.

TO HIS KIND AND TRUE FRIEND, EDWARD BLUNT.¹

BLUNT,² I propose to be blunt with you, and, out of my dulness, to encounter you with a Dedication in memory of that pure elemental wit, Chr. Marlowe, whose ghost or genius is to be seen walk the Churchyard,³ in, at the least, three or four sheets. Methinks you should presently look wild now, and grow humorously frantic upon the taste of it. Well, lest you should, let me tell you, this spirit was sometime a familiar of your own, Lucan's First Book translated; which, in regard of your old right in it, I have raised in the circle of your patronage. But stay now, Edward: if I mistake not, you are to accommodate yourself with some few instructions, touching the property of a patron, that you are not yet possessed of; and to study them for your better grace, as our gallants do fashions. First, you must be proud, and think you have merit enough in you, though you are ne'er so empty; then, when I bring you the book, take physic, and keep state; assign me a time by your man to come again; and, afore the day, be sure to have changed your lodging; in the meantime sleep little, and sweat with the invention of some pitiful dry jest or two, which you may happen to utter with some little, or not at all, marking of your friends, when you have found a place for them to come in at; or, if by chance something has dropped from you worth the taking up, weary all that come to you with the often repetition of it; censure, scornfully enough, and somewhat like a traveller; commend nothing, lest you discredit your (that which you would seem to have) judgment. These things, if you can mould yourself to them, Ned, I make no question that they will not become you. One special virtue in our patrons of these days I have promised myself you shall fit excellently, which is, to give nothing ; yes, thy love I will challenge as my peculiar object, both in this, and, I hope, many more succeeding offices. Farewell : I affect not the world should measure my thoughts to thee by a scale of this nature ; leave to think good of me when I fall from thee.

Thine in all rights of perfect friendship,

THOMAS THORPE.

THE FIRST BOOK OF LUCAN.

WARS worse than civil on Thessalian plains,
And outrage strangling law, and people strong,
We sing, whose conquering swords their own breasts
 lancht,¹

Armies allied, the kingdom's league uprooted,
Th' affrighted world's force bent on public spoil,
Trumpets and drums, like ² deadly, threatening other,
Eagles alike display'd, darts answering darts,
 Romans, what madness, what huge lust of war,
Hath made barbarians drunk with Latin blood?
Now Babylon, proud through our spoil, should stoop, 10
While slaughter'd Crassus' ghost walks unreveng'd,
Will ye wage war, for which you shall not triumph?
Ay me! O, what a world of land and sea
Might they have won whom civil broils have slain!
As far as Titan springs, where night dims heaven,
I, to the torrid zone where mid-day burns,
And where stiff winter, whom no spring resolves,

Fetters the Euxine Sea with chains of ice ;
 Scythia and wild Armenia had been yok'd,
 And they of Nilus' mouth, if there live any. 20
 Rome, if thou take delight in impious war,
 First conquer all the earth, then turn thy force
 Against thyself: as yet thou wants not foes.
 That now the walls of houses half-reared totter,
 That, rampires fallen down, huge heaps of stone
 Lie in our towns, that houses are abandon'd,
 And few live that behold their ancient seats ;
 Italy many years hath lien untill'd
 And chok'd with thorns ; that greedy earth wants hinds ;—
 Fierce Pyrrhus, neither thou nor Hannibal 30
 Art cause ; no foreign foe could so afflict us :
 These plagues arise from wreak of civil power.
 But if for Nero, then unborn, the Fates
 Would find no other means, and gods not slightly
 Purchase immortal thrones, nor Jove joy'd heaven
 Until the cruel giants' war was done ;
 We plain not, heavens, but gladly bear these evils
 For Nero's sake : Pharsalia groan with slaughter,
 And Carthage souls be glutted with our bloods !
 At Munda let the dreadful battles join ; 40
 Add, Cæsar, to these ills, Perusian famine,
 The Mutin toils, the fleet at Luca[s] sunk,
 And cruel¹ field near burning Ætna fought !
 Yet Rome is much bound to these civil arms,
 Which made thee emperor. Thee (seeing thou, being old,

Must shine a star) shall heaven (whom thou lovest)
 Receive with shouts ; where thou wilt reign as king,
 Or mount the Sun's flame-bearing chariot,
 And with bright restless fire compass the earth,
 Undaunted though her former guide be chang'd ; 50
 Nature and every power shall give thee place,
 What god it please thee be, or where to sway.
 But neither choose the north t'erect thy seat,
 Nor yet the adverse reeking¹ southern pole,
 Whence thou shouldst view thy Rome with squinting² beams.

If any one part of vast heaven thou swayest,
 The burden'd axes³ with thy force will bend :
 The midst is best ; that place is pure and bright ;
 There, Cæsar, mayst thou shine, and no cloud dim thee.
 Then men from war shall bide in league and ease, 60
 Peace through the world from Janus' face shall fly,
 And bolt the brazen gates with bars of iron.
 Thou, Cæsar, at this instant art my god ;
 Thee if I invoke, I shall not need
 To crave Apollo's aid or Bacchus' help ;
 Thy power inspires the Muse that sings this war.
 The causes first I purpose to unfold
 Of these garboils,⁴ whence springs a long discourse ;
 And what made madding people shake off peace.
 The Fates are envious, high seats⁵ quickly perish, 70

⁴ Tumults.

⁵ "Summisque negatum,
 Stare diu."

Under great burdens falls are ever grievous ;
 Rome was so great it could not bear itself.
 So when this world's compounded union breaks,
 Time ends, and to old Chaos all things turn,
 Confused stars shall meet, celestial fire
 Fleet on the floods, the earth shoulder the sea,
 Affording it no shore, and Phœbe's wain
 Chase Phœbus, and enrag'd affect his place,
 And strive to shine by day and full of strife
 Dissolve the engines of the broken world. 80
 All great things crush themselves ; such end the gods
 Allot the height of honour ; men so strong
 By land and sea, no foreign force could ruin.
 O Rome, thyself art cause of all these evils,
 Thyself thus shiver'd out to three men's shares !
 Dire league of partners in a kingdom last not.
 O faintly-join'd friends, with ambition blind,
 Why join you force to share the world betwixt you ?
 While th' earth the sea, and air the earth sustains,
 While Titan strives against the world's swift course, 90
 Or Cynthia, night's queen, waits upon the day,
 Shall never faith be found in fellow kings :
 Dominion cannot suffer partnership.
 This need[s] no foreign proof nor far-fet¹ story :
 Rome's infant walls were steep'd in brother's blood ;
 Nor then was land or sea, to breed such hate ;
 A town with one poor church set them at odds.²

² "Exiguum dominos commisit asyllum."

Cæsar's and Pompey's jarring love soon ended,
 'Twas peace against their wills ; betwixt them both
 Stepp'd Crassus in. Even as the slender isthmus, 100
 Betwixt the Ægæan,¹ and the Ionian sea,
 Keeps each from other, but being worn away,
 They both burst out, and each encounter other ;
 So whenas Crassus' wretched death, who stay'd them,
 Had fill'd Assyrian Carra's² walls with blood,
 His loss made way for Roman outrages.
 Parthians, y'afflict us more than ye suppose ;
 Being conquer'd, we are plagu'd with civil war.
 Swords share our empire : Fortune, that made Rome
 Govern the earth, the sea, the world itself, 110
 Would not admit two lords ; for Julia,
 Snatch'd hence by cruel Fates, with ominous howls
 Bare down to hell her son, the pledge of peace,
 And all bands of that death-presaging allïance.
 Julia, had heaven given thee longer life,
 Thou hadst restrain'd thy headstrong husband's rage,
 Yea, and thy father too, and, swords thrown down,
 Made all shake hands, as once the Sabines did :
 Thy death broke amity, and train'd to war
 These captains emulous of each other's glory. 120
 Thou fear'd'st, great Pompey, that late deeds would dim
 Old triumphs, and that Cæsar's conquering France
 Would dash the wreath thou war'st for pirates' wreck :

¹ "So old ed. in some copies which had been corrected at press ; other copies 'Aezean.'"—Dyce.

² Carræ's.

Thee war's use stirr'd, and thoughts that always scorn'd
 A second place. Pompey could bide no equal,
 Nor Cæsar no superior : which of both
 Had justest cause, unlawful 'tis to judge :
 Each side had great partakers ; Cæsar's cause
 The gods abetted, Cato lik'd the other.¹
 Both differ'd much. Pompey was struck in years, 130
 And by long rest forgot to manage arms,
 And, being popular, sought by liberal gifts
 To gain the light unstable commons' love,
 And joy'd to hear his theatre's applause :
 He lived secure, boasting his former deeds,
 And thought his name sufficient to uphold him :
 Like to a tall oak in a fruitful field,
 Bearing old spoils and conquerors' monuments,
 Who, though his root be weak, and his own weight
 Keep him within the ground, his arms all bare, 140
 His body, not his boughs, send forth a shade ;
 Though every blast it nod,² and seem to fall,
 When all the woods about stand bolt upright,
 Yet he alone is held in reverence.
 Cæsar's renown for war was loss ; he restless,
 Shaming to strive but where he did subdue ;
 When ire or hope provok'd, heady and bold ;
 At all times charging home, and making havoc ;

 "Victrix causa diis placuit, sed victa Catoni."

² As the line stands we must take "nod" and "fall" transitively ("though every blast make it nod and seem to make it fall"). The original has "At quamvis primo nutet casura sub Euro."

Urging his fortune, trusting in the gods,
Destroying what withstood his proud desires, 150
And glad when blood and ruin made him way :
So thunder, which the wind tears from the clouds,
With crack of riven air and hideous sound
Filling the world, leaps out and throws forth fire,
Affrights poor fearful men, and blasts their eyes
With overthwarting flames, and raging shoots
Alongst the air, and, not resisting it,
Falls, and returns, and shivers where it lights.
Such humours stirr'd them up ; but this war's seed
Was even the same that wrecks all great dominions. 160
When Fortune made us lords of all, wealth flow'd,
And then we grew licentious and rude ;
The soldiers' prey and rapine brought in riot ;
Men took delight in jewels, houses, plate,
And scorn'd old sparing diet, and ware robes
Too light for women ; Poverty, who hatch'd
Rome's greatest wits,¹ was loath'd, and all the world
Ransack'd for gold, which breeds the world[s] decay ;
And then large limits had their butting lands ;
The ground, which Curius and Camillus till'd, 170
Was stretched unto the fields of hinds unknown.
Again, this people could not brook calm peace ;
Them freedom without war might not suffice :
Quarrels were rife ; greedy desire, still poor,
Did vild deeds ; then 'twas worth the price of blood,
And deem'd renown, to spoil their native town ;

Force mastered right, the strongest govern'd all ;
 Hence came it that th' edicts were over-rul'd,
 That laws were broke, tribunes with consuls strove,
 Sale made of offices, and people's voices 180
 Bought by themselves and sold, and every year
 Frauds and corruption in the Field of Mars ;
 Hence interest and devouring usury sprang,
 Faith's breach, and hence came war, to most men welcome.

Now Cæsar overpass'd the snowy Alps ;
 His mind was troubled, and he aim'd at war :
 And coming to the ford of Rubicon,
 At night in dreadful vision fearful¹ Rome
 Mourning appear'd, whose hoary hairs were torn,
 And on her turret-bearing head dispers'd, 190
 And arms all naked ; who, with broken sighs,
 And staring, thus bespoke : "What mean'st thou, Cæsar ?
 Whither goes my standard ? Romans if ye be,
 And bear true hearts, stay here !" This spectacle
 Struck Cæsar's heart with fear ; his hair stood up,
 And faintness numb'd his steps there on the brink.
 He thus cried out : "Thou thunderer that guard'st
 Rome's mighty walls, built on Tarpeian rock !
 Ye gods of Phrygia and Iulus' line,
 Quirinus' rites, and Latian Jove advanc'd 200
 On Alba hill ! O vestal flames ! O Rome,
 My thoughts sole goddess, aid mine enterprise !
 I hate thee not, to thee my conquests stoop :

Cæsar is thine, so please it thee, thy soldier.
 He, he afflicts Rome that made me Rome's foe."
 This said, he, laying aside all lets¹ of war,
 Approach'd the swelling stream with drum and ensign :
 Like to a lion of scorch'd desert Afric,
 Who, seeing hunters, pauseth till fell wrath
 And kingly rage increase, then, having whisk'd 210
 His tail athwart his back, and crest heav'd up,
 With jaws wide-open ghastly roaring out,
 Albeit the Moor's light javelin or his spear
 Sticks in his side, yet runs upon the hunter.

In summer-time the purple Rubicon,
 Which issues from a small spring, is but shallow,
 And creeps along the vales, dividing just
 The bounds of Italy from Cisalpine France.
 But now the winter's wrath, and watery moon
 Being three days old, enforc'd the flood to swell, 220
 And frozen Alps thaw'd with resolving winds.
 The thunder-hoof'd² horse, in a crookèd line,
 To scape the violence of the stream, first waded ;
 Which being broke, the foot had easy passage.
 As soon as Cæsar got unto the bank
 And bounds of Italy, " Here, here," saith he,
 " An end of peace ; here end polluted laws !
 Hence leagues and covenants ! Fortune, thee I follow !
 War and the Destinies shall try my cause."
 This said, the restless general through the dark, 230

² "Sonipes."

Swifter than bullets thrown from Spanish slings,
 Or darts which Parthians backward shoot, march'd on ;
 And then, when Lucifer did shine alone,
 And some dim stars, he Ariminum enter'd.
 Day rose, and view'd these tumults of the war :
 Whether the gods or blustering south were cause
 I know not, but the cloudy air did frown.
 The soldiers having won the market-place,
 There spread the colours with confusèd noise
 Of trumpets' clang, shrill cornets, whistling fifes. 240
 The people started ; young men left their beds,
 And snatch'd arms near their household-gods hung up,
 Such as peace yields ; worm-eaten leathern targets,
 Through which the wood peer'd,¹ headless darts, old swords

With ugly teeth of black rust foully scarr'd.
 But seeing white eagles, and Rome's flags well known,
 And lofty Cæsar in the thickest throng,
 They shook for fear, and cold benumb'd their limbs,
 And muttering much, thus to themselves complain'd :
 " O walls unfortunate, too near to France ! 250
 Predestinate to ruin ! all lands else
 Have stable peace : here war's rage first begins ;
 We bide the first brunt. Safer might we dwell
 Under the frosty bear, or parching east,
 Waggons or tents, than in this frontier town.
 We first sustain'd the uproars of the Gauls
 And furious Cimbrians, and of Carthage Moors :

As oft as Rome was sack'd, here gan the spoil."
 Thus sighing whisper'd they, and none durst speak,
 And show their fear or grief; but as the fields 260
 When birds are silent thorough winter's rage,
 Or sea far from the land, so all were whist,¹
 Now light had quite dissolv'd the misty night,
 And Cæsar's mind unsettled musing stood;
 But gods and fortune pricked him to this war,
 Infringing all excuse of modest shame,
 And labouring to approve² his quarrel good.
 The angry senate, urging Gracchus'³ deeds,
 From doubtful Rome wrongly expell'd the tribunes
 That cross'd them: both which now approach'd the camp, 270
 And with them Curio, sometime tribune too,
 One that was fee'd for Cæsar, and whose tongue
 Could tune the people to the nobles' mind.⁴
 "Cæsar," said he, "while eloquence prevail'd,
 And I might plead and draw the commons' minds
 To favour thee, against the senate's will,
 Five years I lengthen'd thy command in France;
 But law being put to silence by the wars,
 We, from her houses driven, most willingly
 Suffer'd exile: let thy sword bring us home, 280
 Now, while their part is weak and fears, march hence:

¹ Silent.

² Prove.

³ "Jactatis . . . Gracchis."

⁴ Marlowe omits to translate the words that follow in the original:—

"Utque ducem varias volventem pectore curas Conspexit."

Where men are ready lingering ever hurts.¹
 In ten years wonn'st thou France : Rome may be won
 With far less toil, and yet the honour's more ;
 Few battles fought with prosperous success
 May bring her down, and with her all the world.
 Nor shalt thou triumph when thou com'st to Rome,
 Nor Capitol be adorn'd with sacred bays ;
 Envy denies all ; with thy blood must thou
 Aby thy conquest past :² the son decrees 290
 To expel the father : share the world thou canst not ;
 Enjoy it all thou mayst." Thus Curio spake ;
 And therewith Cæsar, prone enough to war,
 Was so incens'd as are Elean³ steeds.
 With clamours, who, though lock'd and chain'd in stalls,⁴
 Souse⁵ down the walls, and make a passage forth.
 Straight summon'd he his several companies
 Unto the standard : his grave look appeas'd
 The wrestling tumult, and right hand made silence ;
 And thus he spake : " You that with me have borne 300
 A thousand brunts, and tried me full ten years,
 See how they quit our bloodshed in the north,

² An obscure rendering of

" Gentesque subactas

Vix impune feres."

³ Old ed. " Eleius." It is hardly possible to suppose (as Dyce suggests) that Marlowe took the adjective " Eleus " for a substantive.

⁴ A mistranslation of " carcere clauso." (" Carcer " is the barrier or starting-place in the circus.)

⁵ " Immineat foribus." " Souse " is a north-country word meaning to bang or dash. It is also applied to the swooping-down of a hawk.

Our friends' death, and our wounds, our wintering
 Under the Alps ! Rome rageth now in arms
 As if the Carthage Hannibal were near ;
 Cornets of horse are muster'd for the field ;
 Woods turn'd to ships ; both land and sea against us.
 Had foreign wars ill-thriv'd, or wrathful France
 Pursu'd us hither, how were we bested,
 When, coming conqueror, Rome afflicts me thus ? 310
 Let come their leader ¹ whom long peace hath quail'd,
 Raw soldiers lately press'd, and troops of gowns,
 Babbling ² Marcellus, Cato whom fools reverence !
 Must Pompey's followers, with strangers' aid
 (Whom from his youth he brib'd), needs make him king ?
 And shall he triumph long before his time,
 And, having once got head, still shall he reign ?
 What should I talk of men's corn reap'd by force,
 And by him kept of purpose for a dearth ?
 Who sees not war sit by the quivering judge, 320
 And sentence given in rings of naked swords,
 And laws assail'd, and arm'd men in the senate ?
 'Twas his troop hemm'd in Milo being accus'd ;
 And now, lest age might wane his state, he casts
 For civil war, wherein through use he's known
 To exceed his master, that arch-traitor Sylla.
 A[s] brood of barbarous tigers, having lapp'd
 The blood of many a herd, whilst with their dams
 They kennel'd in Hyrcania, evermore

² So Dyce for the old ed's. "Brabbling." The original has "Marcellusque loquax." ("Brabbling" means "wrangling.")

Will rage and prey ; so, Pompey, thou, having lick'd 330
 Warm gore from Sylla's sword, art yet athirst :
 Jaws flesh[ed] with blood continue murderous.
 Speak, when shall this thy long-usurped power end ?
 What end of mischief ? Sylla teaching thee,
 At last learn, wretch, to leave thy monarchy !
 What, now Sicilian ¹ pirates are suppress'd,
 And jaded ² king of Pontus poison'd slain,
 Must Pompey as his last foe plume on me,
 Because at his command I wound not up
 My conquering eagles ? say I merit naught,³ 340
 Yet, for long service done, reward these men,
 And so they triumph, be't with whom ye will.
 Whither now shall these old bloodless souls repair ?
 What seats for their deserts ? what store of ground
 For servitors to till ? what colonies
 To rest their bones ? say, Pompey, are these worse
 Than pirates of Sicilia ?⁴ they had houses.
 Spread, spread these flags that ten years' space have conquer'd !
 Let's use our tried force : they that now thwart right,
 In wars will yield to wrong :⁵ the gods are with us ; 350

² Old ed. has "Jaded, king of Pontus !"

³ "Unless we understand this in the sense of—say I receive no reward (—and in Fletcher's Woman-Hater, 'merit' means—derive profit, B. and F.'s Works, i, 91, ed. Dyce,—), it is a wrong translation of 'mihi si merces erepta laborum est.'"—Dyce.

⁴ "Sicilia" should be "Cilicia."

⁵ A free translation of the frigid original—

"Arma tenenti

Omnia dat qui justa negat."

Neither spoil nor kingdom seek we by these arms,
But Rome, at thraldom's feet, to rid from tyrants."
This spoke, none answer'd, but a murmuring buzz
Th' unstable people made: their household-gods
And love to Rome (though slaughter steel'd their hearts,
And minds were prone) restrain'd them; but war's love
And Cæsar's awe dash'd all. Then Lælius,¹
The chief centurion, crown'd with oaken leaves
For saving of a Roman citizen,
Stepp'd forth, and cried: "Chief leader of Rome's force,
So be. I may be bold to speak a truth, 361
We grieve at this thy patience and delay.
What, doubt'st thou us? even now when youthful blood
Pricks forth our lively bodies, and strong arms
Can mainly throw the dart, wilt thou endure
These purple grooms, that senate's tyranny?
Is conquest got by civil war so heinous?
Well, lead us, then, to Syrtes' desert shore,
Or Scythia, or hot Libya's thirsty sands.
This band, that all behind us might be quail'd, 370
Hath with thee pass'd the swelling ocean,
And swept the foaming breast of Arctic² Rhene.
Love over-rules my will; I must obey thee,
Cæsar: he whom I hear thy trumpets charge,
I hold no Roman; by these ten blest ensigns
And all thy several triumphs, shouldst thou bid me
Entomb my sword within my brother's bowels,

² Old ed. "Articks Rhene." ("Rhene" is the old form of "Rhine.")

Or father's throat, or women's groaning¹ womb,
 This hand, albeit unwilling, should perform it ;
 Or rob the gods, or sacred temples fire, 380
 These troops should soon pull down the church of Jove ;²
 If to encamp on Tuscan Tiber's streams,
 I'll boldly quarter out the fields of Rome ;
 What walls thou wilt be levell'd with the ground,
 These hands shall thrust the ram, and make them fly,
 Albeit the city thou wouldst have so raz'd
 Be Rome itself." Here every band applauded,
 And, with their hands held up, all jointly cried
 They'll follow where he please. The shouts rent heaven,
 As when against pine-bearing Ossa's rocks 390
 Beats Thracian Boreas, or when trees bow³ down
 And rustling swing up as the wind fets⁴ breath.
 When Cæsar saw his army prone to war,
 And Fates so bent, lest sloth and long delay
 Might cross him, he withdrew his troops from France,
 And in all quarters musters men for Rome.
 They by Lemannus' nook forsook their tents ;
 They whom⁵ the Lingones foil'd with painted spears,

¹ So old ed. Dyce's correction "or groaning woman's womb" seems hardly necessary. (The original has "plenaque in viscera partu conjugis.")

² "Numina miscebit castrens flamma Monetae."

³ Old ed. "bowde."

⁴ Fetches.

⁵ The original has—

"Castraque quae, Vogesi curvam super ardua rupem, Pugnaces pictis cohibebant Lingonas armis."

Dyce conjectures that Marlowe's copy read Lingones.

Under the rocks by crookèd Vogesus ;
 And many came from shallow Isara, 400
 Who, running long, falls in a greater flood,
 And, ere he sees the sea, loseth his name ;
 The yellow Ruthens left their garrisons ;
 Mild Atax glad it bears not Roman boats,¹
 And frontier Varus that the camp is far,
 Sent aid ; so did Alcides' port, whose seas
 Eat hollow rocks, and where the north-west wind
 Nor zephyr rules not, but the north alone
 Turmoils the coast, and enterance forbids ;
 And others came from that uncertain shore 410
 Which is nor sea nor land, but ofttimes both,
 And changeth as the ocean ebbs and flows ;
 Whether the sea roll'd always from that point
 Whence the wind blows, still forcèd to and fro ;
 Or that the wandering main follow the moon ;
 Or flaming Titan, feeding on the deep,
 Pulls them aloft, and makes the surge kiss heaven ;
 Philosophers, look you ; for unto me,
 Thou cause, whate'er thou be, whom God assigns
 This great effect, art hid. They came that dwell 420
 By Nemes' fields and banks of Satirus,²
 Where Tarbell's winding shores embrace the sea ;
 The Santons that rejoice in Cæsar's love ;³

² "Tunc rura Nemossi

Qui tenet et ripas Aturi."

³ Marlowe seems to have read here very ridiculously, "gaudetque amato [instead of amoto] Santonus hoste."—Dyce.

Those of Bituriges,¹ and light Axon² pikes ;
 And they of Rhene and Leuca,³ cunning darters,
 And Sequana that well could manage steeds ;
 The Belgians apt to govern British cars ;
 Th' A[r]verni, too, which boldly feign themselves
 The Roman's brethren, sprung of Ilian race ;
 The stubborn Nervians stain'd with Cotta's blood ; 430
 And Vangions who, like those of Sarmata,
 Wear open slops ;⁴ and fierce Batavians,
 Whom trumpet's clang incites ; and those that dwell
 By Cinga's stream, and where swift Rhodanus
 Drives Araris to sea ; they near the hills,⁵
 Under whose hoary rocks Gebenna hangs ;
 And, Trevier, thou being glad that wars are past thee ;
 And you, late-shorn Ligurians, who were wont
 In large-spread hair to exceed the rest of France ;
 And where to Hesus and fell Mercury⁶ 440
 They offer human flesh, and where Jove seems Bloody like Dian, whom the Scythians serve.
 And you, French Bardi, whose immortal pens
 Renown the valiant souls slain in your wars,
 Sit safe at home and chant sweet poesy.

¹ Marlowe has converted the name of a tribe into that of a country.

² The approved reading is "longisque leves Suessones in armis."

³ "Optimus excusso Leucus Rhemusque lacerto."

⁴ "Et qui te laxis imitantur, Sarmata, bracchis Vangiones."

Marlowe has mistaken "Sarmata," a Sarmatian, for the country Sarmatia.

⁵ The old ed. gives "fell Mercury (Joue)," and in the next line "where it seems." "Jove" written, as a correction, in the MS. above "it" was supposed by the printer to belong to the previous line.

And, Druides, you now in peace renew
Your barbarous customs and sinister rites :
In unfell'd woods and sacred groves you dwell ;
And only gods and heavenly powers you know,
Or only know you nothing ; for you hold 450
That souls pass not to silent Erebus
Or Pluto's bloodless kingdom, but elsewhere
Resume a body ; so (if truth you sing)
Death brings long life. Doubtless these northern men,
Whom death, the greatest of all fears, affright not,
Are blest by such sweet error ; this makes them
Run on the sword's point, and desire to die,
And shame to spare life which being lost is won.
You likewise that repuls'd the Caÿc foe,
March towards Rome ; and you, fierce men of Rhene, 460
Leaving your country open to the spoil.
These being come, their huge power made him bold
To manage greater deeds ; the bordering towns
He garrison'd ; and Italy he fill'd with soldiers.
Vain fame increased true fear, and did invade
The people's minds, and laid before their eyes
Slaughter to come, and, swiftly bringing news
Of present war, made many lies and tales :
One swears his troops of daring horsemen fought
Upon Mevania's plain, where bulls are graz'd ; 470
Other that Cæsar's barbarous bands were spread
Along Nar flood that into Tiber falls,
And that his own ten ensigns and the rest
March'd not entirely, and yet hide the ground ;

And that he's much chang'd, looking wild and big,
 And far more barbarous than the French, his vassals ;
 And that he lags ¹ behind with them, of purpose,
 Borne 'twixt the Alps and Rhene, which he hath brought
 From out their northern parts,² and that Rome,
 He looking on, by these men should be sack'd. 480
 Thus in his fright did each man strengthen fame,
 And, without ground, fear'd what themselves had feign'd.
 Nor were the commons only struck to heart
 With this vain terror ; but the court, the senate,
 The fathers selves leap'd from their seats, and, flying,
 Left hateful war decreed to both the consuls.
 Then, with their fear and danger all-distract,
 Their sway of flight carries the heady rout,³
 That in chain'd ⁴ troops break forth at every port :
 You would have thought their houses had been fir'd, 490
 Or, dropping-ripe, ready to fall with urin.
 So rush'd the inconsiderate multitude
 Thorough the city, hurried headlong on,
 As if the only hope that did remain
 To their afflictions were t' abandon Rome.
 Look how, when stormy Auster from the breach
 Of Libyan Syrtes rolls a monstrous wave,

“Hunc inter Rhenum populos Alpesque jacentes, / Finibus Arctoïis patriaque a sede revulsos, / Pone sequi.” (“Populos” is the subject and “Hunc” the object of “sequi.” For “Hunc” the best editions give “Tunc.”)

² “Parts” must be pronounced as a dissyllable.

³ “Praecipitem populum.”

⁴ “Serieque haerentia longa / Agmina prorumpunt.”

Which makes the main-sail fall with hideous sound,
 The pilot from the helm leaps in the sea,
 And mariners, albeit the keel be sound, 500
 Shipwreck themselves ; even so, the city left,
 All rise in arms ; nor could the bed-rid parents
 Keep back their sons, or women's tears their husbands :
 They stayed not either to pray or sacrifice ;
 Their household-gods restrain them not ; none lingered,
 As loath to leave Rome whom they held so dear :
 Th' irrevocable people fly in troops.
 O gods, that easy grant men great estates,
 But hardly grace to keep them ! Rome, that flows
 With citizens and captives,¹ and would hold 510
 The world, were it together, is by cowards
 Left as a prey, now Cæsar doth approach.
 When Romans are besieged by foreign foes,
 With slender trench they escape night-stratagems,
 And sudden rampire rais'd of turf snatched up,
 Would make them sleep securely in their tents.
 Thou, Rome, at name of war runn'st from thyself,
 And wilt not trust thy city-walls one night :
 Well might these fear, when Pompey feared and fled.
 Now evermore, lest some one hope might ease 520
 The commons' jangling minds, apparent signs arose,
 Strange sights appeared ; the angry threatening gods
 Filled both the earth and seas with prodigies.
 Great store of strange and unknown stars were seen

 Gentibus.*"—Old ed. " captaines."

Wandering about the north, and rings of fire
 Fly in the air, and dreadful bearded stars,
 And comets that presage the fall of kingdoms ;
 The flattering¹ sky glittered in often flames,
 And sundry fiery meteors blazed in heaven,
 Now spear-like long, now like a spreading torch ; 530
 Lightning in silence stole forth without clouds,
 And, from the northern climate snatching fire,
 Blasted the Capitol ; the lesser stars,
 Which wont to run their course through empty night,
 At noon-day mustered ; Phoebe, having filled
 Her meeting horns to match her brother's light,
 Struck with th' earth's sudden shadow, waxèd pale ;
 Titan himself, throned in the midst of heaven,
 His burning chariot plunged in sable clouds,
 And whelmed the world in darkness, making men 540
 Despair of day ; as did Thyestes' town,
 Mycenæ, Phoebus flying through the east.
 Fierce Mulciber unbarrèd Ætna's gate,
 Which flamèd not on high, but headlong pitched
 Her burning head on bending Hesperly.
 Coal-black Charybdis whirled a sea of blood.
 Fierce mastives howled. The vestal fires went out ;
 The flame in Alba, consecrate to Jove,
 Parted in twain, and with a double point
 Rose, like the Theban brothers' funeral fire. 550
 The earth went off her hinges ; and the Alps
 Shook the old snow from off their trembling laps.²

² The original has, "jugis nutantibus." Dyce reads "tops,"—an

The ocean swelled as high as Spanish Calpe
 Or Atlas' head. Their saints and household-gods
 Sweat tears, to show the travails of their city :
 Crowns fell from holy statues. Ominous birds
 Defiled the day ; and wild beasts were seen,¹
 Leaving the woods, lodge in the streets of Rome.
 Cattle were seen that muttered human speech ;
 Prodigious births with more and ugly joints 560
 Than nature gives, whose sight appals the mother ;
 And dismal prophecies were spread abroad :
 And they, whom fierce Bellona's fury moves
 To wound their arms, sing vengeance ; Cybel's ² priests,
 Curling their bloody locks, howl dreadful things.
 Souls quiet and appeas'd sighed from their graves ;
 Clashing of arms was heard ; in untrod woods
 Shrill voices schright ;³ and ghosts encounter men.
 Those that inhabited the suburb-fields
 Fled : foul Erinnyes stalked about the walls, 570
 Shaking her snaky hair and crookèd pine
 With flaming top ; much like that hellish fiend
 Which made the stern Lycurgus wound his thigh,
 Or fierce Agave mad ; or like Megæra
 That scar'd Alcides, when by Juno's task
 He had before look'd Pluto in the face.

emendation against which Cunningham loudly protests. "Laps" is certainly more emphatic.

¹ The line is imperfect. We should have expected "at night wild beasts were seen" ("silvisque feras sub nocte relictis").

² Old ed. "Sibils."

³ Shrieked.

Trumpets were heard to sound ; and with what noise
 An armèd battle joins, such and more strange
 Black night brought forth in secret. Sylla's ghost
 Was seen to walk, singing sad oracles ; 580
 And Marius' head above cold Tav'ron¹ peering,
 His grave broke open, did affright the boors.
 To these ostents, as their old custom was,
 They call th' Etrurian augurs : amongst whom
 The gravest, Arruns, dwelt in forsaken Leuca²
 Well-skill'd in pyromancy ; one that knew
 The hearts of beasts, and flight of wandering fowls.
 First he commands such monsters Nature hatch'd
 Against her kind, the barren mule's loath'd issue,
 To be cut forth³ and cast in dismal fires ; 590
 Then, that the trembling citizens should walk
 About the city ; then, the sacred priests
 That with divine lustration purg'd the walls,
 And went the round, in and without the town ;
 Next, an inferior troop, in tuck'd-up vestures,
 After the Gabine manner ; then, the nuns
 And their veil'd matron, who alone might view
 Minerva's statue ; then, they that kept and read
 Sibylla's secret works, and wash⁴ their saint
 In Almo's flood ; next learnèd augurs follow ; 600
 Apollo's soothsayers, and Jove's feasting priests ;

⁴ Old ed., "wash'd."

The skipping Salii with shields like wedges ;
And Flamens last, with net-work woollen veils.
While these thus in and out had circled Rome,
Look, what the lightning blasted, Arruns takes,
And it inters with murmurs dolorous,
And calls the place Bidental. On the altar
He lays a ne'er-yok'd bull, and pours down wine,
Then crams salt leaven on his crookèd knife :
The beast long struggled, as being like to prove 610
An awkward sacrifice ; but by the horns
The quick priest pulled him on his knees, and slew
him.

No vein sprung out, but from the yawning gash,
Instead of red blood, wallow'd venomous gore.
These direful signs made Arruns stand amazed,
And searching farther for the gods' displeasure,
The very colour scared him ; a dead blackness
Ran through the blood, that turned it all to jelly,
And stained the bowels with dark loathsome spots ;
The liver swelled with filth ; and every vein 620
Did threaten horror from the host of Cæsar
A small thin skin contained the vital parts ;
The heart stirred not ; and from the gaping liver
Squeezed matter through the caul ; the entrails peered ;
And which (ay me !) ever pretendeth ¹ ill,
At that bunch where the liver is, appear'd
A knob of flesh, whereof one half did look

¹ Portendeth.

Dead and discolour'd, th' other lean and thin.¹
 By these he seeing what mischiefs must ensue,
 Cried out, "O gods, I tremble to unfold 630
 What you intend! great Jove is now displeas'd;
 And in the breast of this slain bull are crept
 Th' infernal powers. My fear transcends my words;
 Yet more will happen than I can unfold:
 Turn all to good, be augury vain, and Tages,
 Th' art's master, false!" Thus, in ambiguous terms
 Involving all, did Arruns darkly sing.
 But Figulus, more seen in heavenly mysteries,
 Whose like Ægyptian Memphis never had
 For skill in stars and tuneful planeting,² 640
 In this sort spake: "The world's swift course is lawless
 And casual; all the stars at random range;³
 Or if fate rule them, Rome, thy citizens
 Are near some plague. What mischief shall ensue?
 Shall towns be swallow'd? shall the thicken'd air
 Become intemperate? shall the earth be barren?
 Shall water be congeal'd and turn'd to ice?⁴
 O gods, what death prepare ye? with what plague

¹ Here Marlowe quite deserts the original—

"pars ægra et marcida pendet,

Pars micat, et celeri venas movet improba pulsus."

² "Numerisque moventibus astra."—The word "planeting" was, I suppose, coined by Marlowe. I have never met it elsewhere.

³ So Dyce.—Old ed. "radge." (The original has "et incerto discurrunt sidera motu.")

⁴ "Omnis an effusis miscebitur unda venenis."—Dyce suggests that Marlowe's copy read "pruinis."

Mean ye to rage? the death of many men
 Meets in one period. If cold noisome Saturn 650
 Were now exalted, and with blue beams shin'd,
 Then Ganymede¹ would renew Deucalion's flood,
 And in the fleeting sea the earth be drench'd.
 O Phœbus, shouldst thou with thy rays now singe
 The fell Nemæan beast, th' earth would be fir'd,
 And heaven tormented with thy chafing heat :
 But thy fires hurt not. Mars, 'tis thou inflam'st
 The threatening Scorpion with the burning tail,
 And fir'st his cleys :² why art thou thus enrag'd ?
 Kind Jupiter hath low declin'd himself ; 660
 Venus is faint ; swift Hermes retrograde ;
 Mars only rules the heaven. Why do the planets
 Alter their course, and vainly dim their virtue ?
 Sword-girt Orion's side glisters too bright :
 War's rage draws near ; and to the sword's strong hand
 Let all laws yield, sin bears the name of virtue :
 Many a year these furious broils let last :
 Why should we wish the gods should ever end them ?
 War only gives us peace. O Rome, continue
 The course of mischief, and stretch out the date 670
 Of slaughter ! only civil broils make peace."
 These sad presages were enough to scare
 The quivering Romans ; but worse things affright them.
 As Mænas³ full of wine on Pindus raves,

² Claws.

³ A Mænad.—Old ed. "Mænus."

So runs a matron through th' amazed streets,
 Disclosing Phœbus' fury in this sort ;
 " Pæan, whither am I haled ? where shall I fall,
 Thus borne aloft ? I seen Pangæus' hill
 With hoary top, and, under Hæmus' mount,
 Philippi plains. Phœbus, what rage is this ? 680
 Why grapples Rome, and makes war, having no foes ?
 Whither turn I now ? thou lead'st me toward th' east,
 Where Nile augmenteth the Pelusian sea :
 This headless trunk that lies on Nilus' sand
 I know. Now th[o]roughout the air I fly
 To doubtful Syrtes and dry Afric, where
 A Fury leads the Emathian bands. From thence
 To the pine-bearing¹ hills ; thence² to the mounts
 Pyrene ; and so back to Rome again.
 See, impious war defiles the senate-house ! 690
 New factions rise. Now through the world again
 I go. O Phœbus, show me Neptune's shore,
 And other regions ! I have seen Philippi."
 This said, being tir'd with fury, she sunk down.

THE PASSIONATE SHEPHERD
TO HIS LOVE.

THE PASSIONATE SHEPHERD TO HIS LOVE.¹

Come² live with me and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and vallies, dales and fields,³
Woods or steepy mountain yields.⁴

And we will⁵ sit upon the rocks,
Seeing⁶ the shepherds feed their⁷ flocks
By shallow rivers to whose falls
Melodious birds sing⁸ madrigals.

¹ This delightful pastoral song was first published, without the fourth and sixth stanzas, in The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599. It appeared complete in England's Helicon, 1600, with Marlowe's name subscribed. By quoting it in the Complete Angler, 1653, Izaak Walton has made it known to a world of readers.

² Omitted in P. P.

³ So P. P.—E. H. "That vallies, groves, hills and fieldes."—Walton "That vallies, groves, or hills or fields."

⁴ So E. H.—P. P. "And the craggy mountain yields."—Walton "Or, woods and steepie mountains yeelds."

⁵ So E. H.—P. P. "There will we."—Walton "Where we will."

⁶ So E. H.—P. P. and Walton "And see."

⁷ So E. H. and P. P.—Walton "our."

⁸ So P. P. and Walton.—E. H. "sings."

And I will make thee beds of roses¹
 And² a thousand fragrant posies,
 A cup of flowers and a kirtle
 Embroidered all with leaves of myrtle.

A gown³ made of the finest wooll
 Which from our pretty lambs we pull ;
 Fair-lined⁴ slippers for the cold,
 With buckles of the purest gold.

A belt of straw and ivy-buds,
 With coral clasps and amber studs ;
 An if these pleasures may thee move,
 Come⁵ live with me, and be my love.

The shepherd-swains⁶ shall dance and sing
 For thy delight each May-morning :
 If these delights thy mind may move,
 Then live with me, and be my love.

¹ So E. H. and Walton.—P. P. "There will I make thee a bed of roses."

² So E. H.—P. P. "With."—Walton "And then."

³ This stanza is omitted in P. P.

⁴ So E. H.—Walton "Slippers lin'd choicely."

⁵ So E. H. and Walton.—P. P. "Then."—After this stanza there follows in the second edition of the Complete Angler, 1655, an additional stanza :—

"Thy silver dishes for thy meat
 As precious as the gods do eat,
 Shall on an ivory table be
 Prepar'd each day for thee and me."

This stanza is omitted in P. P.—E. H. and Walton "The sheepleards swaines."

[In England's Helicon Marlowe's song is followed by the "Nymph's Reply to the Shepherd" and "Another of the same Nature made since." Both are signed Ignoto, but the first of these pieces has been usually ascribed to Sir Walter Raleigh¹—on no very substantial grounds.]

THE NYMPH'S REPLY TO THE SHEPHERD.

If all the world and love were young,
And truth in every Shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move
To live with thee, and be thy love.

Times drives the flocks from field to fold,
When rivers rage and rocks grow cold,
And Philomel becometh dumb,
The rest complains of cares to come.

The flowers do fade and wanton fields
To wayward winter reckoning yields ;
A honey tongue, a heart of gall,
Is fancy's spring, but sorrow's fall.

¹ Oldys in his annotated copy (preserved in the British Museum) of Langbaine's Engl. Dram. Poets, under the article Marlowe remarks:—"Sir Walter Raleigh was an encourager of his [i. e. Marlowe's] Muse ; and he wrote an answer to a Pastoral Sonnet of Sir Walter's [viz.], printed by Isaac Walton in his book of fishing." It would be pleasant to think that Marlowe enjoyed Raleigh's patronage ; but Oldys gives no authority for his statement.

Thy gowns, thy shoes, thy beds of roses,
 Thy cap, thy kirtle, and thy posies,
 Soon break, soon wither, soon forgotten ;
 In folly ripe, in reason rotten.

Thy belt of straw and ivy buds,
 Thy coral clasps and amber studs,
 All these to me no means can move
 To come to thee, and be thy love.

But could youth last and love still breed,
 Had joys no date nor age no need,
 Then these delights my mind might move
 To live with thee, and be thy love.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME NATURE MADE SINCE.

Come live with me, and be my dear,
 And we will revel all the year,
 In plains and groves, on hills and dales,
 Where fragrant air breathes sweetest gales.

There shall you have the beauteous pine,
 The cedar, and the spreading vine ;
 And all the woods to be a screen,
 Lest Phœbus kiss my Summer's Queen.

The seat for your disport shall be
 Over some river in a tree,

Where silver sands and pebbles sing
Eternal ditties to the spring.

There shall you see the nymphs at play,
And how the satyrs spend the day ;
The fishes gliding on the sands,
Offering their bellies to your hands.

The birds with heavenly tunèd throats
Possess woods' echoes with sweet notes,
Which to your senses will impart
A music to enflame the heart.

Upon the bare and leafless oak
The ring-doves' wooings will provoke
A colder blood than you possess
To play with me and do no less.

In bowers of laurel trimly dight
We will out-wear the silent night,
While Flora busy is to spread
Her richest treasure on our bed.

Ten thousand glow-worms shall attend,
And all these sparkling lights shall spend
All to adorn and beautify
Your lodging with most majesty.

Then in mine arms will I enclose
Lilies' fair mixture with the rose,
Whose nice perfection in love's play
Shall tune me to the highest key.

Thus as we pass the welcome night
 In sportful pleasures and delight,
 The nimble fairies on the grounds,
 Shall dance and sing melodious sounds.

If these may serve for to entice
 Your presence to Love's Paradise,
 Then come with me, and be my dear,
 And we will then begin the year.

The following verses in imitation of Marlowe are by Donne:—

THE BAIT.

Come live with me, and be my love,
 And we will some new pleasure prove
 Of golden sands and christal brooks
 With silken lines and silver hooks.

There will the river whispering run,
 Warm'd by thine eyes more than the sun ;
 And there th' enamoured fish will stay
 Begging themselves they may betray.

When thou wilt swim in that live bath,
 Each fish which every channel hath
 Will amorously to thee swim,
 Gladder to catch thee than thou him.

If thou to be so seen beest loath
By sun or moon, thou darkenest both ;
And if my self have leave to see,
I heed not their light, having thee.

Let others freeze with angling reeds
And cut their legs with shells and weeds,
Or treacherously poor fish beset
With strangling snare or winding net.

Let coarse bold hands from slimy nest
The bedded fish in banks outwrest,
Or curious traitors, sleave-silk flies,
Bewitch poor fishes' wandering eyes.

For thee, thou need'st no such deceit,
For thou thyself art thine own bait :
That fish that is not caught thereby,
Alas, is wiser far than I.

Herrick has a pastoral invitation

TO PHILLIS TO LOVE AND LIVE WITH HIM.

Live, live with me, and thou shalt see
The pleasures I'll prepare for thee ;
What sweets the country can afford
Shall bless thy bed and bless thy board.

The soft sweet moss shall be thy bed
With crawling woodbine overspread :
By which the silver-shedding streams
Shall gently melt thee into dreams.

Thy clothing next shall be a gown
Made of the fleeces' purest down.
The tongues of kids shall be thy meat ;
Their milk thy drink ; and thou shall eat

The paste of filberts for thy bread,
With cream of cowslips buttered.
Thy feasting-tables shall be hills
With daisies spread and daffodils ;

Where thou shalt sit, and red-breast by
For meat shall give thee melody.
I'll give thee chains and carcanets
Of primroses and violets.!

A bag and bottle thou shalt have,
That richly wrought and this as brave,
So that as either shall express
The wearer's no mean shepherdess.

At shearing-times and yearly wakes,
When Themilis his pastime makes,
There thou shalt be ; and be the wit,
Nay more, the feast and grace of it.

On holidays when virgins meet
To dance the ways with nimble feet,
Thou shalt come forth and then appear
The queen of roses for that year ;

And having danced ('bove all the best)
Carry the garland from the rest.
In wicker-baskets maids shall bring
To thee, my dearest shepherdling,

The blushing apple, bashful pear,
And shame-faced plum all simp'ring there :
Walk in the groves and thou shalt find
The name of Phillis in the rind

Of every straight and smooth-skin tree,
Where kissing that I'll twice kiss thee.
To thee a sheep-hook I will send
Be-prankt with ribands to this end,

This, this alluring hook might be
Less for to catch a sheep than me.
Thou shalt have possets, wassails fine,
Not made of ale but spiced wine ;

To make thy maids and self free mirth,
All sitting near the glittering hearth.
Thou shalt have ribbands, roses, rings,
Gloves, garters, stockings, shoes and strings,

Of winning colours that shall move
Others to lust but me to love.
These, nay, and more, thine own shall be
If thou wilt love and live with me.

FRAGMENT.¹

I WALK'D along a stream, for pureness rare,
Brighter than sun-shine ; for it did acquaint
The dullest sight with all the glorious prey
That in the pebble-pavèd channel lay.

No molten crystal, but a richer mine,
Even Nature's rarest alchymy ran there,—
Diamonds resolv'd, and substance more divine,
Through whose bright-gliding current might appear
A thousand naked nymphs, whose ivory shine,
Enamelling the banks, made them more dear
Than ever was that glorious palace' gate
Where the day-shining Sun in triumph sate.

Upon this brim the eglantine and rose,
The tamarisk, olive, and the almond tree,
As kind companions, in one union grows,
Folding their twining² arms, as oft we see

And as a costly valance o'er a bed,
So did their garland-tops the brook o'erspread.

DIALOGUE IN VERSE.¹

JACK,

SEEST thou not yon farmer's son?
He hath stoln my love from me, alas!
What shall I do? I am undone;
My heart will ne'er be as it was.
O, but he gives her gay gold rings,
And tufted gloves [for] holiday,
And many other goodly things,
That hath stolen my love away.

¹ First printed in The Alleyn Papers (for the Shakespeare Society), p. 8, by Collier, who remarks:—"In the original MS. this dramatic dialogue in verse is written as prose, on one side of a sheet of paper, at the back of which, in a more modern hand, is the name 'Kitt Marlowe.' What connection, if any, he may have had with it, it is impossible to determine, but it was obviously worthy of preservation, as a curious stage-relic of an early date, and unlike anything else of the kind that has come down to us. In consequence of haste or ignorance on the part of the writer of the manuscript, it has been necessary to supply some portions, which are printed within brackets. There are also some obvious errors in the distribution of the dialogue, which it was not easy to correct. The probability is that, when performed, it was accompanied with music."

FRIEND.

Let him give her gay gold rings
 Or tufted gloves, were they ne'er so [gay]; 10
 [F]or were her lovers lords or kings,
 They should not carry the wench away.

[JACK.]

But 'a dances wonders well,
 And with his dances stole her love from me :
 Yet she wont to say I bore the bell
 For dancing and for courtesy.

DICK,¹

Fie, lusty younker, what do you here,
 Not dancing on the green to-day?
 For Pierce, the farmer's son, I fear,
 Is like to carry your wench away. 20

[JACK.]

Good Dick, bid them all come hither,
 And tell Pierce from me beside,
 That, if he thinks to have the wench,
 Here he stands shall lie with the bride.

DICK.¹

Fie, Nan, why use thy old lover so,
For any other new-come guest?
Thou long time his love did know;
Why shouldst thou not use him best?

[NAN.]

Bonny Dick, I will not forsake
My bonny Rowland for any gold: 30
If he can dance as well as Pierce,
He shall have my heart in hold.

PIERCE.

Why, then, my hearts, let's to this gear;
And by dancing I may won
My Nan, whose love I hold so dear
As any realm under the sun.

GENTLEMAN.²

Then, gentles, ere I speed from hence
I will be so bold to dance
A turn or two without offence;
For, as I was walking along by chance, 40
I was told you did agree.

¹ MS. "W. Fre."—which Dyce supposed to be an abbreviation for Wenck's Friend.

² MS. "Frend."

[FRIEND.]

'Tis true, good sir ; and this is she
 Hopes your worship comes not to crave her ;
 For she hath lovers two or three,
 And he that dances best must have her.

GENTLEMAN.

How say you, sweet, will you dance with me ?
 And you [shall] have both land and [hill] ;
 My love shall want nor gold nor fee.

[NAN.]

I thank you, sir, for your good will ;
 But one of these my love must be :
 I'm but a homely country maid,
 And far unfit for your degree ;
 [To dance with you I am afraid.]

50

FRIEND.

Take her, good sir, by the hand,
 As she is fairest ; were she fairer,
 By this dance, you shall understand,
 He that can win her is like to wear her.

FOOL.

And saw you not [my] Nan to-day,
 My mother's maid have you not seen ?

My pretty Nan is gone away

60

To seek her love upon the green.

[I cannot see her 'mong so many:]

She shall have me, if she have any.

NAN.¹

Welcome, sweet-heart, and welcome here,

Welcome, my [true] love, now to me.

This is my love [and my darling dear],

And that my husband [soon] must be.

And, boy, when thou com'st home thou'lt see

Thou art as welcome home as he.

GENTLEMAN.

Why, how now, sweet Nan! I hope you jest.

70

NAN.²

No, by my troth, I love the fool the best:

And, if you be jealous, God give you good-night!

I fear you're a gelding, you caper so light.

GENTLEMAN.

I thought she had jested and meant but a fable,
But now do I see she hath play'[d] with his bable.³

I wish all my friends by me to take heed,

That a fool come not near you when you mean to speed.

THE ATHEIST'S TRAGEDIE.¹

ALL you that have got eares to heare,
Now listen unto mee ;
Whilst I do tell a tale of feare ;
A true one it shall bee :

A truer storie nere was told,
As some alive can showe ;
'Tis of a man in crime grown olde,
Though age he did not know.

This man did his owne God denie
And Christ his onelie son,
And did all punishment defie,
So he his course might run.

¹ In the Introduction I have expressed my opinion that this ballad is a forgery.

Both day and night would he blaspheme,
And day and night would sweare,
As if his life was but a dreame,
Not ending in dispaire.

A poet was he of repute,
And wrote full many a playe,
Now strutting in a silken sute,
Then begging by the way.

He had alsoe a player beene
Upon the Curtaine-stage,
But brake his leg in one lewd scene,
When in his early age.

He was a fellow to all those
That did God's laws reject,
Consorting with the Christians' foes
And men of ill aspect.

Ruffians and cutpurses hee
Had ever at his backe,
And led a life most foule and free,
To his eternall wracke.

He now is gone to his account,
And gone before his time,
Did not his wicked deedes surmount
All precedent of crime.

But he no warning ever tooke
From others' wofull fate,
And never gave his life a looke
Untill it was too late.

He had a friend, once gay and greene,¹
Who died not long before,
The wofull'st wretch was ever seen,
The worst ere woman bore,

Unlesse this Wormall² did exceede
Even him in wickednesse,
Who died in the extreemest neede
And terror's bitterness.

Yet Wormall ever kept his course,
Since nought could him dismay ;
He knew not what thing was remorse
Unto his dying day.

Then had he no time to repent
The crimes he did commit,
And no man ever did lament
For him, to dye unfitt.

Ah, how is knowledge wasted quite
On such want wisdom true,
And that which should be guiding light
But leades to errors newe !

¹ We are to suppose an allusion to Robert Greene.

² The anagram of Marlowe.

Well might learnd Cambridge oft regret
 He ever there was bred :
 The tree she in his mind had set
 Brought poison forth instead.

His lust was lawlesse as his life,
 And brought about his death ;
 For, in a deadlie mortall strife,
 Striving to stop the breath

Of one who was his rivall foe,
 With his owne dagger slaine,
 He groand, and word spoke never moe,
 Pierc'd through the eye and braine.

Thus did he come to suddaine ende
 That was a foe to all,
 And least unto himselfe a friend,
 And raging passion's thrall.

Had he been brought up to the trade
 His father follow'd still,
 This exit he had never made,
 Nor played a part soe ill.

Take warning ye that playes doe make,
 And ye that doe them act ;
 Desist in time for Wormal's sake,
 And thinke upon his fact.

Blaspheming Tambolin must die,
And Faustus meete his ende ;
Repent, repent, or presentlie
To hell ye must discend.

What is there, in this world, of worth,
That we should prize it soe ?
Life is but trouble from our birth,
The wise do say and know.

Our lives, then, let us mend with speed,
Or we shall suerly rue
The end of everie hainous deede,
In life that shall insue.

IN a copy of Hero and Leander Collier found, together with other questionable matter, the following MS. notes:—
“Feb. 10, 1640. Mr. [two words follow in cipher], that Marloe was an atheist, and wrot a booke against [two words in cipher,] how that it was all one man’s making, and would have printed it, but it would not be suffred to be printed. Hee was a rare scholar, and made excellent verses in Latine. He died aged about 30.”—“Marloe was an acquaintance of Mr. [a name follows in cipher] of Douer, whom hee made become an atheist; so that he was faine to make a recantation vpon this text, ‘The foole hath said in his heart there is no God.’”—“This [the name in cipher] learned all Marloe by heart.”—“Marloe was stabd with a dagger and dyed swearing.”

Copye of Marloes blasphemyes as sent to her H[ighness].

[Now-a-days inquiries as to the age of the earth are of interest only to Geologists; and all may criticise with impunity the career of Moses—provided that they do not employ the shafts of ridicule too freely. Marlowe's strictures on the New Testament—grossly exaggerated by the creature who penned the charges—were made from the literary point of view. We should blame nobody to-day for saying that the language of Revelations is poor and thin when compared with the language of Isaiah. Again, as to the statement that Romanism alone is logical, and that Protestantism has no locus standi,—has not the doctrine been proclaimed again and again in our own day by writers whom we all respect? The charge that Marlowe had announced his intention of coining French crowns is so utterly absurd as to throw discredit upon all the other statements. It must be remembered that the testimony was not upon oath, and that the deponent was a ruffian.]

No. IV.

AN edition of Marlowe cannot be more fitly concluded than by a reprint of Mr. R. H. Horne's noble and pathetic tragedy, The Death of Marlowe (originally published in 1837), one of the few dramatic pieces of the present century that will have any interest for posterity. For permission to reprint this tragedy I am indebted to Mr. Horne's literary executor, Mr. H. Buxton Forman.

SCENE I.

Public Gardens—Liberty of the Clink, Southwark.

Enter MARLOWE and HEYWOOD.

HEYWOOD.

Be sure of it.

MARLOWE.

I am ; but not by your light.

HEYWOOD.

I speak it not in malice, nor in envy
Of your good fortune with so bright a beauty ;
But I have heard such things !

MARLOWE.

Good Master Heywood,

I prithee plague me not with what thou'st heard ;
 I've seen, and I do love her—and, for hearing,
 The music of her voice is in my soul,
 And holds a rapturous jubilee 'midst dreams
 That melt the day and night into one bliss.

HEYWOOD.

Beware the waking hour !

MARLOWE.

In lovely radiance,

Like all that's fabled of Olympus' queen,
 She moves—as if the earth were undulant clouds,
 And all its flowers her subject stars.

HEYWOOD.

Proceed.

MARLOWE.

Smile not ; for 'tis most true : the very air
 With her sweet presence is impregnate richly.
 As in a mead, that's fresh with youngest green,
 Some fragrant shrub, some secret herb, exhales
 Ambrosial odours ; or in lonely bower,
 Where one may find the musk plant, heliotrope,
 Geranium, or grape hyacinth, confers
 A ruling influence, charming present sense

And sure of memory ; so, her person bears
A natural balm, obedient to the rays
Of heaven—or to her own, which glow within,
Distilling incense by their own sweet power.
The dew at sunrise on a ripened peach
Was never more delicious than her neck.
Such forms are Nature's favourites.

HEYWOOD.

Come, come—

Pygmalion and Prometheus dwell within you !
You poetise her rarely, and exalt
With goddess-attributes, and chastity
Beyond most goddesses : be not thus serious !
If for a passing paramour thou'dst love her,
Why, so, so it may be well ; but never place
Thy full heart in her hand.

MARLOWE.

I have—I do—

And I will lay it bleeding at her feet.
Reason no more, for I do love this woman :
To me she's chaste, whatever thou hast heard.
Whatever I may know, hear, find, or fancy,
I must possess her constantly, or die.

HEYWOOD.

Nay, if't be thus, I'll fret thine ear no more
With raven voice ; but aid thee all I can.

MARLOWE.

Cecilia!—Go, dear friend—good Master Heywood,
Leave me alone—I see her coming thither!

HEYWOOD.

Bliss wait thy wooing; peace of mind its end!
(aside) His knees shake, and his face and hands are wet,
As with a sudden fall of dew—God speed him!
This is a desperate fancy! Exit.

Enter CECILIA.

CECILIA.

Thoughtful sir,
How fare you? Thou'st been reading much of late,
By the moon's light, I fear me?

MARLOWE.

Why so, lady?

CECILIA.

The reflex of the page is on thy face.

MARLOWE.

But in my heart the spirit of a shrine
Burns, with immortal radiation crown'd.

CECILIA.

Nay, primrose gentleman, think'st me a saint?

MARLOWE.

I feel thy power.

CECILIA.

I exercise no arts—

Whence is my influence?

MARLOWE.

From heaven, I think.

Madam, I love you—ere to-day you've seen it,
Although my lips ne'er breathed the word before;
And seldom as we've met and briefly spoken,
There are such spiritual passings to and fro
'Twixt thee and me—though I alone may suffer—
As make me know this love blends with my life;
Must branch with it, bud, blossom, put forth fruit,
Nor end e'en when its last husks strew the grave,
Whence we together shall ascend to bliss.

CECILIA.

Continued from this world?

MARLOWE.

Thy hand, both hands;

I kiss them from my soul!

CECILIA.

Nay, sir, you burn me—

Let loose my hands!

MARLOWE.

I loose them—half my life has thus gone from me !—
 That which is left can scarce contain my heart,
 Now grown too full with the high tide of joy,
 Whose ebb, retiring, fills the caves of sorrow,
 Where Syrens sing beneath their dripping hair,
 And raise the mirror'd fate.

CECILIA.

Then, gaze not in it,
 Lest thou should'st see thy passing funeral
 I would not—I might chance to see far worse.

MARLOWE.

Thou art too beautiful ever to die !
 I look upon thee, and can ne'er believe it.

CECILIA.

O, sir—but passion, circumstance, and fate,
 Can do far worse than kill : they can dig graves,
 And make the future owners dance above them,
 Well knowing how 'twill end. Why look you sad ?
 'Tis not your case ; you are a man in love—
 At least, you say so—and should therefore feel
 A constant sunshine, wheresoe'er you tread,
 Nor think of what's beneath. But speak no more :
 I see a volume gathering in your eye
 Which you would fain have printed in my heart ;
 But you were better cast it in the fire.
 Enough you've said, and I enough have listened.

MARLOWE.

I have said naught.

CECILIA.

You have spoken very plain—
So, Master Marlowe, please you, break we off ;
And, since your mind is now relieved—good day !

MARLOWE.

Leave me not thus !—forgive me !

CECILIA.

For what offence

MARLOWE.

The expression of my love.

CECILIA.

Tut ! that's a trifle.
Think'st thou I ne'er saw men in love before ?
Unto the summer of beauty they are common
As grasshoppers.

MARLOWE.

And to its winter, lady ?

CECILIA.

There is no winter in my thoughts—adieu !

Exit.

MARLOWE.

She's gone!—How leafless is my life!—My strength
Seems melted—my breast vacant—and in my brain
I hear the sound of a retiring sea.

Exit.

SCENE II.

Gravel Lane ; Bankside.Enter HEYWOOD and MIDDLETON.

MIDDLETON.

And yet it may end well, after his fit is over.

HEYWOOD.

But he is earnest in it.

MIDDLETON.

'Tis his habit ; a little thunder clears the atmosphere.
At present he is spell-bound, and smouldereth in a hot cloud of passion ; but when he once makes his way, he will soon disperse his free spirit abroad over the inspired heavens.

HEYWOOD.

I fear me she will sow quick seed of feverish fancies in his mind that may go near to drive him mad.

MIDDLETON.

How so? He knoweth her for what she is, as well as for what she was;—the high-spirited and once virtuous wife of the drunkard Bengough. You remember him?

HEYWOOD.

I have seen him i' the mire. 'Twas his accustomed bed o' nights—and morning, too—many a time. He preferred that to the angel he left at home. Some men do. 'Tis a sorrow to think upon.

MIDDLETON.

And one that tears cannot wash! Master Marlowe hath too deep a reading i' the books of nature to nail his heart upon a gilded weathercock. He is only desperate after the fashion of a pearl diver. When he hath enough he will desist—breathe freely, polish the shells, and build grottoes.

HEYWOOD.

Nay, he persisteth in not knowing her for a courtesan—talks of her purity in burning words, that seem to glow and enhance his love from his convictions of her virtue; then suddenly falls into silent abstraction, looking like a man whose eyes are filled with visions of Paradise. No pains takes she to deceive him; for he supersedes the chance by deceiving himself beyond measure. He either listens not at all to intimation, or insists the contrary.

MIDDLETON.

This is his passionate aggravation or self will: he must know it.

HEYWOOD.

'Tis my belief; but her beauty blinds him with its beams, and drives his exiled reason into darkness.

MIDDLETON.

Here comes one that could enlighten his perception, methinks.

HEYWOOD.

Who's he? Jack-o'-night, the tavern pander and swashbuckler.

Enter JACCONOT.

JACCONOT.

Save ye, my masters; lusty thoughts go with ye, and a jovial full cup wait on your steps: so shall your blood rise, and honest women pledge ye in their dreams!

MIDDLETON.

Your weighty-pursed knowledge of women, balanced against your squinting knowledge of honesty, Master Jack-o'-night, would come down to earth, methinks, as rapid as a fall from a gallows-tree.

JACCONOT.

Well said, Master Middleton—a merry devil and a long-lived one run monkey-wise up your back-bone! May your days be as happy as they're sober, and your nights full of applause! May no brawling mob pelt you, or your friends, when throned, nor hoot down your plays when your soul's pinned like a cockchafer on public opinion! May no learned or unlearned calf write against your knowledge and wit, and no brother paper-stainer pilfer your pages, and then call you a general thief! Am I the only rogue and vagabond in the world?

MIDDLETON.

I' faith, not: nay, an' thou wert, there would be no lack of them i' the next generation. Thou might'st be the father of the race, being now the bodily type of it. The phases of thy villany are so numerous that, were they embodied they would break down the fatal tree which is thine inheritance, and cause a lack of cords for the Thames shipping!

JACCONOT.

Don't choke me with compliments!

HEYWOOD (to MIDDLETON).

He seems right proud of this multiplied idea of his latter end.

JACCONOT.

Ay; hanging's of high antiquity, and, thereto, of broad modern repute. The flag, the sign, the fruit, the felon, and other high and mighty game, all hang; though the sons of ink and sawdust try to stand apart, smelling civet, as one should say,—faugh! Jewelled caps, ermined cloaks, powdered wigs, church bells, bona-roba bed-gowns, gilded bridles, spurs, shields, swords, harness, holy relics, and salted hogs, all hang in glory! Pictures, too, of rare value! Also music's ministrants,—the lute, the horn, the fiddle, the pipe, the gong, the viol, the salt-box, the tambourine and the triangle, make a dead-wall dream of festive harmonies!

MIDDLETON.

Infernal discords, thou would'st say!

JACCONOT (rapidly).

These are but few things among many! for 'scutcheons, scarecrows, proclamations, the bird in a cage, the target for fools' wit, hic jacet tablets (that is, lying ones), the King's Head and the Queen's Arms, ropes of onions, dried herbs, smoked fish, holly boughs, hall lanthorns, framed piety texts, and adored frights of family portraits, all hang! Likewise corkscrews, cat-skins, glittering trophies, sausage links, shining icicles, the crucifix, and the skeleton in chains. There, we all swing, my masters! Tut! hanging's a high Act of Parliament privilege!—a Star-Chamber Garter-right!

MIDDLETON (to HEYWOOD laughingly).

The devil's seed germinates with reptile rapidity, and blossoms and fructifies in the vinous fallows of this bully's brain!

JACCONOT.

I tell thee what——(looking off) another time!
Exit JACCONOT hastily.

HEYWOOD.

I breathe fresh air!

MIDDLETON.

Look!—said I not so? See whom 'tis he meets;
And with a lounging, loose, familiar air,
Cocking his cap and setting his hand on's hip,
Salutes with such free language as his action
And attitude explain!

HEYWOOD.

I grieve for Marlowe:
The more, since 'tis as certain he must have Full course of passion, as that its object's full
Of most unworthy elements.

MIDDLETON.

Unworthy,
Indeed, of such a form, if all be base.

But Nature, methinks, doth seldom so belie
 The inward by the outward ; seldom frame
 A cheat so finish'd to ensnare the senses,
 And break our faith in all substantial truth. Exeunt.

Enter CECILIA, followed by JACCONOT.

JACCONOT.

Well, well, Mistress St. Cecil ; the money is all well enough—I object nothing to the money.

CECILIA.

Then, go your ways.

JACCONOT.

My ways are your ways—a murrain on your beauties !
 —has your brain shot forth skylarks as your eyes do
 sparks ?

CECILIA.

Go !—here is my purse.

JACCONOT.

I'll no more oft !—I have a mind to fling back what thou'st already given me for my services.

CECILIA.

Master Jacconot, I would have no further services from thee. If thou art not yet satisfied, fetch the weight and scales, and I will cast my gold into it, and my dross
 besides—so shall I be doubly relieved.

JACCONOT.

I say again—and the devil bear me fierce witness!—it is not gold I want, but rightful favour; not silver, but sweet civility; not dross, but the due respect to my non-pareil value! Bethink thee, Cecil—bethink thee of many things! Ay! am not I the true gallant of my time? the great Glow-worm and Will-o'-the-wisp—the life, the fortune, and the favourite of the brightest among ye!

CECILIA.

Away!

JACCONOT.

Whither?

CECILIA.

Anywhere, so it be distant.

JACCONOT.

What mean'st by discarding me, and why is it? 'Slud! is this the right sort of return for all my skilful activities, my adroit fascinations of young lords in drink, my tricks at dice, cards, and dagger-play, not to speak too loudly of bets on bear-baits, soap-bubbles, and Shrovetide cocks; or my lies about your beauty and temper? Have I not brought dukes and earls and reverend seniors, on tip-toe, and softly whispering for fear of "the world," right under the balcony of your window?—O, don't beat the dust with your fine foot! These be good services, I think!

CECILIA (half aside).

Alas! alas!—the world sees us only as bright, though baleful stars, little knowing our painful punishments in the dark—our anguish in secret.

JACCONOT.

Are you thinking of me?

CECILIA.

Go!

JACCONOT.

Go!—a death's-head crown your pillow! May you dream of love, and wake and see that!

CECILIA.

I had rather see't than you.

JACCONOT.

What's i' the wind,—nobleman, or gentleman, or a brain fancy—am not I at hand? Are you mad?

CECILIA (overcome).

I'd gladly believe I have been so.

JACCONOT.

Good. I'm content you see me aright once more, and acknowledge yourself wrong.

CECILIA (half aside, and tearfully).

O, wrong indeed—very wrong—to my better nature—my better nature.

JACCONOT.

And to me, too! Bethink thee, I say, when last year, after the dance at Hampton, thou wert enraged against the noble that slighted thee; and, flushed with wine, thou took'st me by the ear, and mad'st me hand thee into thy coach, and get in beside thee, with a drawn sword in my hand and a dripping trencher on my head, singing such songs, until——

CECILIA.

Earthworms and stone walls!

JACCONOT.

Hey! what of them?

CECILIA.

I would that as the corporal Past they cover,
They would, at earnest bidding of the will,
Entomb in walls of darkness and devour
The hated retrospections of the mind.

JACCONOT (aside).

Oho!—the lamps and saw-dust!—Here's foul play
And mischief in the market. Preaching varlet!
I'll find him out—I'll dog him! Exit.

CECILIA.

Self disgust

Gnaws at the root of being, and doth hang
 A heavy sickness on the beams of day,
 Making the atmosphere, which should exalt
 Our contemplations, press us down to earth,
 As though our breath had made it thick with plague.
 Cursed! accursed be the freaks of Nature,
 That mar us from ourselves, and make our acts
 The scorn and loathing of our afterthoughts—
 The finger mark of Conscience, who, most treacherous,
 Wakes to accuse, but slumber'd o'er the sin.

Exit.

SCENE III.

A Room in the Triple Tun, Blackfriars.

MARLOWE, MIDDLETON, and GENTLEMEN.

GENTLEMAN.

I do rejoice to find myself among
 The choicest spirits of the age : health, sirs !
 I would commend your fame to future years,
 But that I know ere this ye must be old
 In the conviction, and that ye full oft
 With sure posterity have shaken hands
 Over the unstable bridge of present time.

MARLOWE.

Not so : we write from the full heart within,
And leave posterity to find her own.
Health, sir !—your good deeds laurel you in heaven.

MIDDLETON.

'Twere best men left their fame to chance and fashion,
As birds bequeath their eggs to the sun's hatching,
Since Genius can make no will.

MARLOWE.

Troth, can it !

But for the consequences of the deed,
What fires of blind fatality may catch them !
Say, you do love a woman—do adore her—
You may embalm the memory of her worth
And chronicle her beauty to all time,
In words whereat great Jove himself might flush,
And feel Olympus tremble at his thoughts ;
Yet where is your security ? Some clerk
Wanting a foolscap, or some boy a kite,
Some housewife fuel, or some sportsman wadding
To wrap a ball (which hits the poet's brain
By merest accident) seizes your record,
And to the wind thus scatters all your will,
Or, rather, your will's object. Thus, our pride
Swings like a planet by a single hair,
Obedient to God's breath. More wine ! more wine !
I preach—and I grow melancholy—wine !

Enter DRAWER with a tankard.

A GENTLEMAN (rising).

We're wending homeward—gentlemen, good night !

MARLOWE.

Not yet—not yet—the night has scarce begun—
Nay, Master Heywood—Middleton, you'll stay !
Bright skies to those who go—high thoughts go with ye,
And constant youth !

GENTLEMEN.

We thank you, sir—good night ! Exeunt GENTLEMEN.

HEYWOOD.

Let's follow—'tis near morning.

MARLOWE.

Do not go.

I'm ill at ease, touching a certain matter
I've taken to heart—don't speak of't—and besides
I have a sort of horror of my bed.
Last night a squadron charged me in a dream,
With Isis and Osiris at the flanks,
Towering and waving their colossal arms,
While in the van a fiery chariot roll'd,
Wherein a woman stood—I knew her well—
Who seem'd but newly risen from the grave !

She whirl'd a javelin at me, and methought
I woke ; when, slowly at the foot o' the bed
The mist-like curtains parted, and upon me
Did learned Faustus look ! He shook his head
With grave reproof, but more of sympathy,
As though his past humanity came o'er him—
Then went away with a low, gushing sigh,
That startled his own death-cold breast, and seem'd
As from a marble urn where passion's ashes
Their sleepless vigil keep. Well—perhaps they do.

(after a pause)

Lived he not greatly ? Think what was his power !
All knowledge at his beck—the very Devil
His common slave. And, O, brought he not back,
Through the thick-million'd catacombs of ages,
Helen's unsullied loveliness to his arms ?

MIDDLETON.

So—let us have more wine, then !

HEYWOOD.

Spirit enough
Springs from thee, Master Marlowe—what need more.

MARLOWE.

Drawer ! lift up thy leaden poppy-head !
Up man !—where art ? The night seems wondrous hot !

(MARLOWE throws open a side window that reaches down to the floor, and stands there, looking out.)

HEYWOOD (to MIDDLETON).

The air flows in upon his heated face,
And he grows pale with looking at the stars ;
Thinking the while of many things in heaven.

MIDDLETON.

And some one on the earth—as fair to him—
For, lo you !—is't not she ?

(Pointing towards the open window.)

HEYWOOD.

The lady, folded
In the long mantle, coming down the street ?

MIDDLETON.

Let be ; we cannot help him.

(HEYWOOD and MIDDLETON retire apart—CECILIA is passing by the open window.)

MARLOWE.

Stay awhile !—

One moment stay !

CECILIA (pausing).

That is not much to ask.

(She steps in through the window.)

MARLOWE.

Nor much for you to grant ; but O, to me
That moment is a circle without bounds,—
Because I see no end to my delight !

CECILIA.

O, sir, you make me very sad at heart ;
Let's speak no more of this. I am on my way
To walk beside the river.

MARLOWE.

May I come ?

CECILIA.

Ah, no ; I'll go alone.

MARLOWE.

'Tis dark and dismal ;
Nor do I deem it safe !

CECILIA.

What can harm me ?

If not above, at least I am beyond
All common dangers. No, you shall not come.
I have some questions I would ask myself ;
And in the sullen, melancholy flow
O' the unromantic Thames, that has been witness
Of many tragical realities,
Bare of adornment as its cold stone stairs,
I may find sympathy, if not response.

MARLOWE.

You find both here. I know thy real life ;
We do not see the truth—or, O, how little !

Pure light sometimes through painted windows streams ;
 And, when all's dark around thee, thou art fair !
 Thou bear'st within an ever-burning lamp,
 To me more sacred than a vestal's shrine ;
 For she may be of heartless chastity,
 False in all else, and proud of her poor ice,
 As though 'twere fire suppress'd ; but thou art good
 For goodness' sake ;—true-hearted, lovable,
 For truth and honour's sake ; and such a woman,
 That man who wins, the gods themselves may envy.

CECILIA (going).

Considering all things, this is bitter sweet.

MARLOWE.

And I may come ? (following her)

CECILIA (firmly).

You shall not.

MARLOWE.

I obey you.

CECILIA (tenderly).

Ah ! Kit Marlowe,—

You think too much of me—and of yourself
 Too little !

MARLOWE.

Then I may——(advancing)

CECILIA (firmly).

No—no!

MARLOWE.

Wilt promise
To see me for one “good night” ere you sleep?

CECILIA.

On my way home I will.

(She turns to look at him—then steps through the window—Exit.)

MARLOWE.

Be sure—be sure!

(HEYWOOD and MIDDLETON approach.)

HEYWOOD.

Now, Marlowe!—you desert us!

MARLOWE.

Say not so;—
Or, saying so, add—that I have lost myself!
Nay, but I have; yonder I go in the dark!
(pointing after CECILIA)

Street Music.—JACCONOT, singing outside.

Ram out the link, boys ; ho, boys !¹
 There's daylight in the sky !
 While the trenchers strew the floor,
 And the worn-out grey beards snore,
 Jolly throats continue dry !
 Ram out the link, boys, &c.

MIDDLETON.

What voice is that ?

MARLOWE (through his teeth).

From one of the hells.

HEYWOOD.

The roystering singer approaches.

Enter JACCONOT, with a full tankard.

JACCONOT.

Ever awake and shining, my masters ! and here am I, your twin lustre, always ready to herald and anoint your pleasures, like a true Master of the Revels. I ha' just stepped over the drawer's body, laid nose and heels together on the door-mat, asleep, and here's wherewith to continue the glory !

¹ The inverted iron horns or tubes, a few of which still remain on lamp-posts and gates, were formerly used as extinguishers to the torches which were thrust into them.

MIDDLETON.

We need not your help.

HEYWOOD.

We thank you, Jack-o'-night : we would be alone.

JACCONOT.

What say you, Master Marlowe? you look as grim as a sign-painters' first sketch on a tavern bill, after his ninth tankard.

MIDDLETON.

Cease your death-rattle, night-hawk !

MARLOWE.

That's well said.

JACCONOT.

Is it? So 'tis my gallants—a night-bird like yourselves, am I.

MARLOWE.

Beast!—we know you.

JACCONOT.

Your merry health, Master Kit Marlowe ! I'll bring a loud pair of palms to cheer your soul the next time you strut in red paint with a wooden weapon at your thigh.

MARLOWE.

Who sent for you, dorr-hawk?—go!

JACCONOT.

Go! Aha!—I remember the word—same tone, same gesture—or as like as the two profiles of a monkey, or as two squeaks for one pinch. Go!—not I—here's to all your healths! One pull more! There, I've done—take it, Master Marlowe; and pledge me as the true knight of London's rarest beauties!

MARLOWE.

I will!

*(Dashes the tankard at his head.)*JACCONOT (stooping quickly).

A miss, 'fore-gad!—the wall has got it! See where it trickles down like the long robe of some dainty fair one! And look you here—and there again, look you!—what make you of the picture he hath presented?

MARLOWE (staggers as he stares at the wall).

O subtle Nature! who hath so compounded
Our senses, playing into each other's wheels,
That feeling oft acts substitute for sight,
As sight becomes obedient to the thought—
How canst thou place such wonders at the mercy
Of every wretch that crawls? I feel—I see!

(Street Music as before, but farther off.)

JACCONOT (singing).

Ram out the link, boys ; ho, boys !
The blear-eyed morning's here ;
Let us wander through the streets,
And kiss whoe'er one meets ;
St. Cecil is my dear !
Ram out the link, boys, &c.

MARLOWE (drawing).

Lightning come up from hell and strangle thee !

MIDDLETON and HEYWOOD.

Nay, Marlowe ! Marlowe ! (they hold him back).

MIDDLETON (to JACCONOT).

Away, thou bestial villain !

JACCONOT (singing at MARLOWE).

St. Cecil is my dear !

MARLOWE (furiously).

Blast ! blast and scatter
Thy body to ashes ! Off ! I'll have his ghost !
(rushes at JACCONOT—they fight—MARLOWE disarms him ; but JACCONOT wrests MARLOWE'S own sword from his hand, and stabs him—MARLOWE falls)

MIDDLETON.

See ! see !

MARLOWE (clasping his forehead).

Who's down?—answer me, friends—is't I?—
Or in the maze of some delirious trance,
Some realm unknown, or passion newly born—
Ne'er felt before—am I transported thus?
My fingers paddle, too, in blood—is't mine?

JACCONOT.

O, content you, Master Marplot—it's you that's down, drunk or sober; and that's your own blood on your fingers, running from a three-inch groove in your ribs for the devil's imps to slide into you. Ugh! cry gramercy!
for it's all over with your rhyming!

HEYWOOD.

O, heartless mischief!

MIDDLETON.

Hence, thou rabid cur!

MARLOWE.

What demon in the air with unseen arm
Hath turn'd my unchain'd fury against myself?
Recoiling dragon! thy resistless force
Scatters thy mortal master in his pride,
To teach him, with self-knowledge, to fear thee.
Forgetful of all corporal conditions,
My passion hath destroy'd me!

JACCONOT.

No such matter ; it was my doing. You shouldn't ha' ran at me in that fashion with a real sword—I thought it had been one o' your sham ones.

MIDDLETON.

Away !

HEYWOOD.

See ! his face changes—lift him up !

(they raise and support him)

Here—place your hand upon his side—here, here—
Close over mine, and staunch the flowing wound !

MARLOWE (delirious.)

Bright is the day—the air with glory teems—
And eagles wanton in the smile of Jove :
Can these things be, and Marlowe live no more !
O Heywood ! Heywood ! I had a world of hopes
About that woman—now in my heart they rise
Confused, as flames from my life's coloured map,
That burns until with wrinkling agony
Its ashes flatten, separate, and drift
Through gusty darkness. Hold me fast by the arm !
A little aid will save me :—See ! she's here !
I clasp thy form—I feel thy breath, my love—
And know thee for a sweet saint come to save me !
Save !—is it death I feel—it cannot be death ?

JACCONOT (half aside.)

Marry, but it can!—or else your sword's a foolish dog that dar'n't bite his owner.

MARLOWE.

O friends—dear friends—this is a sorry end—
A most unworthy end! To think—O God!—
To think that I should fall by the hand of one
Whose office, like his nature, is all baseness,
Gives Death ten thousand stings, and to the Grave
A damning victory! Fame sinks with life!
A galling—shameful—ignominious end! (sinks down.)
O mighty heart! O full and orb'd heart,
Flee to thy kindred sun, rolling on high!
Or let the hoary and eternal sea⁺
Sweep me away, and swallow body and soul!

JACCONOT.

There'll be no "encore" to either, I wot; for thou'st led an ill life, Master Marlowe; and so the sweet Saint thou spok'st of, will remain my fair game—behind the scenes.

MARLOWE.

Liar! slave! sla—— Kind Master Heywood,
You will not see me die thus!—thus by the hand
And maddening tongue of such a beast as that!
Haste, if you love me—fetch a leech to help me—
Here—Middleton—sweet friend—a bandage here—
I cannot die by such a hand—I will not—

I say I will not die by that vile hand !
Go bring Cecilia to me—bring the leech—
Close—close this wound—you know I did it myself—
Bring sweet Cecilia—haste—haste—instantly—
Bring life and time—bring heaven !—Oh, I am dying !—
Some water—stay beside me—maddening death,
By such a hand ! O villain ! from the grave
I constantly will rise—to curse ! curse ! curse thee !
(Rises—and falls dead.)

MIDDLETON.

Terrible end !

HEYWOOD.

O God !—he is quite gone !

JACCONOT (aghast.)

'Twas dreadful—'twas ! Christ help us ! and lull him to sleep in's grave. I stand up for mine own nature none the less. (Voices without) What noise is that ?

Enter OFFICERS.

CHIEF OFFICER.

This is our man—ha ! murder has been here ! You are our prisoner—the gallows waits you !

JACCONOT.

What have I done to be hung up like a miracle ? The hemp's not sown nor the ladder-wood grown, that shall help fools to finish me! He did it himself! He said so with his last words!—there stands his friends and brother players—put them to their Testament if he said not he did it himself?

CHIEF OFFICER.

Who is it lies here?—methinks that I should know him,
But for the fierce distortion of his face!

MIDDLETON.

He who erewhile wrote with a brand of fire,
Now, in his passionate blood, floats tow'rd's the grave!
The present time is ever ignorant—
We lack clear vision in our self-love's maze;
But Marlowe in the future will stand great,
Whom this—the lowest caitiff in the world—
A nothing, save in grossness, hath destroy'd.

JACCONOT.

“Caitiff” back again in your throat! and “gross nothing” to boot—may you have it to live upon for a month, and die mad and starving! Would'st swear my life away so lightly? Tut! who was he? I could always find the soundings of a quart tankard, or empty a pasty in half his time, and swear as rare oaths between whiles—who was he? I too ha' write my odes and Pindar jigs with the twinkling of a bedpost, to the sound of the harp and hurdygurdy, while Capricornus wagged his fiery beard; I ha' sung songs to the faint moon's echoes at daybreak and danced here away and there away, like the lightning through a forest! As to your sword and dagger play,

I've got the trick o' the eye and wrist—who was he? What's all his gods—his goddesses and lies?—the first a'nt worth a word; and for the two last, I was always a prince of both! “Caitiff!” and “beast!” and “nothing!”—who was he?

CHIEF OFFICER.

You're ours, for sundry villanies committed,
Sufficient each to bring your vice to an end;
The law hath got you safely in its grasp!

JACCONOT (after a pause).

Then may Vice and I sit crown'd in heaven, while Law and Honesty stalk damned through hell! Now do I see the thing very plain!—treachery—treachery, my masters! I know the jade that hath betrayed me—I know her. 'Slud! who cares? She was a fine woman, too—a rare person—and a good spirit; but there's an end of all now—she's turned foolish and virtuous, and a tell-tale, and I am to be turned to dust through it—long, long before my time: and these princely limbs must go make a dirt-pie—build up a mud hut—or fatten an alderman's garden! There! calf-heads—there's a lemon for your mouths! Heard'st ever such a last dying speech and confession! Write it in red ochre on a sheet of Irish, and send it to Mistress Cecily for a death-winder. I know what you've got against me—and I know you all deserve just the same yourselves—but lead on, my masters!

Exeunt JACCONOT and OFFICERS.

MIDDLETON.

O Marlowe! canst thou rise with power no more?
Can greatness die thus?

HEYWOOD (bending over the body.)

Miserable sight!

(A shriek outside the house.)

MIDDLETON.

That cry!—what may that mean?

HEYWOOD (as if awaking.)

I hear no cry.

MIDDLETON.

What is't comes hither, like a gust of wind?

CECILIA rushes in.

CECILIA.

Where—where? O, then, 'tis true—and he is dead!
All's over now—there's nothing in the world—
For he who raised my heart up from the dust,
And show'd me noble lights in mine own soul,
Has fled my gratitude and growing love—
I never knew how deep it was till now!
Through me, too!—do not curse me!—I was the cause—
Yet do not curse me—No! no! not the cause,

But that it happen'd so. This is the reward
Of Marlowe's love!—why, why did I delay?
O, gentlemen, pray for me! I have been Lifted in heavenly air—and suddenly
The arm that placed me, and with strength sustain'd me,
Is snatch'd up, starward: I can neither follow,
Nor can I touch the gross earth any more!
Pray for me, gentlemen!—but breathe no blessings—
Let not a blessing sweeten your dread prayers—
I wish no blessings—nor could bear their weight;
For I am left, I know not where or how:
But, pray for me—my soul is buried here.

(Sinks down upon the body.)

MIDDLETON.

“Cut is the branch that might have grown full straight,
And burned is Apollo's laurel bough!”

(Solemn music.)

OF

JOHN C. NIMMO,

14 KING WILLIAM STREET, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

(Hitherto J. C. NIMMO & BAIN.)

The Elizabethan Dramatists.

Post 8vo, cloth.

Published price, 7s. 6d. net per volume.

The Works of Christopher Marlowe.

IN THREE VOLUMES.

Edited by A. H. BULLEN, B.A.

Ready in Sept.

NOTE.—The type will be distributed after the edition is printed, the impression of which will be four hundred copies, post 8vo, and one hundred and twenty large fine-paper copies, medium 8vo, which will be numbered. Specimen page of the text on opposite page.

To realise the supremacy of Shakespeare we must be acquainted with the writings of his contemporaries. Such masterpieces as Dr. Faustus, the Duchess of Malfi, and the Maid's Tragedy are of the highest value in preparing the student to appreciate the unique power of Lear and Macbeth and Othello.

But putting aside Shakespearean considerations, it may be justly said that there is no study more fascinating to thoughtful men than the study of the Elizabethan Dramatists. Their works were largely planned; and there is the stamp of sincerity in every page.

That there is a great and growing interest in our Old Dramatists among educated men is undeniable; but, strange to say, the works of some of the chief dramatists are unprocurable.

The noble contributions made to the English drama by Middleton and Shirley are known only to the few; the books have long been out of print.

Library editions of Beaumont and Fletcher, Marlowe, Massinger, and others are greatly needed. The quartos of Ben Jonson's plays have never been carefully collated. It is barely a year ago since Mr. A. H. BULLEN discovered (and printed for private circulation) a tragic masterpiece by Fletcher and Massinger, and a sprightly comedy by Shirley, which were lying, in MS., unnoticed in the British Museum.

This newly-edited Edition will begin with Shakespeare's greatest predecessor, Christopher Marlowe, in three volumes.

An edition of Middleton will follow in the autumn; and Middleton will be succeeded by Shirley.

For Beaumont and Fletcher much time and labour will be required; but the Editor has already commenced the arduous task, and will give the closest attention to the question, "How far was Massinger concerned in the authorship of plays attributed to Beaumont and Fletcher?"

The remaining dramatists of this Period will follow in due order.

One of the chief features of this New Edition of the Elizabethan Dramatists, besides the handsome and handy size of the volumes, will be the fact that each Work will be carefully edited, and new notes given throughout.

Doctor Faustus.

213

Having commenced, be a Divine in show,
 Yet level at the end of every Art,
 And live and die in Aristotle's works.
 Sweet Analytics, 'tis thou hast ravished me,
Bene disserere est finis logices.
 Is to dispute well Logic's chiefest end?
 Affords this Art no greater miracle?
 Then read no more, thou hast attained the end ; 10
 A greater subject fitteth Faustus' wit :
 Bid *on cai me on*¹ farewell, Galen come,
 Seeing Ubi desinit Philosophus ibi incipit Medicus ;
 Be a physician, Faustus, heap up gold,
 And be eternised for some wondrous cure.
Summum bonum medicinæ sanitas,
 The end of physic is our body's health.
 Why, Faustus, hast thou not attained that end ?
 Is not thy common talk found² Aphorisms?³
 Are not thy bills⁴ hung up as monuments, 20
 Whereby whole cities have escaped the Plague,

¹ This is my own emendation. Ed. 1604 reads "Oncaymæon," which I take to be a corruption of the Aristotelian ὄν καὶ μὴ ὄν ("being and not being"). The later eds. give (with various spelling) "CEconomy," inserting the word "and" before "Galen." But "CEconomy," though retained by all the editors, is nonsense. With the substitution of i for y and e for æ, my emendation, which gives excellent sense, is a literal transcript of the reading of ed. 1604.

² So ed. 1616.—Eds. 1604, 1609, "sound."

³ Medical rules.

⁴ Prescriptions by which he had worked his cures. Professor Ward thinks the reference is rather to "the advertisements by which, as a migratory physician, he had been in the habit of announcing his advent, and perhaps his system of cures, and which were now 'hung up as monuments' in perpetuum."

Romances of Fantasy and Humour.

(Uniform with the Old Spanish and English Romances.)

To be completed in Twelve Volumes crown 8vo, cloth or parchment,
7s. 6d. per volume,

And Illustrated with Etchings by Eminent Artists.

The Tales and Poems of Edgar Allan Poe,

With Biographical Essay by JOHN H. INGRAM; and Fourteen Original Etchings, Three Photogravures, and a Portrait newly etched from a life-like Daguerreotype of the Author. In Four Volumes crown 8vo.

NOTE.—The type is distributed as the edition is printed, the impression of which is one thousand copies crown 8vo, and one hundred and fifty each large fine-paper copies, with Etchings on Japanese and Whatman paper. Specimen page of the text on opposite page.

Several new features in this collection of Edgar Poe's Tales and Poems claim attention. This is the first occasion on which the Tales can be said to have been illustrated, as it is also the first time in which any real attempt has been made to classify them.

A very important feature in this edition is the lengthy fragment, "The Journal of Julius Rodman." This romance will be quite new to Poe's admirers, as it has not appeared in any previous collection. Among the Poems, which have now been chronologically arranged, some new pieces will also be found. All the writings included in this edition have been thoroughly corrected and revised, and generally from their author's amended copies.

Attention may likewise be called to the circumstance that the Introductory Essay deals only with the facts, and quite ignores the numerous fictions of Poe's career.

Poe's Works will be followed in the autumn by Two Volumes of Fantastic Tales from the German of Hoffman, illustrated with Original Etchings by Ad. Lalauze; and at the same time the remaining volumes of the Series will be announced for publication in the following spring.

THE MAN THAT WAS USED UP.

409

men of the age. He was an especial favourite, too, with the ladies, chiefly on account of his high reputation for courage.

"In that point he is unrivalled, indeed he is a perfect desperado, a downright fire-eater, and no mistake," said my friend, here dropping his voice excessively low, and thrilling me with the mystery of his tone.

"A downright fire-eater, and no mistake. Showed that, I should say, to some purpose in the late tremendous swamp-fight away down South with the Bugaboo and Kickapoo Indians." [Here my friend opened his eyes to some extent.] "Bless my soul!—blood and thunder, and all that!—prodigies of valour!—heard of him of course?—you know he's the man"—

"Man alive, how do you do? why how are ye? very glad to see ye indeed!" here interrupted the General himself, seizing my companion by the hand as he drew near, and bowing stiffly but profoundly as I was presented. I then thought (and I think so still) that I never heard a clearer nor a stronger voice, nor beheld a finer set of teeth, but I must say that I was sorry for the interruption just at that moment as, owing to the whispers and insinuations aforesaid, my interest had been greatly excited in the hero of the Bugaboo and Kickapoo campaign.

However, the delightfully luminous conversation of Brevet Brigadier-General John A. B. C. Smith soon completely dissipated this chagrin. My friend leaving us immediately, we had quite a long tête-à-tête, and I was not only pleased but really instructed. I never heard a more fluent talker, or a man of greater general information. With becoming modesty he forbore, nevertheless, to touch upon the theme I had just then most at heart—I mean the mysterious circumstances

A Cursory History of Swearing.

By JULIAN SHARMAN.

Post 8vo, cloth, gilt top, price 7s. 6d.

"Ha! this fellow is worse than me; what, does he swear with pen and ink?"

THE TATLER.

Notes and Queries.

"A difficult task is accomplished with as much delicacy and taste as could well be expected. The 'History of Swearing' is, indeed, both philosophical and scholarly."

St. James' Gazette.

"Mr. Sharman has written a very interesting book on an ancient custom which is now falling into decline."

Scotsman.

"The book is one of great interest. Some curious facts are brought to light in it, and a good deal of industry on the part of Mr. Sharman is proved. The volume is admirably got up, and it is likely to take its place as one of those curious monographs which attain a high value in the book market."

The World.

"The account of 'The Scufflers' Club' is amusing, and there is much quaint lore and there are some good stories in Mr. Sharman's volume, which is, moreover, very well bound and printed—no slight advantage in a book of this class."

Bookseller.

"Throughout it is uniformly interesting and genial. There is a certain dash of kindly Bohemianism, and a broad, humanising feeling which gives a fine flavour to the book. Altogether it is both a curious and a pleasant production."

Glasgow Herald.

"To any one who cares to go into the matter, Mr. Sharman's book promises some reward, as he has there brought forward some very curious and interesting information."

Publishers' Circular.

"This quaintly but appropriately-titled volume takes us into a bypath of literary history, and from the early oath-taking, half pagan, half barbaric, down to all the modern varieties of the curse, he traces the growth and progress of the habit of using expressions which are so often sacred in their origin, although in modern parlance they have reached a secular if not a vicious platform. The appendix to the book contains some interesting documentary evidence on the matters dealt with in the preceding pages."

The History of England,

FROM THE FIRST INVASION BY THE ROMANS TO THE ACCESSION OF WILLIAM AND MARY IN 1688.

By JOHN LINGARD, D.D.

Copyright Edition, with Ten Etched Portraits. In Ten Vols. demy 8vo, cloth, £5, 5s.

This New Copyright Library Edition of "Lingard's History of England," besides containing all the latest notes and emendations of the Author, with Memoir, is enriched with Ten Portraits, newly etched by Damman, of the following personages, viz. :—Dr. Lingard, Edward I., Edward III., Cardinal Wolsey, Cardinal Pole, Elizabeth, James I., Cromwell, Charles II., James II.

The Times.

"No greater service can be rendered to literature than the republication, in a handsome and attractive form, of works which time and the continued approbation of the world have made classical. . . . The accuracy of Lingard's statements on many points of controversy, as well as the genial sobriety of his view, is now recognised."

The Tablet.

"It is with the greatest satisfaction that we welcome this new edition of Dr. Lingard's 'History of England.' It has long been a desideratum. . . . No general history of England has appeared which can at all supply the place of Lingard, whose painstaking industry and careful research have dispelled many a popular delusion, whose candour always carries his reader with him, and whose clear and even style is never fatiguing."

The Spectator.

"We are glad to see that the demand for Dr. Lingard's England still continues. Few histories give the reader the same impression of exhaustive study. This new edition is excellently printed, and illustrated with ten portraits of the greatest personages in our history."

Dublin Review.

"It is pleasant to notice that the demand for Lingard continues to be such that publishers venture on a well got-up library edition like the one before us. More than sixty years have gone since the first volume of the first edition was published; many equally pretentious histories have appeared during that space, and have more or less disappeared since, yet Lingard lives—is still a recognised and respected authority."

The Scotsman.

"There is no need, at this time of day, to say anything in vindication of the importance, as a standard work, of Dr. Lingard's 'History of England.' . . . Its intrinsic merits are very great. The style is lucid, pointed, and puts no strain upon the reader; and the printer and publisher have neglected nothing that could make this—what it is likely long to remain—the standard edition of a work of great historical and literary value."

Daily Telegraph.

"True learning, untiring research, a philosophic temper, and the possession of a graphic, pleasing style, were the qualities which the author brought to his task, and they are displayed in every chapter of his history."

Weekly Register.

"In the full force of the word a scholarly book. Lingard's History is destined to bear a part of growing importance in English education."

Manchester Examiner.

"He stands alone in his own school; he is the only representative of his own phase of thought. The critical reader will do well to compare him with those who went before and those who came after him."

Imaginary Conversations.By WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR.

In Five Vols. crown 8vo, cloth, 30s.

- FIRST SERIES—CLASSICAL DIALOGUES, GREEK AND ROMAN.
 SECOND SERIES—DIALOGUES OF SOVEREIGNS AND STATESMEN.
 THIRD SERIES—DIALOGUES OF LITERARY MEN.
 FOURTH SERIES—DIALOGUES OF FAMOUS WOMEN.
 FIFTH SERIES—MISCELLANEOUS DIALOGUES.

NOTE.—This New Edition is printed from the last Edition of his Works, revised and edited by John Forster, and is published by arrangement with the Proprietors of the Copyright of Walter Savage Landor's Works.

The Times.

"The abiding character of the interest excited by the writings of Walter Savage Landor, and the existence of a numerous band of votaries at the shrine of his refined genius, have been lately evidenced by the appearance of the most remarkable of Landor's productions, his 'Imaginary Conversations,' taken from the last edition of his works. To have them in a separate publication will be convenient to a great number of readers."

The Athenæum.

"The appearance of this tasteful reprint would seem to indicate that the present generation is at last waking up to the fact that it has neglected a great writer, and if so, it is well to begin with Landor's most adequate work. It is difficult to overpraise the 'Imaginary Conversations.' The eulogiums bestowed on the 'Conversations' by Emerson will, it is to be hoped, lead many to buy this book."

Scotsman.

"An excellent service has been done to the reading public by presenting to it, in five compact volumes, these 'Conversations.' Admirably printed on good paper, the volumes are handy in shape, and indeed the edition is all that could be desired. When this has been said, it will be understood what a boon has been conferred on the reading public; and it should enable many comparatively poor men to enrich their libraries with a work that will have an enduring interest."

Literary World.

"That the 'Imaginary Conversations' of Walter Savage Landor are not better known is no doubt largely due to their inaccessibility to most readers, by reason of their cost. This new issue, while handsome enough to find a place in the best of libraries, is not beyond the reach of the ordinary bookbuyer."

Edinburgh Review.

"How rich in scholarship! how correct, concise, and pure in style! how full of imagination, wit, and humour! how well informed, how bold in speculation, how various in interest, how universal in sympathy! In these dialogues—making allowance for every shortcoming or excess—the most familiar and the most august shapes of the past are reanimated with vigour, grace, and beauty. We are in the high and goodly company of wits and men of letters; of churchmen, lawyers, and statesmen; of party-men, soldiers, and kings; of the most tender, delicate, and noble women; and of figures that seem this instant to have left for us the Agora or the Schools of Athens, the Forum or the Senate of Rome."

The Sunshade, Muff, and Glove.

By OCTAVE UZANNE.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY PAUL AVRIL.

Royal 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 3rs. 6d.

NOTE.—The above are English Editions of the unique and artistic works "L'Eventail" and "L'Ombrelle," recently published in Paris, and now difficult to be procured, as no new Edition is to be produced. 500 copies only are printed.

Saturday Review.

"An English counterpart of the well-known French books by Octave Uzanne, with Paul Avril's charming illustrations."

Standard.

"It gives a complete history of fans of all ages and places; the illustrations are dainty in the extreme. Those who wish to make a pretty and appropriate present to a young lady cannot do better than purchase 'The Fan.'"

Athenæum.

"The letterpress comprises much amusing 'chit-chat,' and is more solid than it pretends to be. This brochure is worth reading; nay, it is worth keeping."

Art Journal.

"At first sight it would seem that material could never be found to fill even a volume; but the author, in dealing with his first subject alone, 'The Sunshade,' says he could easily have filled a dozen volumes of this emblem of sovereignty. The work is delightfully illustrated in a novel manner by Paul Avril, the pictures which meander about the work being printed in varied colours."

Daily News.

"The pretty adornments of the margin of these artistic volumes, the numerous ornamental designs, and the pleasant vein of the author's running commentary, render these the most attractive monographs ever published on a theme which interests so many enthusiastic collectors."

Glasgow Herald.

"'I have but collected a heap of foreign flowers, and brought of my own only the string which binds them together,' is the fitting quotation with which M. Uzanne closes the preface to his volume on woman's ornaments. The monograph on the sunshade, called by the author 'a little tumbled fantasy,' occupies fully one-half of the volume. It begins with a pleasant invented mythology of the parasol; glances at the sunshade in all countries and times; mentions many famous umbrellas; quotes a number of clever sayings. . . . To these remarks on the spirit of the book it is necessary to add that the body of it is a dainty marvel of paper, type, and binding; and that what meaning it has looks out on the reader through a hundred argus-eyes of many-tinted photogravures, exquisitely designed by M. Paul Avril."

Westminster Review.

"The most striking merit of the book is the entire appropriateness both of the letterpress and illustrations to the subject treated. M. Uzanne's style has all the airy grace and sparkling brilliancy of the petit instrument whose praise he celebrates; and M. Avril's drawings seem to conduct us into an enchanted world where everything but fans are forgotten."

The Fables of La Fontaine.

A REVISED TRANSLATION FROM THE FRENCH.

With 24 original full-page Etchings and Portrait by A. DELIERRE.

Super royal 8vo, half parchment elegant, gilt top, 3rs. 6d.

NOTE.—500 copies printed. Type distributed.

Athenæum.

"Mr. Nimmo has issued 'The Fables of La Fontaine,' with etchings by A. Delierre, who has designed and drawn them in a manner which is curiously in keeping with the date, and even with the taste, of La Fontaine. They are neatly delineated and prettily composed."

Bookseller.

"We are tempted to linger over these beautiful etchings; and how gratified will be the fortunate recipients of such a book, elegant as it is in style and workmanship, and embellished with drawings of the highest merit."

Spectator.

"This translation has the recommendation of being sufficiently easy and readable. The merits of the etchings with which it is illustrated are evident."

Art Journal.

"An admirable translation, founded on that of Robert Thompson; and the etchings which lighten this present edition are very good."

Daily News.

"The force and breadth of M. Delierre's etchings contrast favourably with the pretty feebleness which is apt to characterise the efforts of the etcher's needle when employed on book illustrations. The elegant simplicity of the vellum back and grey-green covers, with their decorative ornaments, is very pleasing to the eye."

Harper's Monthly.

"The happy rendering of the quaint and piquant fables, and the perfection with which the printer and binder have done their work, make the volume everything that could be desired."

Daily Telegraph.

"This beautiful edition of 'The Fables of La Fontaine,' which now appears in a form that is highly creditable to the publisher as well as to the printer, is enriched with etchings by Delierre, which are admirable alike for quality and appropriateness."

Westminster Review.

"A splendid edition of 'The Fables of La Fontaine,' with twenty-five original etchings by Delierre. Of these we cannot speak too highly, and select for special commendation the portrait of La Fontaine, the Heron, the Peacock, and the Ducks and Tortoise."

14 King William Street, Strand, London, W.C.

Types from Spanish Story;

OR,

THE OLD MANNERS AND CUSTOMS OF CASTILE.

By JAMES MEW.

With 36 Proof Etchings on Japanese paper by R. DE LOS RIOS.

Super royal 8vo, elegant and recherché Binding after the 18th Century, 31s. 6d.

The Times.

"It was a happy thought that of illustrating the most famous Spanish or Franco-Spanish romances with this blending of the real, the quaint, and the fantastic. The volume is a worthy key and companion to the most entertaining books of the witty authors who sprinkled their pages with the 'Spanish salt' that Richard Ford appreciated so thoroughly."

Daily Telegraph.

"Mr. James Mew displays both scholarship and geniality in his critical analyses of romances, and has invested them collectively with an additional interest. The etchings of Senor de los Rios enrich the book in such a manner as to make it a picture-gallery in boards. Indeed the cover itself is like the exterior of a graceful edifice, designed as a storehouse of art."

Athenæum.

"The etchings have considerable spirit, richness of handling, tone, and other picturesque qualities."

Glasgow Herald.

"The illustrative story essays have been selected chiefly from books which may be taken to represent the classic literature of romance in Spain. The idea is a good one, and has been industriously worked out, the result being the present handsome volume."

Standard.

"The etchings are charming alike in drawing and execution, and afford an admirable illustration of manners and customs in Spain in the days of Don Quixote. The printing and get up are worthy of the illustrations."

Scotsman.

"It is a volume which ought to be greatly prized because of its illustrations. It is in all respects handsome."

Publishers' Circular.

"A right grateful book to take up from a drawing-room table for half an hour. Its chapters equal in number its illustrations, each of which is a genuine piece of art work. The binding is a choice and appropriate bit of colouring."

A Handbook of Gastronomy

(BRILLAT-SAVARIN'S "Physiologie du Goût").

New and Complete Translation, with 52 original Etchings by

A. LALAUZE.

Printed on China Paper.

8vo, half parchment, gilt top, 42s.

NOTE.—300 copies printed, and each numbered. Type distributed.
(Out of print.)

The Times.

"The translator's notes are interesting and scholarly; and M. Lalauze's etchings are so prettily executed, that they form quite an attractive gallery of bijou pictures."

The Athenæum.

"A new and complete translation of Brillat-Savarin's 'Physiologie du Goût,' former editions of this piquant work being more or less incomplete. The translation is lively, clear, and practically exact. No man who likes his dinner ought to dine without having read this book at least once. The vignettes and culs-de-lampe are charming, and the only cause for regret is that fifty-two is not half so many as we could have welcomed."

Daily Telegraph.

"A numbered edition of the 'Physiologie du Goût,' translated afresh into English, and illustrated with upwards of fifty Etchings by Lalauze. It is a volume for connoisseurs."

The Saturday Review.

"The translation is a decidedly good one. The paper is splendid, and taken as a whole the work has been well done. Therefore we would say, read 'A Handbook of Gastronomy,' and as Brillat-Savarin himself would put it, 'You will see something wonderful.'"

Scotsman.

"The excellence of this volume depends not only upon the goodness of the translation of Savarin's book—it is all that could be desired—but upon the general beauty of its get up, and its illustrations by Lalauze."

Illustrated London News.

"One of the most sumptuous books of the season is the 'Handbook of Gastronomy,' being a new translation of Brillat-Savarin's 'Physiologie du Goût.' The English translation has been executed with the minutest care and the most thorough appreciativeness. Among its charms, with its handsome paper, uncut edges, and 'river of type running through a meadow of margin,' are the fifty-two exquisite illustrative etchings by A. Lalauze, printed on China paper in the text."

Glasgow Herald.

"In every respect a dainty volume, and replete with excellent matter throughout."

The Complete Angler;

OR,

THE CONTEMPLATIVE MAN'S RECREATION,
of IZAAK WALTON and CHARLES COTTON.

Edited by JOHN MAJOR.

A New Edition, with 8 original Etchings (2 Portraits and 6 Vignettes), two impressions of each, one on Japanese and one on Whatman paper; also, 74 Engravings on Wood, printed on China Paper throughout the text.

Svo, cloth or half parchment elegant, gilt top, 31s. 6d.

NOTE.—500 copies printed. (Out of print.)

The Times.

"Mr. Nimmo, who seems resolved to take a leading place in the production of attractive volumes, has now issued a beautiful edition of Walton and Cotton's 'Angler.' The paper and printing leave nothing to be desired, and the binding is very tasteful."

The Field.

"As works of art Mr. Tourrier's etchings are admirable, and the printers and publishers have done their work admirably. . . A very handsome book, and one which will form a satisfactory present to many an angler."

Daily Telegraph.

"To the grand numerical monuments of this book's universal popularity is now added a sumptuous reprint of the 1844 edition, with eight brilliant etchings. The woodcuts, fresh and beautiful, are gems of an art now endangered by modern requirements of haste. This volume, so carefully reprinted, is a choice and welcome addition to the piscatorial library."

Athenæum.

"A more beautiful copy of the book all fishermen delight to honour could hardly be desired by the most exacting angler. There is no more luxurious mode of illustrating a book than by etchings, and these of Tourrier are delightful. His 'Hawking' is especially good."

Saturday Review.

"A handsome and handy edition of Walton and Cotton. Well bound, well printed, and well illustrated."

14 King William Street, Strand, London, W.C.

A HANDSOME LARGE FINE PAPER EDITION OF
The Works of William Hickling Prescott.

In 15 Volumes 8vo, cloth (not sold separately), 25s. per vol.

With 30 Portraits printed on India paper.

Athenæum.

"In point of style Prescott ranks with the ablest English historians, and paragraphs may be found in his volumes in which the grace and elegance of Addison are combined with Robertson's majestic cadence and Gibbon's brilliancy."

J. Lothrop Motley.

"Wherever the English language is spoken over the whole earth his name is perfectly familiar. We all of us know what his place was in America. But I can also say that in eight years (1851-59) passed abroad I never met a single educated person of whatever nation that was not acquainted with his fame, and hardly one who had not read his works. No living American name is so widely spread over the whole world."

In 3 vols. post 8vo, cloth, price 50s.

Rector of St. Edmund, King and Martyr, Lombard Street.

With Ten Illustrations by J. P. LAURENS, etched by LEOPOLD FLAMENG.

Crown 8vo, cloth or parchment boards, 10s. 6d.

Scotsman.

"We have not seen a more beautiful edition of 'The Imitation of Christ' than this one for many a day."

Magazine of Art.

"This new edition of the 'Imitation' may fairly be regarded as a work of art. It is well and clearly printed; the paper is excellent; each page has its peculiar border, and it is illustrated with ten etchings. Further than that the translation is Mr. Benham's we need say nothing more."

14 King William Street, Strand, London, W.C.

Old Spanish Romances.

The Times.

"This prettily printed and prettily illustrated collection of Spanish Romances deserve their welcome from all students of seventeenth century literature."

Daily Telegraph.

"A handy and beautiful edition of the works of the Spanish masters of romance. . . . We may say of this edition of the immortal work of Cervantes that it is most tastefully and admirably executed, and that it is embellished with a series of striking etchings from the pen of the Spanish artist De los Rios."

Scotsman.

"Handy in form, they are well printed from clear type, and are got up with much elegance; the etchings are full of humour and force. The reading public have reason to congratulate themselves that so neat, compact, and well arranged an edition of romances that can never die is put within their reach. The publisher has spared no pains with them."

Saturday Review.

"Mr. Nimmo has just brought out a series of Spanish prose works in twelve finely got-up volumes."

“Among the numerous handsome reprints which the publishers of the day vie with each other in producing, we have seen nothing of greater merit than this series of twelve volumes. Those who have read these masterpieces of the last century in the homely garb of the old editions may be gratified with the opportunity of perusing them with the advantages of large clear print and illustrations of a quality which is rarely bestowed on such re-issues. The series deserves every commendation.”

Athenæum.

"A well-printed and tasteful issue of the 'Thousand and One Nights.' The volumes are convenient in size, and illustrated with Lalauze's well-known etchings."

Magazine of Art.

"The text of the new four-volume edition of the 'Thousand and One Nights' just issued by Mr. Nimmo is that revised by Jonathan Scott, from the French of Galland; it presents the essentials of these wonderful stories with irresistible authority and directness, and, as mere reading, it is as satisfactory as ever. The edition, which is limited to a thousand copies, is beautifully printed and remarkably well produced. It is illustrated with twenty etchings by Lalauze. . . . In another volume of this series Beckford's wild and gloomy 'Vathek' appears side by side with Johnson's admirable 'Rasselas.'"

Glasgow Herald.

"The merits of this new issue lie in exquisite clearness of type; completeness; notes and biographical notices, short and pithy; and a number of very fine etchings and portraits. In the 'Robinson Crusoe,' besides the well-known portrait of Defoe by Flameng, there are eight exceedingly beautiful etchings by Mouilleron. . . . In fine keeping with the other volumes of the series, uniform in style and illustrations, and as one of the volumes of his famous Old English Romances, Mr. Nimmo has also issued the 'Rasselas' of Johnson and the 'Vathek' of Beckford."

Westminster Review.

"Mr. Nimmo has added to his excellent series of 'Old English Romances' three new volumes, of which two are devoted to 'Tristram Shandy,' while the third contains 'The Old English Baron' and 'The Castle of Otranto.' Take them as they stand, and without attributing to them any qualities but what they really possess, the whole series was well worth reprinting in the elegant and attractive form in which they are now presented to us."

The American Patent Portable Book-Case.

For Students, Barristers, Home Libraries, &c.

THIS Book-case will be found to be made of very solid and durable material, and of a neat and elegant design. The shelves may be adjusted for books of any size, and will hold from 150 to 300 volumes. As it requires neither nails, screws, or glue, it may be taken to pieces in a few minutes, and reset up in another room or house, where it would be inconvenient to carry a large frame.

Full Height, 5 ft. 11½ in. ; Width, 3 ft. 8 in. ; Depth of Shelf, 10½ in.

Black Walnut, price £6, 6s. nett.

“The accompanying sketch illustrates a handy portable book-case of American manufacture, which Mr. NIMMO has provided. It is quite different from an ordinary article of furniture, such as upholsterers inflict upon the public, as it is designed expressly for holding the largest possible number of books in the smallest possible amount of space. One of the chief advantages which these book-cases possess is the ease with which they may be taken apart and put together again. No nails or metal screws are employed, nothing but the hand is required to dismantle or reconstruct the case. The parts fit together with mathematical precision; and, from a package of boards of very moderate dimensions, a firm and substantial book-case can be erected in the space of a few minutes. Appearances have by no means been overlooked; the panelled sides, bevelled edges, and other simple ornaments, give to the cases a very neat and tasteful look. For students, or others whose occupation may involve frequent change of residence, these book-cases will be found most handy and desirable, while, at the same time, they are so substantial, well-made, and convenient, that they will be found equally suitable for the library at home.”
